Well time flies right along and has made many changes so I will change the subject. I am at my old job again making squash pies. So far this fall I have made 32. I am going to try and keep track of how many I make this year. I expect it will be a great many for we raised lots of squashes and my folks never seem to get tired of them but sometimes when I go by that big pile of squashes it makes me "tired" to think how many times I must roll pie crust for all of them. But there will be only a few at a time so I won't worry. Best wishes to all from

MA OF GREEN GABLES

FRIENDS

Dear Editor and Corner Members: Speaking of Friends, it was a wise man who said, "God save me from my friends." Our best friends are those who tell us of our mistakes. A person is known by the company he keeps, or (in other words) the company he keeps out of. Life has many anguishes, but perhaps the sharpest of all is the anguish of which nobody knows. Certain parts of life are inexpressible, and every soul has a world of its own in which there can be no reporter's footprints. Be careful in choosing your associates, never make friends (acquaintances perhaps would be the better word) with those whose language, habits or general conduct you would be ashamed to see or hear in your own home. If you do you are sure to be the sufferer. The person of low taste is much less likely to be benefitted by your superior example than you are to be degraded to his level. If you cannot find the right kind of associates, the kind that will make you better and nobler, be sufficient with yourself. Live with your books, and the worthies of all time who are so willing to give you through their pages a friendship greater than that of kings.

Remember that it is as divine a thing to be a good friend, as it is to have a good friend.

Amy: I have looked over the Nation-Preceptor to find the poem you wanted and would gladly send it in, but I can't find it. Hope you will be able to get it. I am sending my recipe for Coffee Cake: 1 cup molasses, 1 cup coffee sugar, 1 cup strong coffee, 1-2 cup butter, 1 egg, 1 level teaspoon each of cinnamon, cloves, and allspice, 1-2 teaspoon soda. Fruit to taste, the more the better. This makes a good Thanksgiving cake. Two loaves.

SURPRISED AT PACKER TODAY

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It has been a long time since I wrote to the Corner. This being a beautiful morning I thought I would send a few lines.

Aunt Jerusha: I wish you would send those slips you brought me last spring. All have blossomed several times, and were just lovely. Thanks to you.

A few weeks ago some friends took me for a ride. It was just lovely. We went up through the country from where I live, around over Butts' bridge, then on in to Packer (years ago called Packerville). There we stopped, at the Post Office. My friends made themselves known to your daughter. I was surprised to see what a change had taken place in that once pretty village. It hardly seemed real, for when I used to to drive to Packer years ago, it was a very pretty place. But now nothing seems to be there. The store and tenements are empty, windows broken, and doors gone. The once pretty Packer house now stands empty, a picture of neglect and desertion. This was my first visit in Packer in 30 years, so you can imagine how surprised I was.

Pollyanna: Where are you? Don't you write to the Corner any more? I wish I could see you.

Grandma Gray: I was very glad to meet you, and wished I could have stayed longer. Had a nice ride home. Had a little trouble with Lizzie for when we got to the hill, she started doing the Charleston. I don't dare write too much, until you find out who's who. Best wishes to all

MORE RECIPES FROM ECLIPSE

Dear Social Corner Editor, Sisters, and Readers: As usual at this time of year, I have been very busy with fall house cleaning and canning. Have not finished all of either yet still have quinces to can. I'm too busy to stop and write during the day and too tired to think when it came night, so as I have a little leisure today thought I would send a little message for the Corner page.

All the letters are so very interesting, telling of wonderful trips, parties, receptions and so many nice recipes.

Carol: I am very glad you liked the cold ripe tomato pickle recipe. It is fine with baked beans. The recipe which you sent in your letter to the Corner for Spanish pickle is very much like one I have, only I add shredded cabbage to the other ingredients. It is very fine indeed.

All these preserves and relishes do taste so good, especially when winter comes and it is not easy to get the regular variety of green vegetables for the table, and fruits in their natural state.

Grape Conserve: 2 1-2 pounds grapes, 2 cups sugar, 1-2 pound raisins. Juice and grated rind of one orange, 1 cup of nut meats. First skin the grapes, raisins, grated orange rind, sugar, and 1-4 cup of ground nut meats in another kettle to boil. When the pulp of the grapes is well cooked strain and skin it with the skins. Boil all together until it begins to thicken, then add the orange juice, and balance of nut meats, just broken or cut small at the very last when it is thick enough to put into glasses.

Carrot Marmalade: Boil 4 or 5 carrots until tender, put through the food chopper enough to fill two cups. Squeeze the juice of 1 lemon and one orange put the pulp and rind through the food chopper. Save the juice separate, then place carrot, lemon and orange pulp in a kettle and cover with water and let boil until tender, after which add the orange and lemon juice. Then measure. To each cup of fruit add a cup of sugar, and boil until it thickens or jells. While hot fill it into hot glasses and seal.

Canned Beets: Boil beets until tender in salt water then pack into jars, and pour over them a syrup made in the following way: 1 cups vinegar, 2 tablespoons sugar, 1 cup water. This is enough for 2 pint jars. Boil about 5 minutes and turn onto the beets in the hot jars. If small use whole beets; if larger cut in quarters or to suit your own ideas. Perhaps many of you sisters have tried all these recipes, but it is just possible they may be new to some reader.

Greetings to all shut-ins and sympathy to all in trouble.

And Hallowe'en greetings and best wishes to all from

ECLIPSE.

CLUB NO. 2 MAKES ANOTHER CHANGE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I just want to tell the sisters of club No. 2 that we will hold our meetings at the Buckingham Memorial hereafter, on the second Tuesday of the month. We have made the change on account of the dishes.

When the sisters come a long way they do not want to be bothered with dishes, hence the change. And I hope that the sisters from the other clubs will visit us and we will do our best to make you feel at home. We had a lovely time Wednesday and a plenty of everything to eat, Brother Willey told Calla Lily and me that if the time came and we wanted to come back to Odd Fellows' hall, we certainly could, so we left with no ill feelings.

A number of club No. 2 would have liked to visit club No. 5 at different times so now here is the chance. Let us all go on Dec. 1 and extend the right hand of fellowship to all and on Dec. 14 come one and all to club No. 2. You will all find a warm welcome. But don't forget something to eat.

Crimson Rambler: Where art thou?

Maple Leaf: I was so glad to see you.

True Blue: Hope you receive many cards the 12th.

Calla Lily: You too are sweet 16 on the 25th. You and I are almost twins.

Hoping club No. 2 members will get busy with their pens. I will sign off

WETONA.

TESTED RECIPES

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I think you will enjoy all of my recipes you try for I never send in a recipe but what has been thoroughly tried.

Fruit Rennet: (very common in France) Warm one quart of milk to blood heat, and stir in a teaspoon of rennet. Fill cups three-quarters, and let cool. Before serving, fill up the cups with stewed or crushed berries and cover with whipped cream, when the rennet is served without fruit, a little nutmeg should be grated over the top.

Angel Gingerbread: 1 tablespoon shortening creamed with 1-2 cup sugar, 1-4 cup molasses in which 1 dissolve 1 teaspoon soda. 1 beaten egg, pinch salt, 1-2 teaspoon cinnamon and a small 1-4 teaspoon ginger, 1 round cup sifted flour, lastly 1-2 cup boiling water. Batter will be thin, but that makes it thin and moist. Bake in a moderate oven about 30 minutes.

Bean Chowder: 1 pint navy beans, 1-2 pound salt pork, 1 quart can tomatoes, 1-2 pint corn beef stock, 2 medium sized onions, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon sugar.

Soak the beans over night in a quart of boiling water, containing 1 1-2 teaspoons of baking soda. Drain, rinse thoroughly and put into a kettle containing a quart of water and 1-2 pint of cornbeef stock with the pork cut in dice and the onion thinly sliced. Boil gently for 4 1-2 hours, replenishing the water as it boils away. Then add the tomatoes, pepper, salt and sugar, and simmer about 45 minutes longer.

HILLSIDE.

GREETINGS FROM JOAN

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I was pleased to read so many good letters last Saturday.

Effie M: Thank you for telling us of Betty T's birthday.

Pisces: You say you have some old songs. Please send to the Corner the one, "Wake Nicodemus." How well I remember when it used to be sung.

Cretia: I, too, am anxious to know who "Kookie" is. Am thinking "he" had help to find out who I am. Guess its a brother instead of a sister.

Amy: The flowers you gave me kept nearly a week. They were lovely.

L. T. H.: Received the box O. K. Our letters met somewhere. Never mind you'll hear from me again soon.

Best wishes,

JOAN.

MRS. HEMANS' POEMS

Dear Social Corner: I noticed in one of the Social Corner letters this week, a request for Mrs. Hemans' poems. I have a book which was published 1880. The name of it is the Song of Affections.

Some of Mrs. Hemans poems are A Spirit's Return, The Indian With His Dead Child, The Image in the Heart and The Land of Dreams.

I do not find the poem Iola mentioned but will send one of her short poems.

A SOCIAL CORNER READER.

YELLOW JACKET IN CORNER

Dear Social Corner Editor: I attended the Social Corner meeting held at Grange hall in North Stonington and had a most enjoyable time. I am anxious to become a member of the Corner and ask you to enroll my name as one. I will take for my pen name Yellow Jacket" and hope I have not used one already chosen. Best wishes for the corner.

YELLOW JACKET.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: I have read the Social Corner letters and found them very interesting and helpful. I know some of its members and would like to become a member of the Corner and the Shore Line club and have a pin. Will take for my pen name.

ENTRE NOUS.

CLUB NO. 2 CHANGES HALL AND DATE

Dear Corner Sisters: No doubt you members of club No. 2 who did not attend the November meeting will be surprised at the contents of this letter and wonder if it is so or a joke to take. It is correct news. On account of the inconvenience of carrying dishes to use at the dinner table, our Sister Wetona went out and hired another hall where they rent dishes with the hall, so on Dec. 14, and each second Tuesday in each month, club No. 2 will meet in Buckingham Memorial. We have changed our day to the second Tuesday as that gives members of clubs No. 1, 3, 4, 5 and 6 a chance to visit other clubs and come to club No. 2. I think this will be entirely satisfactory to those of club No. 2 who were not present Wednesday, as it was to the 54 members and visitors present. I think you will all thank Wetona for her time in getting the Buckingham Memorial so as not to be bothered with carrying dishes as so many use that day for mid-week shopping in these days of the cash and carry system. Kindly spread the news of the date and change of hall. Mr. Willey has said anytime we wished the Social Corner could have the rooms if they should want them. We all feel as if the change of day to the second Tuesday in the month will be well chosen to suit all. Please don't blame this move to

ABOUT 70 AT CLUB NO. 2's MEETING

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: This beautiful morning thought I would just say a few words. How are all the sisters far and near? Hope they are all well. I was at the meeting Wednesday of Club, No. 2 and had a fine time. There were a good many (about 70) there, lots of good things to eat and lots to spare. There was singing, dancing, readings also a duet by Black Eyed Susie and Joan, and music from another sister. I think they all had a good time for I know I did.

Pisces: I think your letter fine and the old songs that you put in just made me think of home. It at won't be too much trouble will you send me "I'll remember you love in my prayers"?

True Blue: My flowers are fine today and they look so pretty. Many thanks for them. I hope all the sisters whose birthdays are this month will have lots of presents, and also have a lovely Thanksgiving dinner. I hope all who have been sick and the shut-ins are all well I feel pretty good it I could only see a little better, but I have lots of faith and perhaps I will see good some day. With best wishes to all the Social Corner Sisters. I will ring off for I think I hear some calling.

WANTS MINCE MEAT RECIPE WITHOUT CIDER

To the Social Corner Sisters: About one year ago one of the sisters sent in a recipe for mine meat without cider. The recipe called for vinegar. It was one of the best I ever used, and I have kept house 50 years. I cut it out of the Corner page and have loaned it, but it was never returned. Can't seem to remember who sent it. I would appreciate it very much if some one would send in such a recipe. I am not a Social Corner sister, but never fail to read everything on the page. As we have a friend who loans us the Courier hope to hear soon as we will be getting our holiday menu ready soon.

Most sincerely,

MARTHA WALKER.

DRIVING AND CALLING

Dear Social Corner Sisters: This has been a beautiful day and Stranger in the City and I went driving and calling on neighbors. Spent a couple of hours with Wheeler, We-us and Yellow Jacket and had a dandy time.

While there I was shown an old fashion loom and its owner weaving a handsome rag rug. I was much interested in it as I had never seen one before.

Another thing was a handsome flock of turkeys, bronze, bifna swing and yellow ones. I never saw so many at one time.

I must mention the fact of having a delightful time at the Social Corner dinner the 12th also the one in April a fine dinner was served. The tables fairly groaned under the weight of the variety of good things. The carrots made from cheese was a cute idea.

Lucille Drew with her assistant gave us a very fine program. The readings, piano solo, duets and a dance by little Beverly Gray was very entertaining. I hope to be with you all again in the near future.

Wheeler, We-us and Yellow Jacket: We arriver home before the young son came in from school. We sure did have dandy time with you.

Hoot Owl: I would try that delicious orange layer cake if I knew how many eggs it requires.

Must close now but here to see Yellow Jacket's letter in soon.

Best wishes to all the Cornerites.

PRAIRIE CHICKEN. (Aug. 11.)

POACHED SALMON

Dear Social Corner Members: Do you ever cook salmon and have you tried poached salmon? Here is a recipe you will like.

Poached Salmon: Two pounds salmon in thick slices, 1-3 cup shrimps cut in pieces, 1-3 cup cream, 3 cups milk, 4 tablespoons flour, 1 cup cooked green peas, 1 egg yolk, salt and paprika, 1 tablespoon butter, 2 tablespoons olive oil, 1 tablespoon lemon juice.

Remove skin from salmon and put in a shallow pan, cover with boiling salted water, and when it comes to a boil draw it back and let simmer gently 15 to 20 minutes. Scald the milk. Heat oil, stir in flour, cook together, then add hot milk all at once and beat vigorously until very smooth; then add shrimps, peas and seasonings. Add the cream and beaten egg yolk and stir well. Remove salmon to hot platter; when sauce is ready to boil draw aside and beat in the egg yolk. Pour sauce over poached salmon and serve at once.

Try it and report.

MAKING BLANKETS LONGER

Dear Social Corner Friends: Wednesday, and such a lovely day for the meetings of Clubs 3 and 5 in Norwich. I presume our own club No. 6

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

EMMERGRUEN GUARDS

The Emmergruen Guards held their regular meeting Monday night. It was voted that the guard team will parade Armistice day, Nov. 11, 1926. After the regular meeting the guard held a birthday surprise on Mrs. H. Rossoll.

Mr. Schubert, captain, in behalf of the guards presented Mrs. Rossoll a bouquet of cut flowers for which she responded with thanks.

Games and dancing were enjoyed. Coffee, sandwiches, cake and fruit were served by Mrs. J. Gresser, Mrs. E. Braun, Mrs. A. Schaffhauser. The party broke up at a late hour wishing Mrs. Rossoll many happy returns of the day.

PATRONS OF HUSBANDRY

Norwich grange, No. 172, will have neighbors' night in its lecturer's hour at its meeting next week in Steiner hall. Groton, Pachaug, Putnam, North Stonington and Colchester granges are to be the guests at the meeting, each to furnish two numbers on the programme. Neighbors' nights always attract large attendances at the grange meetings and are social events to which the members eagerly look forward to.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS

Buckingham council, No. 14, held its weekly meeting Wednesday evening with Vice Councilor Floyd Pierce presiding. A fair sized crowd attended and after the meeting pinochle and whist were enjoyed. The meeting for next Wednesday night will start at 7 o'clock sharp so that the Brothers can have more time to enjoy themselves at pinochle. This with other enjoyment is probably why the attendance is gaining weekly. Some very interesting subjects are brought up in the council meetings, and those who fail to attend regularly are missing something worth while.

The Buckingham No. 14 degree team noted for its splendid work is preparing to put on some A-1 work due to the gains in membership of this council.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

Mercier assembly, No. 12, has arranged that all members who wish to obtain their chrysanthemums and vines for the Armistice day parade may do so next Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock at the meeting rooms on Broadway. The assembly is anticipating a very large turnout by its members for the parade.

VETERANS OF FOREIGN WARS

The R. E. Hourigan post has received a supply of booklets, pertaining to the reasons for America's veterans to join the "Gold Stripe Organization," the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. It is composed by Comrade J. I. Billiman of Kansas City and gives in part, the reasons for a business man to join the ranks of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of U. S.

1. I like that word Comrade. To me it means more than brother and but little less than love. It brings back memories of grim gray transports; camps pitched on foreign shores; weary hikes; nights in the trenches and unforgettable days on bloody battlefields. Every man in the V. F. W. feels like I do about this. Every member, "speaks my language." Men who are not eligible, cannot understand the Veteran language.

2. I believe in stability. I prefer to buy from a manufacturer with a record of stability and permanence. The V. F. W. has twenty-seven years of splendid history to its credit, and is today, younger, bigger, and better than ever before.

3. I do not like explaining my war record continually. The man who wears the "Beautiful Cross of Malta," in his lapel, has nothing to explain. He is set apart by that fact from all others.

4. I want to see the ideals for which I work carried on when I am gone. It would grieve me to work for a Veteran Order which must die with my generation. Already, thousands of Veterans of Foreign Wars, are working by my side, who were not, yet born, when the society was organized, and I like to think, that the work will be "carried on," by other Comrades, long after I have answered the "Last Roll Call."

5. I do not believe a Veteran order should concern itself with religious, political or labor controversies. During all the years of its history the V. F. W. has consistently refrained from such action, and has never lost sight of its first great object—to look after the Veteran, his widow and his orphans; and to preserve the reminiscences of camp and field, beyond our native land. I believe I owe a duty, to my Comrades, and I know of no more logical way, of discharging it, than in the V. F. W. It helps in my daily work, to look upon the Cross of Malta, in my lapel, and to remember what it means to me as a man, and as a citizen.

I believe in the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the U. S. Because of its constructive leadership, its fine ideals, its stirring history, and because it binds into hallowed comradeship, "America's Old Guard," the men who have fought her battles in foreign lands, and on foreign waters, during seventy years of campaigning. The Golden Age of American Chivalry.

J. I. BILLIMAN.

If you served in the army, navy or marine corps of the U. S. on foreign soil, or in hostile waters in any war, insurrection or expedition, for which the government issues a campaign badge, or service clasp, you are eligible to join, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars extends you the hand of comradeship to the Gold Stripe Organization.

MOOSEHEART LEGION

In consideration of the fact that the next regular meeting of Mooseheart Legion would occur on Armistice day, which will be such a busy day and night in Norwich, the legion has decided to have its meeting next week on Tuesday evening. A good sized attendance is looked for as there is important business to be taken care of.

ODD FELLOWS

The regular meeting of Shetucket lodge, No. 27 was held in Odd Fellows hall, Tuesday evening, with Noble Grand Hazen Jones presiding, and the initiatory degree was worked on a class of candidates. Past Grand Waters, chairman of the Armistice day committee, reported that plans for the parade were proceeding nicely, and it was expected that there will be a 100 per cent turnout of Odd Fellows in Norwich and vicinity.

The Stonington band has been secured for the parade. The grand encampment, at its annual session held in Mystic recently accepted the invitation of the local Odd Fellows to parade, and many lodges in surrounding cities and towns have accepted invitations to be present, including New London Williamntic, Danielson, Putnam, Montville, Mystic and others. It is the desire of the committee that every Odd Fellow in Norwich, whether a member of the local bodies or not, be present and participate in the parade.

A chowder is to be served to the members, at the rooms after the parade, and there is to be a dance for them and their guests in the evening.

Past Grand A. H. Perry announced that on Nov. 18 there will be an open night, for members of Shetucket lodge and their friends. An entertainment is to be provided and a mighty good time is assured for all attending, as Brother Perry's talents in this line are well known.

The evening closed with several hotly contested pinochle games by the local embryo champions in that art.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS.

On Tuesday evening, this week, Clara Barton tent, No. 7, gave a supper to the department inspector, department officers and members of Willimantic, Mystic, Danielson and New London tents, local Sons of Veterans and Sedgwick post, No. 4, G. The regular meeting was held immediately following the supper with the president, Miss Gladys B. Newbury, presiding. At this time, Mrs. Minnie Matthieu, the department inspector, conducted the annual inspection. Department President Mrs. Mary E. Yale and members of her staff were present as guests. Seven candidates were initiated into the tent. An invitation was received and accepted from Mary Todd Lincoln tent, No. 15, of Willimantic, to be their guests on Nov. 19th at a supper followed by their regular meeting. At this time the officers for the new year were nominated. The meeting closed in the usual form with salute to the flag and singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

EAGLES.

Norwich aerie, No. 367, held its regular meeting Monday night at the home on Cliff street. The pinochle committee reported that Wednesday, Nov. 10, will be ladies' night. Pinochle and whist will be played and refreshments will be served by the committee. The committee on Armistice day reported that a large delegation of Eagles is expected from Putnam and New London aeries to participate in the celebration of Armistice day. The committee on class initiation reported progress on the big time for the Thanksgiving eve celebration and class initiation.

ORDER OF PROTECTOIN.

Slater lodge, No. 809, held its regular meeting in Hickey's hall, Montville, Tuesday evening, Nov. 2, with a large attendance. Deputy Grand Warden Hilda Harrington installed the officers for the coming year as follows:

COMPANIONS OF THE FOREST.

Nevins Carver circle, No. 1285, held its regular meeting at Buckingham Memorial on Monday evening, Nov. 1, at 8 o'clock, with a large attendance. The meeting was called to order by Past Chief Companion E. Hoelck.

A good sum was realized from the whist and pinochle held by the Companions on October 13th. The Companions are planning to hold a dance at Odd Fellows' hall for the fourth anniversary of the Nevins Carver circle. The dance committee being M. Comire, V. Bolduc, T. Watters and A. Clendinnin, with E. Hoelck, chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Hutchinson left Wednesday for their winter home in Florida at Winter Haven.

Mrs. William Palmer is in New York for a few days.

Growing Scalp Skin

To grow new skin on a damaged scalp, an Illinois doctor has resurrected the method of boring slight holes into the skull with a bone drill. This method was used back in 1777 by a Philadelphia doctor named Vance, who had a patient who had been scalped by Indians. His wound had all healed, except the middle portion, which was bare bone, and which showed no signs of improving. Vance took a shoe-makers awl and bored numerous holes through the outer table of the skull. He quit boring when a reddish fluid appeared. In his account of the case following operation, he said that "after a time proud flesh appeared to rise in these holes," and he further stated that the wound "skun over slow."

Air Safety Code

After five years of preparation by a technical committee of 50 engineering experts the completion of a standard American aeronautic safety code has been announced by H. M. Crane of the Society of Automotive Engineers. The automotive engineers and the Bureau of Standards sponsored the project.

The main features of the new safety code regulate traffic in the air, govern "trick" flying over crowds and cities, make definite safety rules in airplane constructions and, prescribe rigorous physical tests for would-be aviators.

Mr. Crane explained that the code was formulated as a basis for possible legislative enactment. "If the department of commerce takes over the control of commercial aviation it is almost certain to use this code, inasmuch as its own bureau of standards took the initiative in framing it," Mr. Crane said.

Warning that individual safety codes by each of the states would only be a hindrance to commercial aviation, Mr. Crane said the drafting of the code marked "the first time that any industry was so far in advance of legislation as to have its own plan."

The completed code is contained in a booklet of 52 closely printed pages with more than 1,000 separate items.

"Living Fossils"

Two new species of cycads, a family of tropical plants that have been characterized as "living fossils" because they represent remnants of the great extinct flora of the coal ages, are described in the Botanical Gazette by Professor Charles J. Chamberlain of the University of Chicago. One was dug up by Prof. Chamberlain near the town of Tuxtepec, Mexico, and the other was raised from a seed which he collected in the dense tropical growth near Jalapa. He notes that in this place, he found, among other interesting plants, a species of begonia with leaves more than a yard across. Though the ancestors of the cycads formed important parts of the coal age forests, and thus, though now extinct, are still of great economic importance, the living cycads have little commercial use. They are employed chiefly as ballroom decorations and in the making of funeral wreaths, for though they are more nearly related to pines and spruces than to any other familiar plants of the temperate regions their foliage is more or less like that of palm trees.

NEW LONDON MAN REGRETS BATTING YOUTH IN LOVE WITH HIS DAUGHTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 6—Joseph Micelli, a business man on Bank street has come to the conclusion that "love will find a way" so he has withdrawn his opposition to the marriage of his daughter and Thomas Romano. On the 21st of October Mr. Micelli allowed his passion to override his judgment when he learned that his daughter, whom he had forbidden to receive attention from Romano, was in the company of the young man on Montauk avenue. Micelli obtained a club and coming upon the young pair near the Nameaug school, he struck Romano a blow with the stick that knocked him unconscious and sent him to the hospital for a long stay.

Micelli appears to have regretted what he did and has secured from Romano a written statement that he did not care to prosecute Micelli. Today when the case was heard in the police court Romano did not appear and the assault complaint was disposed of by a fine of $50. The young lovers are now to be married.

GEO. BATES AIMS REVOLVER AT HIS WIFE EFFIE BATES

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 5—(AP)—George Bates, an Indian, took home a load of liquor internally this morning about 5 o'clock when he returned with Effie, his wife. This pair has often figured in court, but today the offense was of a most serious nature. George aroused the police with revolver shots. He aimed at Effie, but she ducked into an alley way and escaped the lead. Bates admitted he was drunk, but he denied that he had any intention of shooting Effie. He said he shot into the air. Three police officers, Sergeant Murphy, Patrolmen Wells and Edward Riordan heard the shots from the squad-room in the police station where they were commenting on the quietness of the night. They rushed to the street in time to see Effie dart between buildings. Wells led the others and in an instant he was in the Bates home and was in a tussle with George for the possession of a revolver. Bates denied that he had one, but the weapon he had made use of was lying on the table in the room. Its barrel was still warm. Bates was arrested and today was sent to jail to stay six months. The charge against him was breach of peace and carrying a concealed weapon.

William and Mamie Holloway, negroes, residing on Tilley street, were fined $10 each for creating a disturbance at their home at 5 o'clock this morning. They aroused the entire neighborhood.

Emma Gaultsris was fined $10 for operating an automobile without having a license. She said she intended to get a license today. Half a dozen were disciplined.

The schedule of the New London-Norwich trolley line of the Connecticut company, is interrupted daily because of the necessity of passengers transferring because of road construction work in progress between this city and Norwich. The company has caused an extra car to be operated late every afternoon, with the exception of Sunday, in an endeavor to overcome the delay, but in this endeavor they have been successful. The late afternoon and early evening cars are anywhere from five to 15 minutes late in leaving New London for Norwich.

Daniel P. Snow, of Uncasville, drove his automobile to the New London this morning and went to Meridian street where he parked it in restricted area. The violation was observed by Patrolman Clyde Murphy, who ordered Snow to present himself in court. Snow, however, will escape that formality, for when he went to police headquarters he was allowed his freedom, being given a warning as to heeding parking ordinances when he again visits this city.

William Porter today complained to the police that several head of cattle were on his property on Ocean avenue, a large tract formerly owned by the late Frank S. Gardner, and were doing damage. Porter recently purchased the property from the widow of Mr. Gardner, Mrs. Letitia Gardner.

Benjamin A. Armstrong has sold a building lot on the easterly side of Briggs street to Andrew C. Miller.

The funeral of Mrs. Matilda Stebbins, widow of Wallace Stebbins, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the parish house of the First Church of Christ and was attended by many mourners. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mrs. Louis Goddard, of Ridgewood park, Waterford; Alfred Morin, 47 North Bank street; Mrs. Ophelia Becker, Groton; Mrs. William Brooks and infant daughter, 30 Steward street; Theodore Wheeler, United States Coast Guard Academy and Miss Alice Bogue, Montville, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed today.

A large number of New London sports will be among the attendants at the Harvard-Princeton football game at Cambridge Saturday afternoon. Several of the gridiron enthusiasts left this evening by automobile. Much more interest is manifested this year in the Harvard-Princeton game than in the Yale-Maryland game, which will be played in the bowl today.

Charles S. Stebbins was arrested this afternoon by Traffic Patrolman John Courtney when Stebbins was on State street in a helpless condition. Stebbins was to have been presented in the police court yesterday morning, but did not appear, so he forfeited his bond of $25, which was furnished by Louis Elfenbein. This additional charge will also be taxed against Stebbins tomorrow.

Percey Rogers, who was also scheduled to be presented in court yesterday on a charge of intoxication, forfeited his bond, which was likewise furnished by Elfenbein, but he has not been re-arrested, for he cannot be found.

Richard C. Moran, Norwich, will be in the police court tomorrow. Moran apparently believes that he can violate at will the traffic laws of this city. Today's arrest for this offense is the fourth for the Norwich man since last March. In the three previous arrests, Moran for the first offense was released with a warning. The second arrest resulted in Moran not being presented in court and the third time Moran was in court a suspended sentence was imposed. Today Moran was arrested by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy.

Several cases of intoxication will be tried in the police court Saturday morning, although the grist is not large. Among the list of inebriates is Michael Doyle, who was in court less than a week ago and at that time received a suspended jail sentence. With the sentence went the assurance of Judge Victor Prince that unless Doyle kept his promise to abstain from further indulgence in liquor the court would send Doyle to jail. Doyle was about State street this afternoon and in a pitiful condition for he was weak to the extent that he could hardly remain in an upright position. Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy arrested Doyle and tonight he is a physical wreck. He was recently sent to Lawrence hospital, where he was a patient for a week or more. When he was discharged he started drinking again and his arrest followed. At that time the suspended jail sentence was put into execution. This penalty hanging over Doyle has not caused him to leave the liquor alone.

George W. Sisson, successful candidate for election as representative on the republican ticket, today filed his list of expenses with City Clerk Julius D. Moran. The amount was $131 principally contributions to the republican town committee and for advertising. P. LeRoy Harwood, chairman of the Fifth Ward republican town committee, filed his expenses, which were $9 and Winder E. Reed chairman of the republican Third Ward committee swore that his expenses were but $7.

Patrolman James McKenna in making his rounds at Ocean Beach this afternoon found the entrance to the cottage at 24 Boardwalk open and making access easy for intruders. The officer did not know the owner of the cottage, but made it temporarily secure.

Frank J. Richards, deacon of the Montauk avenue Baptist church, this afternoon complained to the police that boys had been guilty the past day or two of smashing several windows in the church. Patrolman John Foley was assigned to investigate the complaint, but the officer was unable to learn the identity of the boys.

Raymond Gustini, 4, whose parents reside at 56 Smith street, was struck by an automobile driven by William E. Leeve, of Bank street and a chief notary officer aboard the U. S. S. Fanning, coast guard destroyer, state pier, this afternoon, the youngster not being seriously injured, it is believed. The boy was standing on the corner of Smith and Walbach streets and started to cross the intersecting highways just as the auto was about to pass. Before Leeve could bring the auto to a stop the child was struck and knocked down. Leeve caused the boy to be removed to his home where it was later stated by his parents that he was unhurt, except for bruises and a few scratches.

Mrs. Jerome J. Collins, Alger place, is entertaining her cousin Mrs. D. J. Kenny of Reading, Pa.

Mrs. Mildred Needam and daughter, Floyda, of the Harris building apartments, State street, are spending the week end with Mrs. Needham's sister, Mrs. Charles S. Rogers, Devon.

Lea S. Yeum, 35, Chinaman, residing on Golden street, who was arrested a week ago charged with violation of the Harrison act, was presented before United States Commissioner Russell H. Corcoran today. Probable cause was found and Yeum was held in bail of $1,000 for trial in the United States district court at New Haven. Yeum was arrested by Narcotic Agent Thomas Kenefick and Sergeant Patrick Murphy when the federal agent came to New London with a warrant claiming that Yeum had been trafficking in Opium. Yeum furnished a surety on his bond for his trial, which is scheduled to take place next month.

The Ford roadster, authorized to be purchased by the city council at its meeting Monday, was delivered to the police department today and was at once put into service. The auto is being used during the day by street sergeants to make a tour of beats of the several officers and at night by Lieutenant James Sullivan. Popular Picture Story at Y. M. C. A.

The courtship of Myles Standish will be shown at the local Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on the coming Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock. This five reel feature is an excellent dramatization of Longfellow's poem, geographically and historically correct. It is certainly one of the most artistic "poem-pictures" ever presented. It is seldom indeed that such a popular poem appears on the screen and doubtless many will desire to see its portrayal on this occasion. Not only are the scenes true to thought, the writer of the poem had in mind, but the splendid lessons to be learned by old and young alike are well worth while. Hugh Kinder will furnish music for the feature picture and he will also render vocal solos. Both men and women are invited, and boys and girls fourteen and over will be admitted.

Palace Theatre

Today the Palace presents the finest Saturday program of the season, the semi-professional vaudeville being held over for the Saturday matinee and evening to add to the enjoyment of the big picture bill headed by Richard Dix in his greatest success, "The Quarterback," his newest picture triumph in which he is supported by Esther Ralston. Then there is Dolores Costello in The Little Irish Girl, the 9th chapter of Gene Tunney's serial of adventure "The Fighting Marine," and the Palace Topical Events with all the latest world wide news. Truly an entertainment of unusual excellence. For the Sunday evening performance another fine, double feature program will be presented with the first showing of George Jessel in his screen success "Private Izzy Murphy," a comedy drama of Izzy's rise as he climbed from the Ghetto to glory in a fighting Irish regiment, a story that will make your sides shake and your heart ache. The companion picture is "Other Women's Husbands," a sparkling drama of matrimonial mixups with a great cast including Monte Blue, Marie Prevost, Phyllis Haver and John Patrick, a new comedy, "Her Actor Friend," with Alice Day and the new Palace Topical Events with the latest news of the day completing a Sunday evening entertainment of the highest class in every number. At today's matinee will be held the first of the Kiddies Frolics on the stage for the benefit and pleasure of the children.

Breed Theatre

"Sandy" is in the movies now. That is the good news that will bring all fiction lovers to the Breed theatre on Sunday when the first local showing of the new Fox Film will take place. This celebrated story by Elenore Meherin has been read by legions as it appeared serially in more than a hundred big city newspapers in every part of the United States.

Its theme is one of widespread appeal. It records, in an unforgettable manner, the search of a typical modern girl for happiness. The sensational success that greeted it instantaneously upon publication was due to the fact that the character of "Sandy" has been treated with a candor that is sometimes daring but always true-to-life.

"Sandy" is the daughter of a jazz age who holds all the advanced ideas commonly credited to the present-day girl. She firmly believes that the older generation can teach her nothing but that she can give them a few lessons in throwing over antiquated conventions in favor of a behavior code that gets the maximum fun out of life.

In a highly dramatic story the author proves that rules of conduct developed through centuries of civilization cannot be altered or dismissed—even by a beautiful nineteen-year-old girl—in a record of Sandy's disillusionments in life and love in both an absorbing and worthwhile chronicle.

Harry Beaumont, director of countless screen success, has brought "Sandy" to celluloid. The main role is played by charming Madge Bellamy who has transformed her demure personality into that of a fiery flapper with realism and conviction. The supporting cast includes Leslie Fenton, Harrison Ford, Barbara Bard, Gloria Hope, David Torrence and several other prime film favorites.

The engagement of "Sandy" at the Breed theatre will continue from Sunday to the following Wednesday.

Broadway Theatre

The Broadway theatre management is offering an exceptional double feature program at that popular playhouse for Sunday evening only. Special attention is called to the two features.

Some clever twists to old problems are promised in the new Encore Picture, "Fifty-Fifty," which is the first feature. In this story the husband, shortly after his marriage to a petite little French girl tires of her cunning ways and renews an acquaintance with a fascinating divorcee who had once before set her cap for him. The wife instead of tearing her hair and crying her eyes out lays out a novel campaign to defeat her rival. An old sweetheart shows up and is pressed into service and the complications that ensue give the husband so much to think about that he hasn't time to pursue his new will o' the wisp. Hope Hampton, Lionel Barrymore and Louise Glaum have the leading roles. The scenes are laid in Paris and New York.

Sparkling with a hundred bright facets of humor, and athrill with the bounding exploits which are the sensational characteristics of its star, "The Prince of Pep," Dick Talmadge's latest production for F. B. O., is the second feature attraction. The latest Talmadge vehicle, or perhaps it might be better to say the latest Talmadge racing car since "vehicle" seems a slow word at best to describe the hectic action in which Dick finds himself.

Broadway Theatre

Homer Lind Revue is coming to the Broadway theatre Monday as one of five special pre-holiday vaudeville acts. Although an American by birth and breeding, Homer Lind is almost as well known abroad as in his own country. Born in Alexandria, Virginia, he early developed a natural voice that made him a leading church singer of Washington, D. C., before he went abroad to study for grand opera. He made his debut at Frankfort, and was immediately engaged for the Royal Carl Rosa company of London. Col Henry W. Savage brought Mr. Lind back to America as leading baritone of his English Grand Opera company and at the Metropolitan Opera House ranged through the whole repertoire from Telramund in "Lohengrin" to the comic role of Koke in the "Mikado" confirming his foreign sobriquet of "The Actor Singer" and winning countless admirers for his voice and remarkable talents as an actor. After touring the country in Col. Savage's production of "Parsifal", Mr. Lind invaded in a novel vehicle. This was the first music-drama ever produced in vaudeville. Such was its success that Mr. Lind not only toured this country for several seasons, but won a London triumph with the first operatic play ever presented in the English music halls. Since then Mr. Lind has varied his repertoire with such clever vehicles as "The Opera Singer", "A Man of Yesterday" and "The Singing Master" and with his charming wife, Ada Carry Lind known as the "Lady of the Violin", has become established as one of the standard attractions of vaudeville.

Pupil of Miss Perkins Sings for Noted Teacher

Mrs. Josephine S. Stewart, whose lovely voice and singing was heard by Norwich audience last season, has recently had an audition with Mr. Oscar Saenger, the eminent vocal authority of New York. Miss Perkins is in receipt of a letter from Mr. Saenger, congratulating her upon her excellent work with Mrs. Stewart, who has thus far received her entire training with Miss Perkins.

So pleased was Mr. Saenger with Mrs. Stewart's singing that he made her a special offer to study with him and prepare for opera this being a special honor as Mr. Saenger accepts only pupils who possess much talent and who have a thorough understanding of vocal technic.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Strand Theatre

Vivid, colorful, picturesque, and imbued with whirlwind speed from start to finish, "Beyond the Rockies," starring Bob Custer, proves the most gripping vehicle in which this popular F. B. O. star has appeared. In addition to these fine qualities, the story by J. Edward Leithead adapted for the screen by William E. Wing gives the handsome young western luminary a unique characterization which he interprets with fine skill and dramatic power. As the secret operative of the Stockman's association, detailed to break up the mysterious "Cloaked Riders" of the border region, Bob has stirring deeds to perform, but he must still remain incognito. He is ably supported by Eugenie Gilbert, David Dunbar, Bruce Gordon, Milton Ross and others, and has been accorded splendid direction by Jack Nelson. "Beyond the Rockies" will be shown here for the first time on Sunday at the Strand theatre, as the first feature.

"The Prince of Pep," a typical Talmadge melodrama with more than the usual quota of laughs and thrills, comes to the Strand theatre as the second feature Sunday for its first local showing. "Typically Talmadge" is synonymous with uproarious screen entertainment, and the agile Richard ricochettes from one situation to another in even more amusing fashion than in his wont. Jack Nelson, who directed the last three Talmadge successes, has handled a fine cast, including Nola Luxford, Marcella Daly and Brindley Shaw with his usual skill.

A comedy completes this roaring action program.

Capitol Theatre

Manager George A. Bartlett of the Capitol theatre, Willimantic, wishes to announce to the public that he has secured John R. Van Arnam's Superior Minstrels for one night. Van Arnam's Minstrels, while only on their 7th season comes with an enviable reputation of having played two consecutive years as a headline attraction over the B. F. Keith Circuit of Vaudeville Theatres, being the only production giving the entire show on the Keith Circuit.

Mr. Van Arnam has the only minstrel show on the road today playing to popular prices of 50 cents, 75 cents and $1.00. He believes in crowded houses and pleasing the public. As with all minstrel shows, there will be a street parade at noon and a band concert in front of the theatre before the night performance.

Reserved seats are now on sale.

One of the features of John R. Van Arnam's Minstrels is the band. Mr. Van Arnam takes special pride in his band and each musician is an expert on his own instrument. The band and concert will parade the business section of Main and Union streets at noon on Tuesday, Nov. 9th and then the band will give a concert in front of the Capitol theatre, Willimantic, before each performance. Van Arnam's minstrels appear at this theatre one day only.

In these times of "High Cost of Living and Prohibition," it has often been found difficult to secure accommodation for a company the size of Van Arnam's Minstrels and Mr. Van Arnam has, at considerable expense, furnished a private Pullman dining and sleeping car for the convenience of the members of the company. While touring the country, this is their home for the entire season and no detail has been omitted which would add to the comfort of his performers. This car is in unison with the high class of entertainment provided by The Van Arnam company.

Sweet Singers, Nimble Dancers, Funny Comedians with new jokes, wonderful music by their own orchestra, together with brilliant costumes and beautiful scenery combine to make the first part of Van Arnam's Minstrels and entertainment of interest and a feast for the eye. While the second part of the show or Olio consists of seven separate novelty acts, each one different from any of the others. Van Arnam's Minstrels who appear at Willimantic for one day only provide over two hours of fun and amusement.

A man can learn to be a good mechanic, study until he becomes a great scholar or engage in business until he is rich, but a good comedian is just born that way and the best comedians are known as natural comedians. Mr. Van Arnam has secured for his minstrel show this season all "natural" comedians and as he gives the show his personal attention, each one of the several fun-makers appearing in the First Part of Olio was selected on the merits of his own particular brand of humor. Mr. Van Arnam gives the same careful attention to every detail of his show and maintains the same high standard throughout the entire season which he sets at the beginning. Van Arnam and his Minstrel Company will be at the Capitol theatre one day only.

St. Paul's cathedral in London will be the scene of a notable wedding today when Miss Ethel Pryke, daughter of the retiring lord mayor, becomes the bride of Cecil Turner.

Germanized by Kitchen

When a few weeks ago it was announced in a somewhat sensational newspaper that the United States contemplated so changing its immigration laws as to permit the free entry of foreign women who would go into domestic service, the American consulates received innumerable requests for passport visas.

Just what the United States might have expected from Germany, if that report had been more than rumor, is shown by the fact that since Holland abolished the necessity of visas for Germans, German cooks, housemaids and waitresses have swarmed into that country in such numbers that the natives are beginning to raise their voices against being "Germanised from the kitchen."

MARKET CLOSED IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, Nov. 5—(AP)—The stock market turned irregular today after an early period of strength. The early rise was accompanied by a marked broadening in activity, seventy issues at one time selling a point or more above yesterday's final quotations, but the recovery was checked by a renewal of selling pressure against the motors, and the usual week-end profit taking by traders who had bought stocks "for a turn."

The day's business news was mixed in character. One of the most significant developments was a further lowering in time money rates, all maturities being available on a flat 4 3-4 per cent. basis, indicating a plethora of funds available for commercial and stock market purposes. Call money held steady at 4 1-2 per cent but the official rate was shaded in the outside market. The monthly report of brokers' loans by members of the New York stock exchange showed a drop of $27,600,085 last month.

The report of a small decline in steel ingot production in the first week of November was offset by the announcement that subsidiaries of the United States Steel corporation had received orders for 250,000 tons of rails in the last week of October. Steel common closed 3-4 higher at 142 1-2 after after fluctuating between 142 and 146 1-4.

Except for fears in some quarters that the seasonal curtailment of production in the automobile industry will be sharper than usual, there was nothing in the day's news to explain the renewed selling of the motors. General Motors closed 2-4 lower at 152 3-8 after having touched 154 1-2. Chandler-Cleveland common and preferred sank to new low record levels at 8 1-2 and 12 1-2, respectively, but both made partial recovery.

Amusement shares displayed a strong undertone. Warner Pictures recording an extreme gain of over 3 points and Shubert theatres and Famous Players selling at least a point higher. Prospects of higher dividends brought fresh buying into the coppers. Kennecott touching a new high for the year. New maximum prices also were recorded by Philip Morris, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Eureka Vacuum Cleaner, Brunswick Terminal and Commercial Solvents B. Baldwin was run up 7 points, the net losses were small. Atlantic Coast Line, Illinois Central and Peoria & Eastern showed independent strength.

Commodity prices moved within narrow and irregular limits. Active wheat futures advanced slightly but renewed weakness developed in the market for corn futures. Cotton prices drifted slightly lower on nervous liquidation inspired by predictions that the next government crop estimate on Monday will be close to 18,000,000 bales. Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee prices rallied 4 to 11 points.

In the foreign exchange market, sterling displayed a slightly firmer tone, but French francs sold off 5 points to just below 3.30 cents, and slight recessions developed in most of the other continental rates.

TAFTVILLE

The second meeting of the season of the Men's club of the Taftville Congregational church was held Thursday evening in the vestry of the church. John D. Sharples, the president, presided at the business session, and introduced the speaker, Arthur L. Peale of Norwich. Mr. Peale, who is an authority on Indian lore, gave a very interesting talk on the life and habits of the red men of New England, before the coming of the white settlers, and during the time this section of the country was being colonized. He reviewed the legends of the various Indian tribes, and told of the warfare that was constantly carried on between them. He also gave an interesting account of King Philip's war. Especially interesting were his accounts of the Mohegans, Nipmucks, Narragansetts, Podunks and Niantics who formerly resided in or near this territory. He showed a number of different Indian implements and utensils. After his valuable talk, Mr. Peale was given a vote of thanks, and refreshments of sandwiches, cake, coffee and cigars were served by a committee consisting of Lester M. Pingree, Edwin Heap, Thomas Grimshaw, Joseph E. Heselton and George [illegible].

Plans are rapidly shaping up for the approaching carnival to be given by the Sacred Heart church and committees are already at work to make the affair a success. The carnival is to open with a big parade of maskers, and the Duwell fife and drum corps has been engaged for the event.

All those desiring to take part in parade be at Weller's store at 7:45 Tuesday evening. Come masked.—adv.

NORWICH TOWN

The first in a series of suppers for the winter of 1926-1927, under the auspices of the Home Missionary society of the First Congregational church, Mrs. H. L. Yerrington, president, was held Friday evening in the chapel, with a large attendance.

At 6:30, after the pastor, Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey had said grace, the company set down to tables attractively arranged in the chapel auditorium and the ladies' parlor. The menu included delicious baked beans, escalloped potato, cabbage salad, cold ham, rolls, pickles, pickled beets, cake and coffee.

Mrs. Frank S. Wheeler, Mrs. Clyde M. Beebe, and Mrs. Abbie L. Hale were in charge, assisted by Mrs. Charles Schwenk, Mrs. Michael Buckley and Mrs. Earl Browning. The waitresses were Misses Grace Wheeler, Doris and Lucile Browning, Margaret Chapin and Louise Avery. The waiters were Arthur Avery, Robert Stott and Robert Avery. It is the plan of this society to hold at least three suppers. The next will be the annual parish supper, New Year's day, and takes place at the close of Organist Herbert L. Yerrington's annual recital, for the pleasure of music lovers and the community in general. This afternoon's music and feast is looked forward to each year with much interest by members of the parish and their friends, as a date when the hospitality of this church is extended to many.

The third supper usually takes place during late winter or early spring. At the gathering Friday evening Miss Ruth Sterry, violinist, and Miss Louise Sterry, pianist, entertained with selections during the social hour which followed the supper.

Rev. G. F. Bailey returned Friday evening from Bridgeport where he has been attending the annual meeting of the National Missionary organizations of the Congregational churches.

SHETUCKET WORSTED MILLS ARE TO RESUME OPERATIONS IN BALTIC

HARTFORD, Nov. 5—(AP)—After having been idle for more than a year, the plant formerly operated by the Daniel Boone Mills, Inc., in Baltic, will start operation as the Shetucket Worsted Mills and will offer employment to 150 persons, it was learned today following the filing of a certificate of incorporation by the latter company with the secretary of the state.

The new incorporation, which bears the same name as the one which operated the mills three years ago, has an authorized capital stock of $800,000. It will begin business with the full amount paid in, it was said tonight by Michael H. Donohue of Baltic, one of the incorporators. In the papers the company promise to have a paid-in capital of $350,000 before starting business.

Mr. Donohue, who was president and treasurer of the Shetucket Worsted Mills when it operated previously and who bought the plant from the receivers a few months ago after having held a mortgage on the Daniel Boone mills, will be treasurer of the new company, he said tonight. Thomas D. Hanley, of New York, will be president and Mr. Donohue's son, Joseph M. Donohue will be secretary, it was said. The three are listed as the incorporators of the company.

A small force of workmen started work in the mills, Monday, making samples and more employes will be taken on shortly with the expectation that within a month or two the plant will be in full operation and giving employment to about 150 persons, it was said by Mr. Donohue. The major part of the output will be men's wear worsted goods.

FOUND ALLEGED THIEF WEARING SHEEPSKIN COAT

James J. Maffitt, 54, who gave his home town as Westerly, R. I., will be presented in the city court this (Saturday) morning to answer to a charge of theft of a sheepskin coat from the Segal clothing store on Thames street. Maffitt, it is said, had been hanging around the West Side section for a couple of days and it is also said that he went to a restaurant in that section Thursday and after dining declined to pay his bill, until he was given his choice of paying or of going to police headquarters.

Friday afternoon Officer John O'Neil was notified by Mr. Segal that a sheepskin coat which had been hanging in front of the store, had been stolen. The officer was furnished a description of the man alleged to have stolen the coat and from the description recognized the alleged thief as the man who had declined to pay his restaurant bill. A search was started by Officer O'Neil and Captain Thomas P. Murphy who happened to be in the vicinity at the time. Captain Murphy and Segal went up High street watching for Maffitt and Officer O'Neil started a search in the direction of Aqueduct street house and found him wearing the missing coat. Maffitt strenuously objected to being escorted to police headquarters but he was landed there by the officer and locked up for appearance in the city court.

J. F. ROLLINS FOUND DEAD— MOTHER RESIDES IN NORWICH

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 5—J. Frank Rollins, 36, former resident of New London, was found dead in bed at the Maple hotel, Pawtucket, R. I., yesterday morning having suffered a cerebral hemorrhage and passed away, it is believed, in his sleep. He is survived by his wife, Claire Belle Frazier, his mother, Mrs. Mary Rollins of Norwich and by an aunt, Mrs. Harry Mack of this city. He was a member of Oxoboxo lodge of Masons, Montville and of the Order of Eastern Star, of that place. Mr. Rollins' father, the late John Rollins, former well known shipbuilder, died several years ago. Mr. Rollins was born in New London.

He had been employed as automobile salesman by the Used Car exchange here, until that company went out of existence months ago. He since then had been employed at Pawtucket. It was known that Mr. Rollins' health had not been sound for a long time, but it was not realized by himself, nor even by members of his family that his condition was serious and of a nature that caused them alarm, so that the finding of Mr. Rollins' body left his family greatly shocked.

His mother, Mrs. Mary Rollins is matron of the Johnson Kings' Daughters' home, at Norwich Town.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubes. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

have never been looked upon as a test for defective sight, yet they may be the means of making known the existence of some of the shortcomings of one's eyes.

A person with good sight can enjoy the movies an hour or two a day without discomfort, if not done with too great frequency.

But if visits to the movies are followed by headaches or eye pains it is probable that the eyes need expert attention.

In that event it is wise to have a thorough examination made without delay.

The Ivy Green

Oh, a dainty plant is the Ivy green,
That creepth o'er ruins old!
In his cell so lone and cold.
The wall must be crumbled, the stone decayed,
To pleasure his dainty whim;
And the mouldering dust that years have made
Is a merry meal for him.
Creeping where no life is seen,

Fast he stealeth on, though he wears no wings,
And a staunch old heart has he.
How closely he twineth, how tight he clings
To his friend the huge Oak Tree!
And slily he traileth along the ground,
And his leaves he gently waves,
As he joyously hugs and crawleth round
The rich mould of dead men's graves.
Creeping where grim death has been

Whole ages have fled and their work undone,
And nations have scattered been;
But the stout old Ivy shall never fade,
From its hale and hearty green.
Shall fatten upon the past:
For the stateliest building man can raise
Is the Ivy's food at last.
Creeping on, where time has been,

—Charles Dickens.

A Complaint

Fancy lingers by the sea,
Wanders on the sunny sand,
Blows sweet kisses from her fingers,
Crested wave to silver strand.
But alas! I cannot be Where Fancy lingers.

Then Love calls me soft and low,
Wistful lips and witching smile,
Misty moonlight that enthralls me,
Arms that beckon and beguile.
Where Love calls me.

Youthful dreaming lives for youth,
Age must find its sole content
In the dusty path of scheming,
Books and books and banishment,
Till it tottering into Truth:
Eternal dreaming.

Eighteen silk dresses were packed in another. I know whether a woman intends to steal the instant I put eyes on her."

Civil war in China caused an unusual wedding ceremony in Peking recently, when a pretty young Chinese girl was married to a photograph and solemnly carried to her new home. The picture marriage was decided on when one Chi Shihshu, a sub officer in one of the numerous armies, failed to get leave he had requested for his marriage ceremony. Parents of the bride and bridegroom, who had arranged a huge wedding feast, decide to carry out the ceremony and kow-tows were made before a photograph of the bridegroom in the absence.

Cheese carriers at Alkmaar, Holland, recently protested to the master of the cheese market that American tourists who flock to the weekly Friday market are impeding their work. The Cheese Carriers' Guild, which last year celebrated its 300th anniversary in the ancient weigh-house of Alkmaar in the presence of Queen Wilhelmina, has no objection, it says, to tourists witnessing the spectacle of the sale and weighing of the cheeses, but the carriers object to being halted in their work by Americans who purposely get in their way in order to photograph them. A pair of cheese carriers move from ten to thirty tons of cheese in a day.

MANY PERSONS INJURED IN COLLISION IN PROVIDENCE

Two Persons Fatally Injured, Five Seriously—Nearly a Score More Were More or Less Seriously Hurt—Worcester Bound Bus and a Trolley Car Were in Collision—Bus Was Demolished and the Trolley Car Was Thrown From the Rails.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Two women were fatally injured, five other persons were so seriously hurt that they may die and 18 more were cut, bruised and shaken up in a head-on collision between a Worcester-bound bus and a trolley car here tonight. The bus, traveling with its left wheels on the car track, was demolished. Its passengers were hurled about like straws and they made up the greater portion of the list of dead and injured.

The dead:

Mrs. Louise Kirk, 52, 22 Lake street, Spencer, Mass.

Mrs. Marion Covill, 28, 2 Harvard place, Worcester, Mass.

Critically injured and may die:

Helen Lundblad, 30, Worcester.

Grace Burns, 25, Worcester.

Mrs. Zella Knight, 135 Highland street, Worcester.

Police investigating the accident have not yet determined where the blame lies. The motorman of the trolley car told the authorities that he saw the bus when it was 300 feet away from him; expected it to turn out and, when he saw that it would not, he reversed his power and stepped as far to one side as possible to avoid injury. The bus driver declared an automobile passing the trolley on the left and heading straight for the bus prevented his turning out.

When the two heavy vehicles met, the crash resounded for blocks. Police answering emergency calls summond an ambulance from the Rhode Island hospital and commandeered private automobiles to take the injured to that institution. Few Rhode Island persons were among those hurt. The majority of the bus passengers gave addresses in central Massachusetts.

The active presidency of the new body has been entrusted to Professor Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., of Georgetown university, who was director general of the papal relief mission in Russia during the great famine.

COOLIDGE ENTERTAINED HIS ADIRONDACK GUIDE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Questions of government and politics were temporarily forgotten at the white house today as President Coolidge turned to thoughts of forest, lake and stream, and reminisced with his Adirondacks guide of last summer, Oscar Otis.

The vigorous, agile, middle-aged outdoorsman arrived here today with Mrs. Otis by automobile from Paul Smith's, N. Y., for their first visit to the national capital. They were invited by the President and Mrs. Coolidge to stay at the white house.

Otis, who is caretaker of White Pine camp, was close to the president during his vacation of eleven weeks in the Adirondacks, accompanying him on all his fishing expeditions and instructing him in woodcraft.

Mr. Coolidge arranged for his guests to be shown the points of interest in the city.

REPUBLICANS PROBABLE WINNERS IN GREEK ELECTION

ATHENS, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Polling in the elections today for members of the new assembly to replace the body dissolved by General Pangalos just prior to assuming the dictatorship, was conducted in an orderly manner, unprecedented in Greece's political history. The results cannot be known before tomorrow, but both Premier Kondylis and former Premier Kafandaris announced tonight that information received in the course of the day that victory for the republican party was certain.

Only the two major groups, the republican and the royalists, were considered as having any chance for control, and the decision of the refugees' party under M. Sophoulas, to support the republican coalition, increased the votes cast for that combination.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—J. A. Ayres of New York, who was expelled from Queen Marie's special train last night in Seattle "works for" the Ford Motor company here, Gaston Plantiss, in charge fo the eastern district said tonight.

Ayres is one of several persons employed to see that automobile placed at the disposal of various parties are properly cared for, Mr. Plantiss said, and in such a capacity, he accompanied Gustav Adolph, crown prince of Sweden, when he was in this district recently.

Ayres has no right to speak for Henry Ford, Mr. Plantiss explained. He said he did not know that Ayres was with Queen Marie until he read press dispatches in this morning's papers.

FOUR PRISONERS ESCAPE FROM NAPANOCH, N. Y.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Four prisoners escaped this morning from the state prison for mental defectives at Napanoch, N. Y., and are believed to be headed toward New York, police headquarters here were informed today. A general alarm was broadcasted.

The men were in an automobile and wearing prison garb. All bridges, ferries and other approaches to the city were watched.

Three were committed to the institution after murder charges had been brought against them, police said.

The prison authorities have warned all searchers that the prisoners are maniacs, with the minds of children, but they are desperate, and will fight to the death if conquered."

FISHERMEN ASK DECISION ABOUT BABCOCK POND

EAST HAMPTON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Fishermen throughout Connecticut having appealed to the state fish and game commission to determine if Babcock pond in Westchester is privately owned by L. D. Lanier of Greenwich or not, are anxiously awaiting the results of an investigation started yesterday by County Game Warden George J. Fisher of Middletown, and Deputy Games Warden Howard Becker of this place.

Babcock pond, popular with fishermen not only from Connecticut but from New York as well, was created by flooding a cranberry meadow of 2-20 acres. It was purchased by Lanier from Fowler, for whom it was flooded, and is kept stocked with game fish.

Lanier, feeling that its popularity was injuring its value to him and his friends, recently ordered his caretaker to keep anglers away. The appeal to Commissioner Titcomb, by fishermen who felt that the pond had become public, followed.

ALLEGED SWINDLINGS BY NEW HAVEN BROKERS

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Alleged wholesale swindlings, which police say have cost local people over $200,000 led to the arrest yesterday of two members of Clarke Company, Inc., investment brokers. Police are seeking a third member of the firm, who left town suddenly about two weeks ago for New York.

Carl B. Clarke, 26, and Jackson H. Kerans, 28, are under bond of $3,000 each on technical charges of idleness. The offices of the firm have been attached for several thousand dollars, and other attachments are pending.

The extent of the alleged frauds has not been definitely determined. One local woman is said to have lost $100,000, another client is "out of luck" to the extent of $27,000, and many smaller victims are reported.

Charges of forgery, in the signing of clients' names to documents for the advantage of the firm, are pending in addition to charges of misrepresentation and embezzlement, according to police.

DANISH PARLIAMENT TO BE DISSOLVED DECEMBER 1

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Parliament will be dissolved December 1. Premier Stauning has announced that the parliament and government are unable to accept the amendments to the crisis bill. He asked the king's consent to dissolve parliament and appeal to the country.

The bill in question proposed large additional grants in aid of the unemployed and other measures to deal with the economic situation, which the radicals refused to grant. The socialist government has thus lost the support of the radicals and the house, which alone enabled the ministers to hold the majority. The general opinion is that the cabinet realized it would be impossible to carry on through another winter.

GUNMAN PLANNED TO ESCAPE FROM JAIL

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Plans of Martin J. Typhoon and Tidal Wave Cause Deaths

More Than Three [illegible] Persons Lost Their [illegible] in Storm in Philippines.

MANILA, Nov. 7.—(AP)—A typoon, a tiday wave and a flood in widely separate areas have combined in a joint visitation of the Philippine Islands, leaving in their wake deaths believed in excess of 300 and heavy property damage.

The waters of Columbang river, over which the typhoon swept rushed back suddenly carrying away residents in their houses. Roads and bridges were washed out, and telegraph lines blown down so that an accurate appraisal of the damage done is impossible but it is said that in the town of Batting as alone there are, besides the known dead, approximately 300 missing.

The Red Cross has despatched physicians, nurses, and medical supplies to Batangas for the relief of the sufferers and the United States army also sent food and clothing but it is doubtful when the supplies will reach the sufferers because of the bad condition of the roads.

The typhoon struck from the direction of the island and Province of Samar, breaking disastrously over Batangas province, damaging many towns. In this one province it is believed the death toll will reach 200.

Los Banos, which is one of the sizeable island bodies of water, Laguna De Bay, felt the effects of the storm and many of the lighter buildings, there were demolished. The insular agricultural college was among the structures seriously damaged.

Belgians to Welcome Princess Astrid

Houses in Brussels Are Decorated With Belgian and Swedish Flags.

This was a typical November day, and the houses all along the route chosen for the royal procession, decorated with thousands of Belgian and Swedish flags and draperies on which the Swedish cross was prominently displayed, made a stirring picture. The stores in the centre of the city were besieged by curious crowds viewing window displays of marble or wax figures of members of the royal families as they will be grouped at the marriage ceremony in St. Gudule cathedral Wednesday.

HANOVER MAN NEAR DEATH; WIFE SHOOTS HIM AS HE SITS AT RADIO

(Special to The Bulletin)

HANOVER, Nov. 7—Jealousy of another woman is given as the cause that led Mrs. Beatrice Bamford, 42, to shoot her husband Thomas, 53, three times tonight at their home in one of the Airlie mill double tenament houses. The bullet penetrated his chest and he is in the hospital in Norwich where his ante-mortem statement has been taken by Coroner J. J. Desmond.

Bamford wrested the pistol from his wife and threw it outdoors where Constable John J. McGuire, who arrested the woman, found it. The 38 calibre revolver still contained two bullets which Mrs. Bamford told the constable she intended to use on the other woman.

Mrs. Bamford is held in the lockup at Baltic.

Bamford was listening in on the radio tonight about 7.20, it is understood, when an argument between the couple arose and Mrs. Bamford suddenly secured a revolver and shot her husband three times, firing the first shot from behind him. He grabbed for the gun and got it away from her, throwing it down a bank outside the house and staggering to the door step where he shouted for help and fell unconscious. Neighbors found him there and sent word to Constable J. J. McGuire, at Baltic, who came here at once and brought with him the Sprague town nurse, Miss Enright.

Bamford was covered with blood from the three bullet wounds and it was seen that his condition was critical. He was immediately hurried to the Backus hospital in Norwich and Coroner Desmond was summoned there to take his ante mortem statement.

Mrs. Bamford suffered a nervous collapse this spring and was a patient for a time at the Norwich state hospital. It is understood that early today she showed the pistol to her son, a young man of 20, and told him she was going to shoot her husband. The pistol was unloaded at the time and he thought nothing of the incident. He was in Norwich attending a moving picture theatre when the shooting occurred but he was summoned out of the theatre by an announcement from the stage that he was wanted.

GUNMEN IN THREE AUTOS KILLED MAYOR OF COLP, ILLS

Mayor Jeff Stone and a Friend Were Shot Dead and Chief of Police Was Wounded—Crime Was Perpetrated on a State Highway Near Golp—Machine Guns Are Believed to Have Been Used by the Murderers.

HERRIN, Ills., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Volleys fired from gunmen in three automobiles on a state highway a short distance from Golp, near here, last night, brought death to Mayor Jeff Stone, 51, and John Milroy, 21, a boxer friend, and resulted in injuries to Police Chief Keith. Machine guns are believed to have been used in the attack.

Stone and Milroy were struck down as they stood in front of the roadhouse of Pete Salmo, and Keith was shot in the hand as he started to run from the place after the unidentified assailants are said to have told him that they did not "want" him. After the shooting, the gunmen drove off in the direction of Carterville.

Earlier in the evening Stone and Keith were at a pool room in Colp when they received a call to the Salmo resort. The gunmen drove by shortly after their arrival there and levelled their guns at Stone. He fell mortally wounded in the road, and Milroy, who was in a nearby pool room, was shot as he ran to the assistance of the mayor. After Keith was shot in the hand he disappeared, but was found several hours later in Carterville, three miles distant.

Reports were current here today that Charles Birger, gang leader, had sworn vengeance on Stone for his political activities in last week's election because Stone had not supported the republican ticket.

The mayor was exonerated the past summer.

Of the murder of former Police Chief Freeman, on testimony that Stone had fired in self-defense when the two men wrangled over conduct of the city government.

HELIUM IS BEING USED BY DEEP SEA DIVERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Helium, that rare gas which floats airships, is now being put to the novel use of aiding deep sea divers in their struggles at ocean bottoms.

Experiments by the bureau of mines indicates that helium's utility will be as great in the depths as it is in the heights, and considerably more workaday in practical value. With its assistance, new low levels may be attained safely by the salvage worker under water.

Divers who work with the usual equipment suffer from what is known as "the bends" when their stay and exertions under water are prolonged.

The cause of this sometimes fatal ailment is the absorption by the diver's tissue of nitrogen which causes bubbles in his arteries. Helium like nitrogen, is so inert and transferable that it may be mixed with oxygen, forming a synthetic atmosphere, compressible for supply to divers and very nearly free of the tendency to produce the internal bubbles for which nitrogen is responsible. Many long experiments were made by the miners' bureau with animals and then the bureau's apparatus invented for the divers was turned over to the navy. Its first extensive utility was proven in the raising of the submarine S-51 which was sunk near Newport, R. I.

WITNESS WAS MOVED IN HOSPITAL AMBULANCE

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Summary removal of Mrs. Jane Gibson from the Somerset hospital here to Jersey City was effected today in a 30 mile ambulance journey with her approval.

Mrs. Gibson was taken away shortly before noon.

Dr. Lawton said that he explained to Mr. Simpson and the police officers accompanying him that "they were further jeopardizing the health and life of the patient."

JEWETT CITY

HERE'S A HOW-DY-DO! AIRPLANE DISTURBS CHURCH MEETINGS

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 7—Worshippers in the borough churches Sunday, and a week ago, were subjected to periodical distractions from the discourse from the pulpit, or perhaps aroused from their slumbers, by the lively rattle of the motors of the commercial airplane that has been doing a passenger service of late in the borough, or perhaps more strictly speaking, "above the borough."

No record has been made of any previous time when passing airplanes, contributed a jarring element to Jewett City's accustomed quiet Sabbath worship. This one passed every few minutes above the churches, barely clearing the highest spires. One man was overheard conversing in a whisper with a fellow worshipper, and allowing as how "that feller was about as high now as he would probably ever git."

Funeral services for John Farrell are held at St. Mary's church Saturday morning. Requiem high mass was sung by Rev. John J. McCabe, the pastor. Many were present, and the floral remembrances from the family and friends were very beautiful. The waiting hymn sung by Mrs. Noel Garand, was Face to Face. The bearers were John McKernan, William Wallace, Edward Walsh and Luke McCarthy, the last named a native of Griswold, now a resident of Sterling.

Hourigan Bros., were the funeral directors in charge.

Many friends in this section learned with sorrow of the death of Frank J. Murtha of Norwich, upon reading Saturday's Bulletin. The old-timers remember him as a ball player, and later speak of him as being the fairest and best posted umpire that in the old baseball days of Jewett City, used to make the decisions behind the plate. In later years Mr. Murtha made frequent visits to the borough business-wise and placed close to $50,000 worth of insurance in this vicinity. Local people who knew him well, have the memory to carry of a fine fair-minded gentleman.

Roy Ritchie was greatly surprised when Dena L. Have; Elsie Jacobs, Frances Kolbus, Lillian Dugas, Emma Coutue, Doris Coutue, Agnes Loranger, Armand Gilbert, Charlie Maynard, Lucian Barthelet, Theodore Guillotte, Bennie Solenski, John Jacobs and Ernest Loranger came to celebrate his seventeenth birthday. Games were played and "Pop" Loranger entertained with magic stunts.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Henry Ritchie, assisted by Mrs. John Driscoll and Mrs. Moses Loranger. A number of birthday gifts were left by the callers.

English starlings are beginning to organize their winter flocks in this section, where, within the borough limits alone, conservatively estimated two thousand find food and such comfort as is possible during the winter. Last season a flock of probably 500 were seen in the western end of the Faust lot on East Main street.

During the summer they enjoy themselves in the church belfries, and keep house undisturbed by the ringing of the big bells. A local observer saw two cows the other day each carrying a starling on its back. A report of this unusual occurrence brought the following information from Edward Howe Forbush:

This is not uncommon, and in severe weather in winter starlings sometimes go into barns and alight on a cow's back, apparently to keep their feet warm. In October the starlings might catch some flies on the cows.

The annual Red Cross roll call is to start November 15 in the Jewett City chapter's jurisdiction. Mrs. E. H. Hiscox is roll call chairman and her committee are the executive board, Miss M. A. Burdick, Mrs. J. H. Tracy, Misses Rosanna DesJardines and Ida Foster, Mrs. F. L. Ray, Mrs. A. E. Anthony, Misses Catherine Barnett, Margery Leyden, Alice Brennan, Margaret Driscoll, Mrs. E. B. Cheney, Dr. O H. Jennings and D. L. Phillips, also Misses May Driscoll, Elsie Lord, Bertha Lewis, Anna Russenas and Josephine Ambot, Mrs. P. W. Chase and Ethel Rood.

Mrs. John McElligott, Jr., of Jewett City and her sister, Mrs. Irene Herbert of Plainfield were the first women to make the airplane trip in the Alexander the Great machine which has been operating here.

Returning automobile parties from the north were telling Sunday evening of the strange appearance of the long line of cars below the Bishop detour, waiting for the traffic staff. From above the Doyle residence, where a curve in the highway permitted a view of the road below, there were headlights showing, all closed up together, that resembled the illumination of a long brilliantly lighted building.

Fred S. Campbell and his son Howard R. Campbell of Bayonne, N. J., were week end callers in the borough.

In preparation for the community evangelistic services under the direction of Dr. and Mrs. Rees, to be held here commencing December first for three weeks, cottage prayer meetings are to be held. This (Monday) morning three meetings will be held at the same time 7.45, at the home of W. J. Robertson, Jr., for the north district, at Miss M. A. Burdick's for the east district and Mrs. Alice Anthony's for the south district. These meetings will be held each Monday evening until the services commence. The first union service will be held in the Methodist church next Sunday evening.

Henry N. Armhrust of Jamestown, R. I., a student at Rhode Island state college at Kingston, was a guest of the pilot of the airplane which remained in Jewett City over two week ends. He made the trip in the machine an Sunday morning attended service at the Congregational church. It is the first time a visitor for the week end came by airplane to attend a borough service.

In the general clean-up of alleged liquor violators made last week when bench warrants issued by the superior court were served on the strength of evidence secured by County Detective William E. Jackson in a quiet campaign which started last August, one or two warrants were not served due to the absence of the parties named in them. Saturday evening such a warrant was served on Stanley Kaminsky of Windham by Officer Marrotte. Kaminski's case will undoubtedly be taken up at the same time as the other sixteen; similar ones.

We vouch for this as one of our finest pipe tobaccos

Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Common-sense in the package—quality inside

IN Granger Rough Cut, we offer pipe smokers a real innovation—a tobacco of first quality, but inexpensively packed in foil to retail at ten cents.

Lest its modest price mislead you as to its inner quality, recall a similar innovation in cigarettes some twenty years ago; consider how completely the soft "cup" package has now displaced the more costly pasteboard box.

The same story with Granger: Outside, a soft foil package glassine-wrapped—handier, lighter; better protection for the tobacco at less cost. Inside, finest quality.

Surely the coming thing, this common-sense package. And to men who know tobacco, what's inside is even more important!

DANIELSON

REV. A. DESCHAUX TERMINATES PASTORATE AT DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 7—Congregations at the masses at St. James' church Sunday morning heard the pastor, Rev. Joseph Deschaux, M. S., make announcement of the termination of his partorate in Danielson and also of the leave taking of Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., who has been one of his assistants. The new pastor is to be Rev. Anitheime Mollard, M. S., who will come to Danielson this week from St. Joseph's parish in Fitchburg.

In saying farewell Father Deschaux thanked his people for their co-operation during the three years of his pastorate and assured them of daily remembrance in his prayers, a consideration which he asked might be reciprocated. In addition to the rule of the LaSalette order of missionaries providing for transfers at the end of three year periods and other considerations, Father Deschaux mentioned that he has not fully recovered from a severe illness of the past spring and that the vast amount of work entailed upon the administration of such a large parish as St. James' requires the direction of a pastor of health and strength.

Father Deschaux's announcement was received with regret by his parishioners, who found him one of the most able of the line of LaSalette pastors who have had charge of the parish in the past 30 years. For the time being Father Deschaux will remain here giving his attention to details incident to the transfer of the pastorate.

Father Richards, after a service of about three years, leaves Danielson to become pastor at Estevan, Saskatchewan, a community a few miles over the Canadian border from North Dakota. As in the case of Father Deschaux, the going of Father Richards is regarded as a distinct loss to the parish. He has been a very zealous and active worker, lending his attention to a great variety of church activities and finding time out of his busy days to build up a parochial school baseball team that was one of the best, age considered, in southern New England.

Sunday afternoon, at the church, Father Deschaux and Father Richards were each presented a beautiful chalice, these gifts purchased from a fund raised among members of the parish through the efforts of Rose of Lima council, K. of C., represented by a committee made up of Attorney L. A. Woisard, Henry Woisard, Peter Gasseau, Martin T. Burns and Alfred Goulet.

CIVIC FEDERATION NETS $506 ON ITS TAG DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 7—Danielson demonstrated again on Saturday that it is appreciative of the Civic federation and its efforts by contributing $506.19 to its Tag day fund, an annual event for the past thirteen years. This does not reach the total of $507 obtained last year, nor is it the final total for this year, as generous contributors who each year in the past have given liberal checks to the Tag day fund may be expected to be heard from within a few days.

In Saturday's giving were two checks for $25 each and several checks of $5 each. Lesser amounts, it would appear, were given this year by many more than was the case last year, but the numbers of givers appeared to be greater than ever. An active corps of workers was on duty in the business section all day, and few were those who failed to respond to a request for aid of a great humanitarian work.

PROMINENT WAUREGAN MAN DIES OF HEART FAILURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 7—The body of Godfrey Maynard, 68, was found beside the river bank at Wauregan Friday evening, where Mr. Maynard had died unnoticed from an attack of heart disease, probably shortly after dark. Dr. W. W. Adams of Moosup, as medical examiner, viewed the body, which was taken in charge by Undertaker Lewis E. Kennedy.

Mr. Maynard had during the afternoon of Friday been to an island in the Quinebaug river a short distance up the stream from Wauregan to chop cord wood. He had returned with the wood and left it on the river bank and had been seen about the bridge at Wauregan about 5:45, apparently in normal health. When he did not come in for his evening meal, his sister, Miss Annie Maynard, with whom he made his home, went to search for him and discovered the body.

Mr. Maynard, who never married, was a native of Canada, but had been a resident of Wauregan practically all of his life and had lived in the home where his body now lies for the past 58 years.

Of interest to all the members of the organization hereabouts, as to many others, is the following program of the annual meeting of the Windham County Farmers' associatio nto be held in Odd Fellows' hall at Putnam on Wednesday of this week:

10:30 a. m.—Meeting called to order, Odd Fellows' hall, Putnam. Report of the president. 10:45—Report of the secretary-treasurer. 11:00—Report of the county agent. 11:30—Election of officers. 12:00 m.—Basket lunch. Coffee will be served free. 1:00 p. m.—Dr. Charles E. North of New York. Dr. North will speak on "The Production of the Demand for and the Profit in High Grade Agricultural Products." This will be a lantern slide lecture. Dr. North will use the production of high grade milk a subject of which he is not only a national but an international authority on, to describe the opportunities available in the production of a grade "A" product.

Musicians and vocalists who claim this town as their home will be "on the air" from radio station WKBE at Webster tonight broadcasting a Killingly night program and incidentally doing some good publicity work for one of the livest of northeastern Connecticut's towns.

Various communities of the town will be drawn on for talent and they will begin to make the ether vibrate about 8 p. m. Warren Braley's orchestra will head the list of entertainers. Among the dance hits they will play tonight are Baby Face, Breezing Along With the Breeze and numerous others. This orchestra returns to Webster in response to showers of applause cards that came in after a recent broadcast they made from that station. Saxophone, piano and vocal solos will be included in this evening's program.

To be added to interesting records being made by coon hunters in eastern Connecticut is the story of how George A. Whitney of North Grosvenordale and Stephen Coffey of Brooklyn have taken 20 coons to date this season with the black and tan coon hound he owned by Mr. Whitney. Saturday night Messrs Whitney and Coffey got their 20th coon of the season, which is young yet they will tell you, and that they hope to get many more before the sport is called off for the winter. Five of the coons they have taken weighed 20 pounds or over. Also of interest to the coon hunters is the reported taking by William House of Brooklyn on a recent night of a coon that weighed 25 1-2 pounds.

Sunday morning the Baptist church was filled to capacity at the opening service of a three weeks session of evangelistic meetings to be conducted here under the auspices of the Methodist Episcopal, Baptist and Nazerene churches by Dr. Milton Rees of Rochester, N. Y.

The Sunday morning service was opened by the pastor, Rev. C. J. Armstrong. The prayer was by Rev. Roger C. Stimson of the Methodist Episcopal church and also assisting at the service was the Rev. Abner E. Gallup of the Nazerene church. The sermon was preached by Dr. Rees. There was a union communion service to bring the service to a close. A union choir under the direction of Mrs. Rees sang during the service, which also was featured by a solo, The Ninety and Nine, by Miss Eleatha Sheldon.

Sunday evening a union service was held in the Baptist church, as will be all of the evening services for the first eleven nights. Two afternoon services are to be held at the Nazerene church.

Temporary lights are being installed in rooms at the high school that are to be used by the evening school classes. This school will begin sessions this week. There are to be sessions four night each week, in order that the required 75 nights of attendance be completed by early spring.

There is advocacy of the forming of a Parent-Teachers' association in Danielson, these organizations having proved of great value in educational work in many towns of the state.

Up to this morning there is no general agreement as to business here being suspended at noon on Thursday, Armistice day, although some merchants have made known their intention of closing their places of business at noon.

After being disappointed on two preceding Sundays, a force of the D. and P. Gas and Electric company, getting good weather, were able to do certain repair work on transmission lines Sunday afternoon, power being shut off meanwhile.

PUTNAM

LITTLE BUSINESS AT MEETING OF COUNCIL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 7—As Tuesday was election day the regular meeting of the common council of the city of Putnam was postponed until later in the week. There was little business done aside from regular routine business.

The police report showed twelve arrests for the month of October and $267.49 collected in fines and costs. Twenty-six tramps were lodged and four store doors were found unlocked.

A release was asked for L. F. Weeks of a $10,000 bond furnished as indemnity in case of damage in removing buildings from Lee street. As the Putnam Light and Power company has a claim against Frank Davis who removed the buildings, for damage in removing them, it was voted that the bond be kept in force until the bill of Mr. Davis was paid.

A complaint was read which had been sent to Health Officer Gardner by C. S. Andem, complaining of a foul odor that comes from a manhole in front of his home on Grove street and which was used for surface water. Superintendent of Streets Frank Dumas said he knew that the condition existed. No action was taken.

Captain McGarry of the Headquarters company was granted permission to use the land, owned by the city, and which had been purchased for sewer beds, as part of the company's target range.

It was voted that a clause be put in the call for the annual city meeting to reimburse L. F. Weeks to the extent of $27.50 for money expended on behalf of the city under an agreement that such reimbursement should be made.

A discussion as to whether the second floor of the fire station should receive further improvements was made by Fire Chief Thurston and the councilmen. No action was taken. It was stated that the repairs to fire headquarters, recently completed cost $320, and that light installed in the steeple of the Second Congregational church, so that the superintendent of fire alarms can see to climb the belfry, cost $55.

Three building permits were granted, bills were approved and ordered paid. The meeting adjourned shortly after nine o'clock.

NATIVE SON RETURNS TO PUTNAM IN AIRPLANE

PUTNAM, Nov. 7—As his furlough was only a short one and as Lieutenant Everett S. Davis of the United States Aviation corps, who is stationed at Langley Fields, Va., was anxious to see his relatives he made the trip in a big army plane.

He left the field at 10.30 Saturday morning, stopped once in Pennsylvania and again in Hartford, and arrived here in the early afternoon. After circling Putnam and Pomfret a few times he decided that the John Larned farm in the latter town would afford the best landing place—he knew about it in advance—and brought the big machine safely to earth.

The plane is a De Havilland, known to aviators as an army DeH. It has a spread three times as great as the machines that were from Hartford a short time ago. The Liberty motors are powerful engines and they are audible when at a high altitude. He left Putnam Sunday morning and expected to be back at his station before mess call was sounded.

Lieut. Davis is a graduate of Putnam high school but left here shortly after graduation to enter the employ of the General Electric company at Schenectady. When war was declared against Germany, he was too young for the draft requirements so he enlisted in the aviation service. He was sent abroad, learned all there was to know of the art of flying at that time in the undeveloped aeroplanes of ten years ago. When hostilities ceased he still remained in the flying corps. With the exception of a short visit a few weeks ago, this was the first time in seven years that he had been in Putnam. He is a first lieutenant and the next time he comes he will be a captain as his next step is due within two or three months.

His mechanician came with him here but he took the first train to Hartford—a prosaic mode of travel after the way he came, from Langley Field, so Lieutenant Davis took off from Pomfret alone and will pick up his a sistant at the Capital city.

He is the son of Everett A. Davis, manager of the Putnam branch of the Standard Oil company.

At the Masonic club rooms on Wednesday evening of this week, Newell W. Banks of Detroit, who is the checker match champion player of America will give an exhibition of his skill in that time honored and always interesting game. He comes here at the invitation of the Putnam Checker club and the members of that organization will be the guests of the Masonic club that evening.

Mr. Banks will take on any number of players simultaneously or he will play blindfolded or in almost any form of handicap that may be suggested. He was here three years ago when he demonstrated his prowess and made some of his audience realize that there is more to the game than Horatio ever dreamed of in his philosophy. To a person not acquainted with the wonderful degree of proficiency that can be attained in checkers or draughts as it was known when Louis III was both the king and the state, his playing approaches almost the miraculous.

For several years Mr. Banks has been the recognized champion of America.

At a meeting of the Windham county bar, it was voted to recommend Arthur Hector Plessis for admission to the bar. Mr. Plessis is the son of the late Joseph Plessis, who was formerly a representative from the town of Putnam to the general assembly. He is a graduate of the Putnam High school and received his B. A. degree from Assumption college at Worcester, Mass. He later studied law at Boston university and at Yale university.

Pedro DeClark of this city was before the city court charged with having in his possession unlawfully tools belonging to the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad. DeClark was found guilty and fined $10 and costs and was defended by Attorney Irving H. Miron while Prosecuting Attorney Eric H. Johnson acted for the state. The case was tried before Judge M. H. Geissler.

Mr. and Mrs. George Jacobs of Fort Wayne, Ind., are the guests of H. P. Amidon and family at Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Rich of Grove street have returned from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Frank Lincoln at Boston.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Warren have returned from a visit at Providence, Mr. Warren, who is a checker player of some note attended a meeting on Friday evening of the Rhode Island Checker and Chess club and saw an exhibition of chess and checkers by Newell W. Banks, match checker champion of America who is to be at the Masonic club on Wednesday evening.

Russell Perkins sailed on Saturday from New York for France to join C. A. Perkins for the winter, Mrs. Perkins was called to France some weeks ago by the death of her sister.

Robert Duquette, the five year old boy from North Grosvenordale who is at the Day Kimball hospital, remains on the danger list. His left leg was amputated and his right leg fractured when he jumped on a milk wagon and his legs were caught in a wheel. The accident happened several days ago.

Mrs. Frank Billings and son Francis are the guests of Mrs. Billings' mother, Mrs. Oscar Counter at Worcester, Mass.

An automobile collision occurred in Pawcatuck on Saturday night, at 8.15 o'clock near the residence of John H. Sullivan, at 91 Liberty street. A Ford touring car driven by Berinmanzella, R. F. D. No. 2, Westerly, was proceeding down Liberty street when it was in collision with the Ford roadster, driven by William Anderson of No. 46 John street, Westerly. The touring car had one wheel smashed, as well as fender, axles and headlight broken. The roadster had one wheel smashed, fender and headlight broken. No one was injured. Pawcatuck Police Patrolman C. Wilson Brown investigated.

Westerly Town Sergeant and Police Patrolman George L. Madison was operated upon Saturday afternoon for appendicitis at the Jane Brown Memorial hospital in Providence. Sergeant Madison had been enjoying a two weeks' vacation and has been in camp on Lake Worden. He had planned to visit in Vermont, when taken ill. His condition was reported as favorable on Sunday.

The touring car of L. Ward Alger of 13 Dixon street, Westerly, was bumped by the car of Hugh J. Marshall of 56 Moss street, as the latter machine was driven out of the driveway from the Wilcox coal office on West Broad street on Saturday afternoon about 4.45 o'clock. AMERICAN EDUCATION WEEK

This is American Education week, the purpose of which is to acquaint the public with the work and needs of the American public schools.

It isn't the only special cause that is being advanced this week, for there seems to be almost as many different causes being set forth this week as there are days in it, but when it comes to maintaining good schools it is to be realized that a subject is being touched upon which concerns everyone. It is a subject which cannot fail to bring the rank and file of American citizenry into close touch on a matter of common interest for the country depends upon its future citizens and it is upon the schools that large responsibilities are placed in producing these citizens, for the children of today are the citizens of tomorrow.

Theodore Roosevelt has fittingly said that "The children, wherever they have been born, wherever their parents have been born, who are educated in our schools side by side with one another, will inevitably grow up having that sense of mutual sympathy and mutual respect and understanding which is absolutely indispensable for working out the problems that we, as citizens, have before us."

That is, of course, as true today as the day it was written. It emphasizes the importance of the schools and the training received there, and considering the effect that the public school has upon the lives of the children it is well that this great American institution should have attention focused upon it occasionally in order that it may be better appreciated.

It is quite true with schools as with many other things. When they are out of sight they are out of thought. It is thus well that there should be a period of stock taking, a time when the importance of the schools and the many problems connected therewith should be brought out more prominently to public attention, not only the better to appreciate what is already available, but to get a better understanding of what needs to be provided.

President Coolidge has said "Every American is entitled to a liberal education. Without this, there is no guarantee for the permanence of free institutions, no hope of perpetuating self government." Whether they get this important education depends upon our schools.

MUSIC IN AMERICA

There is at least one Englishman who has been impressed by the United States, or at least by the manner in which the people of this country in his opinion support music and the opera.

This man is Sir Thomas Beecham of England who is the leader of British music and who is chagrined by the way in which the British have failed to respond to his efforts. He is so disappointed over the evident refusal of the English to support opera that he has decided to come to this country, bringing as many musicians as possible, in order to put forth his efforts and talents before an appreciative and responsive audience.

In connection with the disclosure of his intentions, he declared that "broadcasting has ruined all musical art" in England. One might suppose from that that had made a survey of both countries and found that broadcasting was far more detrimental to musical art across the water than it is here. No doubt he is well acquainted with the British situation, but he shouldn't rather the idea that broadcasting is slight in this country. As great a hold as radio may have upon the English people the chances are that it has an even greater hold in this country. But shadow orchestras handsomely."

The United States will in no way undertake to throw cold water upon the plans of Sir Thomas Beecham. Americans do like music and in his efforts, as well as that of others, it can be expected that there will be a happy response on the part of great numbers of music lovers. He has nevertheless given them a reputation in advance which means considerable to live up to, and we surmise that much the same difficulties which are complained of over in England because of broadcasting are liable to be encountered here. Sir Thomas nevertheless indicates that he has confidence and doesn't anticipate disappointment.

HAVING ITS EFFECT

If the theory of the New York gunmen is correct and the Baumes law, which calls for life imprisonment on a fourth conviction for a felony, was responsible for the attempted escape of three gunmen, there is evidence that the underworld has appraised the new law and decided that it seriously interferes with their business and that they must keep away from its operation if they are going to retain their liberty.

They hadn't been sentenced to life imprisonment but they seemed to expect that possibility. They demonstrated that they were willing to take big chances to escape it and when confronted with their inability to get away chose death.

But while the Baumes law is striking terror to the criminals, and thereby doing that was expected in the way of discouraging them in a channel where they were thoroughly at home, it is shown that there is need of doing something equally effective in the way of calling to account those who are in a position to give aid to the criminals in the Tombs and elsewhere. The three gunmen who gave up their lives had help. The authorities say it is possible only for those employed in the jail, or those who visit them, such as lawyers, to do any such smuggling. That should fasten the responsibility upon a reasonable few and their part in causing the death of the warden and guard of the Tombs must be taken into account.

The gunmen have been disposed of. They will give no more bother, but those who aided them remain to be dealt with. Perhaps the Baumes law does not cover their cases as yet, because they haven't a sufficient record, but they can be dealt with otherwise and unless they are careful they may be caught in the very same trap which the gunmen sought to avoid, although the part which they have already played should call for no slight punishment.

If the Baumes law is going to call for a stiffer fight by the felons before conviction the authorities have been given a sufficient warning and must properly guard all avenues to prevent it.

THE WET EXPRESSION

The announcement that the wets were successful in the referendum in California was a bit premature. It was believed that the majority was such that it could not be overcome when the claim was made but the tide of opposition rolled in strong from the outlying territories and swamped the cities, California sticks to its dry law.

Opinions differ as to the effect of the recent tests in the eight states Claims by the supporters of the dry are to the effect that the prohibitionists have received no jolts as the result of the test votes. These are based on the fact that the vote which showed wet sentiment were known to have a strong inclination in that direction and that no real gain has been made for the wet cause.

This is of course countered by the encouragement which is certain to be given for attacks upon the dry law in congress because of the referendum results. It is logical that the representatives of states which have voted wet should be guided by their actions in dealing with that question henceforth. In fact not a few have regarded it as sufficient cause for starting something to change the existing situation.

On the other hand it is bound to be a matter of interest as to what other states will do in view of what the five wet states have already done. Are they going to follow suit at the next opportunity, or are they going to refuse to accept these expressions as a real verdict? Perhaps the drys think the situation has not changed, but there is every reason for believing that it is the conviction of the wets that it has

NO THOROUGHFARE

It is to be expected that those who believe that the doors of this country should be opened to all sorts of radicals, revolutionists and anarchists and that they should be allowed to come and go as they please and spread ideas as generously as they please, can be expected to criticize the decision of the department of state which has said that Madame Kallantay, the representative of soviet Russia, who has been assigned to Mexico City, cannot go through this country to reach her post.

There might be nothing dangerous in permitting her to make a trip across the United States. Perhaps she would be as mum as a clam, keep her ideas to herself and hasten out of the country as the permit which was sought for the right to go across this country might indicate. But it is more than probable that she would be received with great acclaim by those of revolutionary leanings already here, touted as a heroine and encouraged to expound her revolutionary policies.

It was not long ago that another European whose tendencies caused the raising of the same objections sought to come here. It was claimed her idea was simply to visit friends here, but it was brought out that she planned to give a series of talks or lectures, and who is there with a revolutionary bee who cannot be encouraged to talk and harangue at the least provocation?

This country has found it wise to keep out undesirables of various kinds and there seems to be no departure from that policy on the part of the state department not even for a diplomatic representative of a government which we have never recognized and who can get to her destination in other ways.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Excuses to the contrary it was the votes that counted in election results.

It is quite a time until 1928 and yet there is already much guesswork and talk about it.

The man on the corner says: How about a vote of thanks to the delightful November thus far?

It is a little bit early but no one ever thinks these days of getting down the sleigh so as to be ready for the first snow.

Maine is reported as having planted 44,000 apple trees. Is that state going to abandon its entire dependence on potatoes?

Natives think Captain Kidd's treasure is buried at Nantucket. Well that ought to make good advertising for the island, at least.

Our query of a few days ago as to what had become of the old time torch light parades has been answered. They are still held in Concord, N. H.

Now that one of the minor planets has been named Harvard, Yale will never be satisfied till it has tagged a blue flag on one of the major ones.

One city in Massachusetts is to remove all restrictions on parking and take the tags away from the police. That should revive the old days of the end seat hog on the open trolleys.

Where are those old timers who should be paying their election bets these November days or evenings by moving a peanut along with a toothpick or riding the winner through the street in a wheelbarrow?

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Always sift your flour for cakes before and after measuring.

A small pinch of soda added to salad dressing will prevent it from curdling.

To make cake richer always beat eggs, butter and sugar together before adding the flour.

If a curry is made of cooked meat, all browned parts should be removed.

Before wearing your new shoes, put them in a warm place for a few minutes. It will make the leather more pliable.

To clean a bread mixer, pour boiling water into it, cover it with a towel, put the cover on and let stand 10 minutes. It shortens the labor.

In selecting a soup for a meal remember that creamed soups should not be served when there are creamed vegetables or creamed fish to follow.

A tablespoon of ammonia in the basin of water in which hair brushes are washed will loosen every particle of soil. Rinse thoroughly in cold water.

Always keep salads on ice until it is time to serve them. This keeps the lettuce crisp and the fruits or vegetables do not lose their flavor as they are likely to when exposed to heat.

When a water pitcher has become brown inside from hard water, let milk stay in the pitcher until sour. Then your pitcher will be as clean and bright as when new.

When making cream sauce or using flour for thickening, if you use pastry flour it will mix easier, and there will be much less danger of its lumping than if you use bread flour.

The water in which potatoes have been boiled makes excellent potato soup. Add one part of evaporated milk to two parts of potato water, heat, season and serve. It is nourishing, tasty and easy to make.

POLISHES ALUMINUM

Common table salt sprinkled on the outside of the discolored aluminum pan and rubbed with a damp cloth will cause it to shine.

TO TEMPER IRONS

New iron pots and pans can be tempered by filling 'th cold water and heating slowly to boiling temperature. Then allow the water to cool in the vessel.

CLOGGED BURNERS

If the flame is poor on your gas range, boil the burners in a strong solution of washing soda and water. It may only mean the burners are clogged with accumulated grease and a good cleaning would do the trick.

MAKING GOOD TEA

To make good tea the water must be freshly boiled and the tea pot must have been heated by having hot water poured into it.

COOKING HINTS

Mold the jellied salad in the custard cups.

Heat the potato chips in the oven so they will be sure to be crisp.

Remove the cores of apples with a fork before putting them into the oven. They will not burst and will retain their shape.

Since soda costs less than sugar, use it with such acid fruits as plums, gooseberries and rhubarb, so that less sugar will be needed for sweetening. Add a quarter of a teaspoon of soda to each quart of fruit. You will notice a great difference in the quantity of sugar needed.

When baking fish, place a heavy paper over the bottom of the pan and grease it thoroughly; lay the fish on the paper, and when fish is cooked it may be removed without any trouble, and the pan washed easily.

CHILDREN'S FAVORS

Bean bags made of variously colored linens or of one color, marked with initials, are inexpensive and popular favors for the little folks' parties.

FREQUENT AIRINGS

It is well to remember that the closet as well as the bedroom needs airing. Leave the door open frequently and open those windows which will ventilate it most thoroughly.

WASHING WOODWORK

Protect the wallpaper next the woodwork when painting or washing by using a piece of tin about 12 inches long, moving it along beside the board as you work.

TO CLEAN SINKS

Clean your sink drains by pouring down water in which washing soda has been dissolved. In case of any unpleasant odor, pour down a little bichloride of lime.

IN EMERGENCY

For a quick salad, pour mayonnaise dressing over asparagus tips and cover thickly with grated cheese. A strip of pimento will add flavor and color.

PRACTICAL AND PRETTY

Wooden spoons are about as prosaic as anything one could imagine but a set of four different sizes tied together with a bright blue linen tape is a gift any housewife will welcome.

SALT TUBERS

When cooking parsnips, carrots and similar tubers add the salt when they are about half cooked using a teaspoon of salt to each quart of water.

HANKYS BIGGER

Handkerchiefs have grown larger—those designed to peek seductively from pockets are almost man size, even though they may be of very fine linen instead of printed silk.

DICTATES OF FASHION

The velvet hats of this season are very flexible and soft and apparently constructed without any frame.

Shaded English tweed, in pastel colorings particularly in grays and in reds, is very much liked for sport coats.

Having been neglected for so long, all belts, girdles and sashes have taken on a new significance and are featured on all frocks.

While there are many evening capes of velvet and fur, the coat with the full sleeve and a narrow look below the hips is more popular.

Fringe is extremely popular, not only in silk, but in beads of pearls. Shaded fringe is used very effectively. Ostrich fringe is increasing in favor.

The bloused back and uneven hemline are firmly entrenched in the mode. So is the tiered skirt.

An odd note in the winter styles is the use of strictly tailored belts of gold or silver leather on chiffon evening gowns.

The black wool coat banded and collared with nutria or beaver is very smart—black and brown is a smart combination in color as well.

The newest travel coat of soft finished wool are most interesting in design, as motifs and subdued colorings are copied from old tapestries.

At the moment the newest as well as loveliest color featured in children's clothes is a deep rose red the shade of crushed raspberries. It is used for frocks, coats and hats.

Marvelous brocades, which are perfect reproductions of the silks made for the chateau of Josephine at Malmaison, are shown for decorative purposes. The most beautiful have dark red grounds, with the motifs carried out in dull gold.

New modes call for evening hats upon certain occasions and to meet this need designers have created chic little models of velvet combined with metal lace. Many show the influence of the Central African headdress in their silhouette.

EMERALD JEWELRY

In keeping with the vogue of all shades of green is jewelry set with stones that simulate emeralds. A necklace of graduated stones fits close about the throat and is matched by a bracelet. Earrings consist of five stones of graduated size swung between two platinum chains.

AS YOU WISH

The bolero frock grows in popularity and is extremely kind to all types of figures. If will lengthen or shorten the waist as you will, and add or subtract from the height if you know how to manipulate it.

SHORT JACKETS

Detachable short jackets or capes are shown with many of the newest frocks, often of lace or chiffon, and they give the effect of a bolero.

EVENING FROCK

LAUNDRY HINTS

Salt on a newspaper is splendid to smooth one's iron. Rub the iron over it once or twice and see how nicely it works.

Silk articles should always be washed in tepid water with the mildest possible soap. They should be rinsed in the same temperature.

Before putting the clothes boiler away after using, dry with a cloth dampened with kerosene. It prevents the boiler from rusting.

If, after washing, any round or oval articles show signs of gathering up the result of the stitches being to tight stretch and pin the article on a folded towel while perfectly wet. Do not spare pins or trouble to get the work absolutely straight.

When washing the crepe or ratine skirt, hang it on the line by the belt doubled together. It will then dry evenly and require little or no ironing.

WITH WORN RUBBERS

When the heels of your rubbers have holes and the rest is all good, cut the lower part of the heel off, leaving a narrow band to come up over the heel of the shoe, and they will serve a long time.—From the Designer Magazine for June.

TO CLEAN WHITE SATIN

A good way to cleanse white satin is to rub it with the grain with very dry bread crumbs slightly tinged with washing blue. Use a scrap of old white silk to apply. Go over it afterward with a soft brush.

BEGIN AT FEET

This fall, the feminine shopping procedure has been exactly reversed. Once upon a time millinery was the item elegante or the ensemble and entire costumes were planned about the luxuriousness of a 20-inch willow plume or a jeweled head-dress. But now we have literally transferred the jewels and feather to our feet and the shoes form the nucleus about which the costume is assembled.

PIANO PLACEMENT

Be careful how you place your piano, if you want to keep it in good condition. Don't place it against an outside wall. Avoid a position where the end is close to a radiator and the other in a draft from a door or window.

MAKE IT ATTRACTIVE

If you are interested in keeping your kitchen attractive and up to the minute, your help is more likely to be satisfied and take pride in their work.

THEY ARE HARD ON THE TEETH

Before broiling lamb chops, wipe them with a damp cloth, to remove any bits of splintered bone that may be clinging to them.

Mrs. May Dunfee has been named sheriff of St. Clairsville, Ohio, to fill out the unexpired term of her husband, who was killed in a gunfight.

PREPARING ROASTS

To prepare roasts, cover with salt and pepper, and sprinkle over a little flour. If the meat does not seem very fat, add dabs of butter or pork on top.

STICKY SIEVES

When sieves are obstinate and hard to clean, rub the strainer portion with salt. Then wash thoroughly. The operation may be repeated if necessary.

Cancer of the Mouth and Larynx

By Vilray Papin Blair, M. D.
St. Louis, Mo.

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Many laymen feel that cancer of the mouth, exclusive of the lower lip is usually the most to be feared, yet it is my belief that it should be the most curable. This for three reasons, the first two of which are beginning to be rather broadly recognized. The third I do not expect to have so readily accepted.

There are few lesions that can appear in the mouth of an adult of which he will not be aware immediately. Almost without exception all cancers of the mouth are either preceded by some noticeable change, or if a cancer itself develops, it is for a time held in control by the tissues. Discovery in most cases is early, and this is not generally true of cancer in other parts of the body.

During this period a slight operation or proper oral hygiene is all that is necessary to control, absolutely, the disease. This precancerous period is usually measured by months or years.

The second factor bearing on the curability of cancer of the mouth or pharynx is that in only a small per cent of these cases will the "roots" go below the collar bone.

The third reason for my belief that these cancers are the most curable, not at all in accord with the generally accepted belief, is that a cancer of the larynx or in the mouth is ordinarily more amenable to treatment than one occurring anywhere else, with the possible exception of cancers of the rectum.

Most growths and advanced cancers arising in the upper jaw are manageable, and the same operative treatment given cancers in other parts of the body will result in saving many, many lives. The adequate use of radium or x-ray is becoming more popular but unfortunately it is less effective here than in some other parts of the body.

Make the Most of Books

By James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D

Be An Observer

A common knowledge of a good book may be at once the foundation of mutual understanding and friendship. It establishes a bond of sympathy between minds cultivated and informed by contact with noble thoughts. Such sympathy is impossible for those whose minds owing to lack of reading dwell evet in the present amid material things.

Do not content yourself with reading the observations of others; be an observer yourself. Your reading should teach you to observe, but some persons stultify themselves so by constant reading that they lose the power to perceive. Our minds grow by exertion rather than by passive reception. We are put in the world not only to accomplish a certain amount of work, but also to develop our mental and spiritual powers to the fullest extent; to make the most of ourselves.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The observance of History Week which begins throughout the United States today will be directed by a national committee of which the chairman is Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator from Indiana. Since his retirement from the senate in 1911 Mr. Beveridge has devoted himself to historical research and writings with such success that he has won a place among the eminent American historians. His life of John Marshall has been pronounced by critics to be one of the best biographies written by an American author in many years. Mr. Beveridge began as a farmer's boy, then resorted to railroading as a day laborer, and then to logging and teaming. He worked his way through De Pauw university and after his graduation became a successful lawyer and an orator of national reputation.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Why New Haven Road Burns Ties

Mr. Editor: In The Bulletin of November 3, under the Danielson news, appeared an item in criticism of the practice of burning old ties, and I wonder if you will let me explain this matter from the railroad's standpoint.

This is rather an old story, for the criticism pops up every now and then at various points on the system. The suggestion is usually made that these old ties should be given to needy families for use as fuel.

As a matter of fact, for a great many years the New Haven railroad did give away old ties to practically anyone who wanted to take them away, but finally we were compelled to discontinue the practice because of the hazard involved, both to the people who thus came upon our property, and to the safety of train operation; also, because in many instances those to whom ties were given came on our property and took away good ties along with the old ones.

In order to obviate these difficulties the railroad considered the practicability of picking up these old ties itself and placing them at convenient locations. A careful study of the amount of labor and other costs developed that to do this would cost approximately 25c per tie, merely to gather them, load them, and haul them to some particular point. It was not felt that the railroad was justified in increasing its costs to this amount—especially as this cost would represent more than the ordinary cost to purchase cord wood.

We also considered the matter from the viewpoint of using the ties ourselves as fuel in stations, towers, section houses, etc., instead of coal. It was found, however, that taking everything into consideration, the cost per cord of wood would amount, in many cases, to more than the cost of a ton of coal.

Then, entirely aside from the philanthropic and economic viewpoints, there is the undoubted fact that these ties are not nearly so acceptable for fuel as they may appear at a glance. Some of them are in a considerably decayed condition and thus of little value. Most of the rest of them are deeply imbedded with gravel and many who have tried the experiment of cutting them up for firewood found the job not worth the candle, resulting in spoiling good saws and ruffling good tempers.

Sincerely yours,
LESLIE H. TYLER.

The young business woman recently came into her office wearing a silk mannish shirt beneath her smartly tailored suit.

"Where's your tie this morning?" questioned the "chief" from behind the desk.

He Knew What He Wanted

While a mother was looking for books at the library her two small sons found entertainment in looking over some of the magazines. They were especially interested in one containing pictures of dogs. The older boy stroked the collies picture over and over, while the younger one looked on.

When the mother had received the book she wanted she beckoned to the boys. The older one obeyed but the little fellow protested saying: "Please mother, I want to spread the dog."

Withered Branches

"If a man abide not in Me—he is withered."—John XV: 6.

The torrid sun of worldly gains
And sensual pleasures fiercely beats
With burning rays upon our souls.
Nor may one hide from scorching heat—
And warmth in measure we may need,
"I pray not from the world to take,
But save," prayed Christ, "from worldly greed,
Preserve from withering, nor forsake."

"Abide in Me—in Me believe,
I'm the true Vine, its branches ye,
Truths which I hold, humbly receive,
Or severed from Me, withered be."
Yet His plain warnings, scarce we hear,
With half-faith questions follow then,
While self-conceits thus bold appear,
Trusting ideals woven by men.

What Christ himself believed, must we
Or, withered, off the Vine we're pruned.
Unquestioning faith, like His should be
To all He taught hearts well attuned—
Search then His life—His Gospel clear—
Life founded on the truths He taught,
God's love—souls cross-redeemed—appear
In teachings none can set at naught.

"Many beliefs—which can one choose?"
Choose what believed the Christ Divine,
All other teachings dare refuse
Lest, withered, drop ye from the Vine—
"Believest thou the Christ?" If not
Soon failing to the soil ye lie
Where doubts and unbelief rage hot
'Neath burning rays from worldly sky.

Alas! How many branches strewn
Wide scattered o'er the vineyard's ground.
No life—its semblance only shown—
Hearts dry, no fruits of love abound—
While rings Christ's challenge in our ears,
"In God ye trust, why not in Me?"
And blest the soul who childlike hears
"Bide in the Vine, or withered be."
—Rev. George G. Phipps.

Beloved You Are Free

Beloved you are free—
As free as winds that blow
Across a moon-kissed sea:
God's love now makes you so.

Beloved you are free:
There's nothing can enthrall
Your soul's own liberty,
Because God's love is all.

Beloved you are free;
All bondage melts away;
In freedom's harmony
God reigns in love today.

It is a complete little building, with sleeping and living quarters included. WEDDING
Cross-Lyman

An attractive wedding took place at six o'clock Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Orville L. Clarke, No. 21 Annawan street, Hartford, when their niece Miss Adaline Gladys Lyman, became the bride of Robert Ellis Cross, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Cross of No. 76 Maple street, this city.

The bridal party entered the parlor as the bridal chorus from Lohengrin was played by Francis' orchestra, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Dr. John H. Bell, pastor of the South Park M. E. church before a bank of palms and ferns. The flower girl was Marguerite Virginia Strong of Hartford, niece of the bride, the maid of honor was Miss Lillian M. Cross of this city, sister of the groom, and the best man was Dr. Theodore F. Story of Somerville, Mass.

The bride was charming in a gown of white satin crepe, embroidered, with veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was gowned in georgette over pink silk, with pearl and silver trimmings and carried a bouquet of pink rosebuds. The flower girl wore pink voile with val lace and carried pink chrysanthemums.

The bride received many handsome gifts, including gold, silver, glass and money.

The gift to the maid of honor was a platinum ring and to the flower girl, a string of beads. The ushers received silver knives.

A reception followed the ceremony, the ushers being Louis R. Lyman, cousin of the bride and Wilson D. Beebe, both of Hartford. The dining room and bride's table were prettily done in pink and white. Guests were present from Hartford, Somerville, Mass., East Lyme and Norwich.

The bride's ancestors came to this country in the Hooker party which located in Massachusetts and Connecticut and the groom is a descendant of the first Stanton to land in this country. The bride has been for several years head of the transit department of the Phoenix National bank in Hartford and is a graduate of the Hartford high school. Mr. Cross was graduated from the Norwich Free Academy in the class of 1910, Trinity college 1914 and is now a division engineer of the city of Hartford.

The couple left on a three weeks' wedding trip to Washington and Richmond and on their return will make their home for the present at 21 Annawan street, Hartford.

Norwich Produce Market

Native apples still the feature of the fruit market, are offered freely with good demand. McIntosh are nearly gone and replaced by later varieties. Moderate supplies of winter apples are being sold in bushel baskets $1.50-$2.50 and a few in barrels $4.00-$5.50. The demand for western apples continues poor. California table grapes are slightly easier and New York Concords remain unchanged.

Normal supplies of vegetables are offered at practically unchanged prices with a normal demand. Native celery is nearly cleaned up and more shipped in stock is being used. Onions and potatoes both continue very firm but there is no change in prices. Moderate supplies of spinach offered at 75c and $1.00.

Poultry is offered more freely with practically no change in prices. Fresh eggs continue very scarce and have advanced a little. Butter is also firm but lard is somewhat easier.

Dressed meats and grains remain steady.

WM. WILLIAMS FOUND DYING—HAS NIECE IN NORWICH

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTMINSTER, Conn., Nov. 7—At 7 o'clock this morning William Williams died here. He was a carpenter by trade and had always lived in this region, for some time with the family of Thomas Colburn, but for a number of years lived alone in a tiny cottage built by himself on land belonging to Albert Pelley close to Frank Pellett's home, frequently working for Albert Pellett. He had been employed in Hebron for several weeks, coming home week ends, and expected to returns thre the past week. Tuesday he was in a store making purchases and since his death it was remarked that he then seemed weak and somewhat dazed. His neighbors not seeing him for several days supposed him away. Saturday Mr. Pellett rapped at his door, hearing Williams voice but no other response. Searching, Mr. Pellett found an unfastened window and entered the cottage, finding two lamps burning and Mr. Williams in bed, his left side paralyzed, and evidence that he had had a fall. A doctor who was summoned pronounced the patient suffering from shock. He was cared for durin gthe day and night and every possible effort made to get in touch with his only known relative east of California, a niece, Mrs. J. A. Johnson, of 66 Baltic street Norwich, but thus far she has not been located. Mr. Williams was an able carpenter, was scrupulously honest, fond of music, of good mind and heart, rather silent, but greeting others with kindly words and smiles. He will be greatly missed in the neighborhood.

THE HAPPY HOUSEWIFE

Four walls can make a house, but it takes a woman to make a home.

The woman who prepares nourishing and attractive meals, does her housework without grumbling, raises a family of healthy boys and girls and still finds time to be a pal to her husband and a friend to her neighbors, is accomplishing the biggest job in the world. Homes like hers—little havens of peace and love—are the bulwark of the nation.

To be a successful homemaker a woman must guard her health. When mother is not well, the home is upset. Women everywhere are learning through their own personal experiences the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How to Gain 5 Pounds in 30 Days

If You Don't Do It, Get Your Money Back

Ask Lee & Osgood Co. or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets. They cost but little, are sugar coated and as pleasant to take as candy.

It's the new pleasant way to take nasty Cod Liver Oil and will not upset the most delicate stomach.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 pounds or more in 30 days. As a matter of fact, your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on 5 pounds in 30 days.

One thin woman gained 15 pounds in six weeks.

JIMMY WILLIAMS STARS AS ACADEMY DOWNS WILBY HIGH BY 23 TO 0 SCORE

After playing mediocre football for the first two periods on Saturday at the campus, the Academy came out strong at the resumption of play for the third quarter and before 5 minutes had elapsed they had scored 21 points and practically sewed up the contest from Wilby High of Waterbury. The final score was 23 to 0. The locals were rather off-form during the first half, scoring but two points and missing easy chances to roll up points. However, it was a determined, fighting eleven that took the field for the second half and scores began to come thick and fast before this period was very old.

Successive touchdowns by Vitilano as the result of a 40 yard run after intercepting a forward pass by Hussey on a 12 yard run after recovering a blocked kick and a 55 yard gallop by Williams on a forward pass interception and a field goal by Williams from the 25 yard line accounted for the twenty one points in this sudden exhibition of offensive power shown by the locals.

Wilby Outclassed

Wilby High was outclassed practically from the start in all departments of the game. The invaders had the ball inside the locals 30 yard line but once and then on a recovered fumble and after 4 tries to gain lost the ball on downs. Both teams made liberal use of the forward pass as a means of gaining ground but the majority of these passes were unsuccessful or intercepted.

The Academy, except for their scoring spasm in the third quarter, played but mediocre football, missing not a few chances for further scores. It was probably due to the fact of the Bulkeley game a week hence, that N. F. A. did not show their usual brand of football, taking it easy for fear of further additions to the already long list of injured members, but whatever, was the cause the fact remains that the Academy will have to play a great deal better ball if they expect to beat Bulkeley here next Saturday. Bulkeley has been going along at a fast pace this season to date and the locals are sure in for a tough afternoon's work in the annual battle between the two ancient rivals.

Williams, Vitilano, who replaced Jack Marks after the latter was injured in the first play of the game and Labenski did the best work for the Academy in the backfield while Hussey and Schwartz played well on the line. Williams' dash for a touchdown was a feature and his drop-kick was also a neat bit of work. Vitilano played a hard game and was responsible for quite a lot of the ground gained, while Hussey played a nice game at end, and Labenski and Schwartz did good defensive work.

Wilby Threatens

The Academy received the kickoff to open the game, Marks running it back 20 yards to his own 36 yard line. One first down came on 3 line plays bringing the ball to mid-field but then the Academy fumbled after 3 plays and Wilby recovered on Norwich 38 yard stripe. However, the team from the Brass City could gain little and lost the ball on downs on Norwich 24 yard line. The Academy fumbled on the following play and Wilby recovered on the locals 16 yard line but again they could gain little and managed to score on a dropkick but the attempt was wide of its mark and after the ball had been brought out and put in play the Academy made two first downs to mid-field being forced to kick and Labenski's punt went down to Wilby's 15 yard line, but the Waterbury team again could not gain and kicked to Norwich 43 yard line after 3 plays and the first quarter then ended after the following play with Academy in possession of the ball on their own 36 yard line.

Academy Fails to Score

To open the second quarter the Academy reeled off a series of first downs and brought the ball to Wilby's 4 yard line before many minutes of this period had elapsed. However, after two tries at the line had brought the ball but to the 2 yard line, Labenski attempted a forward pass as a means of scoring but Christopher, the Wilby right half back, standing on his goal line, intercepted and ran out to his 20 yard line.

Wilby lost on the next two plays and then, on the third play, Waterbury center passed badly and the ball rolled over the goal line where Hussey and Schwartz tackled Siani for a safety, adding the first two points to the score.

The remainder of the half was taken up with the play being in mid-field.

Academy Scores

It was now that the crowd was to receive the thrills that came thick and fast during the first few minutes of the second half. Kahn kicked off for the Academy and Walsh was downed on his own 30 yard line. Wilby attempted to pass on the first play with the so-called "hidden end" trick being used but Vitilano intercepted and ran 40 yards for a touchdown. Williams attempted to try for extra point by dropkick went wide of the posts leaving the score 8 to 0.

Norwich kicked off and again the ball was downed at the visitors 30 yard line. After Wilby had lost ground on three plays, they attempted to kick but the punt was blocked and Hussey broke through and caught the ball on the fly and ran 13 yards for the score. Again, the try for extra point by dropkick went wide of its mark making the score 14 to 0.

Kahn kicked off again and Reilly was dropped on his own 20 yard line. After 3 plays had gained little the visitors kicked to mid-field. Norwich, after a first down had a pass intercepted but Wilby fumbled after 3 plays on their own 30 yard line. Williams then stepped back to the 25 yard line and booted 3 more points into the score by a pretty dropkick for a field goal, making the score to 17 to 0.

Norwich again kicked off and Wilby was downed on her own 25 yard line. After 3 plays the invaders sent a long pass down the grid-iron and Williams intercepted and ran 55 yards for the final score, the try for extra point by drop kick again going wide of the posts.

The remainder of the third period was taken up with play between the 40 yard lines and the quarter ended with Norwich ball at mid-field.

In the final period the Academy came close to scoring again after taking the ball on downs from Wilby on the latter's 18 yard line but the locals fumbled after 2 plays on the 14 yard line. Several substitutes now made their appearance in the Academy line-up and Wilby then proceeded to show something in the nature of offensive strength bringing the ball up to Norwich 23 yard line where a forward pass was intercepted by Vitilano. Wilby then intercepted a Norwich pass but could not gain and kicked to Tirrell who ran back to Wilby 40 yard line. By a series of forward passes the Academy brought the ball up to Wilby 12 yard where a pass was intercepted by Wilby. After one play the game ended with Wilby in possession of the ball on their own 12 yard line.

WINDHAM BEATS CHAPMAN IN LAST FOUR MINUTES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 7.—In a loosely played game at Recreation park here Saturday afternoon, Windham High nosed out to a victory of 14 to 7 over Chapman Tech of New London. The winning points did not come until the final quarter when the teams returned to the field with score 7 to 7. Windham scored first in the opening period, Saba making a fine 25 yard run around the right wing. Rood then repeated for a 30 yard run around the left end for a touchdown. Os Haggerty's fumble in midfield, Chapman Tech took its chance to level the score. Miller sped for a 45 yard run through the center of the field for a touchdown. Chapman played a hard game in the last stages in a desperate attempt to hold the score tie. Windham was held fastened to the center of the field until the last four minutes of play. Wilkinson sailed an aerial ball to Hoci who stood on Chapman's 18 yard line. Rood upset a Chapman lad in his plunge over the goal line. Wojick kicked the goal.

TIGERS DOWN NUTMEGS IN HARD-FOUGHT GAME

The Greeneville Tigers definitely established their claim for city amateur championship for the season by administering a 13 to 0 defeat to the Nutmegs at J. B. Martin field on Sunday afternoon before a large crowd.

Both sides showed inexperience and lack of signals, probably due to the fact that it was the first game of the season for the winners and the first game in five weeks for the losers.

The first touchdown came in the first period when after the Tigers had received the kickoff they marched down the field to the score, using principally straight line plays. Rudy Courbois went over for the score after a 10 yard end run. Norm Courbois drop-kicked the extra point after touchdown. The remainder of the first period and the second quarter the play was fairly even.

The last score came in the third period when after both sides had divided possession of the ball for the first part of the quarter the Tigers recovered a fumble on the Nutmeg's 42 yard line. After one first down Nelson went around end for 30 yards and the score. The try for extra point by drop-kick was blocked.

Nelson, Norm Courbois and Gay did the best work for the Tigers while Pedace, Capt. F. McGrath and Lupinacci played well for the Nutmegs.

HARVARD'S BEST PASSER IS OUT FOR SEASON

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 7.—(AP)—Harvard's football eleven, defeated by Princeton yesterday in the first big three clash of the season, lost more than a football game. The Crimson coaches, taking stock today after the damaging incursion of the Tiger, were compelled to write off as a total loss Harvard's forward passing attack.

Guarnaccia, admittedly the bulwark of the Crimson's aerial game, was the only member of the squad seriously injured in yesterday's game. As a result of a heavy tackle while he was carrying the ball he was badly shaken up, and several ribbs were bruised. It was indicated today that he probably would be out for the remainder of the season.

Horween faces the choice of developing another forward passer on short notice or reverting to Harvard's traditional style of gridiron conservatism for the games yet on the Crimson schedule. It was said that Henry Chauncey, drop kick expert who made a good showing yesterday as relief halfback, was the logical heir of Guarnaccia's mantle, but his training for the role must needs be intensive.

In addition to Guarnaccia, Captain Coady and Arthur French, tackle and halfback respectively, were on the injured list, but their hurts were nothing more serious than bruises. Both were expected to report for practice by Tuesday.

BULKELEY AND CENTRAL PLAY TO TIE SCORE

NEW LONDON, Nov. 7.—Bulkeley High of this city and Central High of Bridgeport played a seven point tie Saturday afternoon at Morgan park. Bridgeport started off with a rush and within five minutes of the opening whistle, scored. The Park City team averaged much heavier than the Bulkeley squad. The second and third quarters were played with no scoring by either side. Bulkeley finally broke up after the first score, though Bridgeport got to within two feet of the local goal, but was unable to cross the line. Several times they carried the ball nearly to the line, but the local lads held them. In the fourth quarter Captain Gray received a pass from Locke and went 70 yards for a touchdown. Marshal easily scored the extra point, tying the score.

Bulkeley completed six out of ten passes and lost only ten yards on penalties, where Bridgeport used eleven passes, completing only six, and was penalized forty-seven yards.

DEMPSEY TO BOX PERSSON OR BERLENBACH

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey will make his return to the ring this winter, probably against the winner of a match between Paul Berlenbach and Harry Persson, Tex Rickard expects.

Returning from Chicago where he plans to erect another "garden" which will accommodate 20,000, Rickard discounted rumors that a rival promoter would feature Dempsey in his comeback fight. He asserted that the former champion was pledged to box only under his own direction and that he had signed Persson for the remainder of the season.

Negotiations are now under way for the match between the Swedish heavyweight and the mormer holder of the 175-pound title.

Putnam Beaten.

At Webster on Saturday, Bartlett High School defeated Putnam High School football team by a score of 9 to 6. This is the second game of the series between the schools, Putnam having won the first game.

YALE TEAM MAKES DECIDEDLY POOR SHOWING AGAINST LITTLE MARYLAND

For three successive games has Yale failed to score and at the present rate will equal the disastrous record of 1915 when the Bulldog lost five games. Saturday it was the University of Maryland, using but 13 men during the entire game, that bumbled the mighty Blue football machine. The Old Liners, a team made up of mere youths who were getting their first football experience, had plenty of tricks in their bag and they spilled them much to the chagrin of Yale's warriors.

Myron Stevens, captain of the Maryland team, led the attack against the Yale team and his broken field running even excelled that of the renown Harry Wilson of the Army who a week ago roved at will through the Yale defense. Stevens, weighing but 154 pounds, flashed in and out through the Yale team, shaking off tacklers like water. He skirted the ends for long gains and threw and received passes with equal ability. It was Stevens who raced 65 yards in the first few minutes of play for a touchdown and it was Stevens who booted the ball between the uprights in the second period for an additional three points.

Stevens was not alone in the glory of Maryland's victory. Sharing the limelight was Kessler, the Maryland quarterback, who run back of punts was a thing of football beauty. Kessler in returning one of Garvey's punts raced and twisted his way through the entire Yale team and it was only the fleet-footed Switz that pulled him down from behind with a pretty flying tackle on Yale's ten yard line.

Maryland's line functioned perfectly both on the offense and also on the defense. The ends nailed runner after runner almost before he was started. The fast traveling backfield of Maryland, Stevens, Linkous, Thomas and Kessler worked like a well oiled machine giving the ball carrier beautiful interference. On the defensive Stevens and Kessler were the men that saved Maryland time and again, going into play after play and nailing runners that had broken loose.

As usual Yale's handling of the ball was sloppy, and the aerial attack was a total loss. Yale threw passes with utter disregard of where they were going or whether there was any chance of a Yale man receiving them. Their passing game would not have done credit to a good high school team. The only real consistent ground gainers for Yale were Garvey and Switz but Garvey was worked to a frazzle and Switz was not able to do much without Garvey. Yale used a large part of her reserves until the game was so far gone there was no chance of winning then sent in a number of first string substitutes in Foot, Decker, Swiss, Ordway, McGunigle and Crile. But even this addition to the Yale team helped but little, for Maryland's heady quarterback outguessed the Yale general.

Maryland was somewhat over-awed by the mighty reputation of Yale in the first few minutes of play but this feeling of diffidence was soon over and then it was good night Yale. After Garvey's fatal fumble in the first period it is edoubtful if Yale's first water team could have stop the Maryland team after their first taste of blue blood. With their first score safely tucked away Maryland started a march down the field for 52 yards, Stevens contributing runs of 20 and 32 yards only to be halted at Yale's 24-yard line from where he tried a drop-kick that went wild. At the beginning of the second quarter Kessler ripped off 60 yards through the Yale team to the Yale ten-yard stripe. Four plays found Maryland only a yard from Yale's stronghold. Yale tried two rushes and then kicked but Adams, Maryland right tackle rushed in and blocked the kick and fell on it on Yale's seven-yard line. Three plays failed to gain the goal and Stevens dropped back and kicked a neat field goal.

With the score 9 to 0 against them, Yale started to realize what it was all about and snapped into it. Several passes and a 20 yard run by Failing brought the ball within striking distance. With time fast speeding toward the half time mark, Yale took much time to consider plays with the result that the whistle ended the half with the ball resting on Maryland's one-yard stripe.

The Maryland team during the last few minutes of the first half was apparently tiring but they came out from their session with Curly Byrd refreshed in mind and body. They proved it by stopping Yale's attack on Yale's own 46-yard line. Then with a 17-yard run by Stevens brought the ball to the shadow of Yale's goal posts, the posts which now decorate the Maryland campus. Alternating plunges by Thomas and Stevens put the ball across, Thomas taking across the last chalk mark.

The Maryland quarterback thought that his team had enough points for one day and settled down to a purely defensive game. He preferred to let Yale run themselves ragged in trying to save themselves from the ignominy of a scoreless defeat. As fast as Yale would punt Kessler would return and Yale would have to start all over. It was a tiring game for Yale and Jones toward the last few minutes of play rushed in Rip Ordway and McGunigle. Ordway made some progress but was soon slowed up while McGunigle in his passing did not look so good. McGunigle, after Maryland had muffed a punt and Yale had recovered, tried a drop-kick which was as wild as his forward passes and thus the game ended.

The Yale varsity viewed the game from the stands in civilian clothes but what Jones had in mind is a mystery. It perhaps might be that Jones did not care if another smudge was added to an already much besmirched record. One more defeat did not matter if only he could have his beauties for the Big Three games. It must have been an awful shock to Jones when he learned that Princeton had downed Harvard while his charges were being wiped in the mire of defeat by Maryland. Only overwhelming victories over the Tiger and the Crimson can atone for the bitter potions that Yale has been forced to swallow during the past three weeks. Can Jones do it, is the uppermost question that is in the minds of Yale alumni. Yale grads are asking questions about the morale of the Yale team and the most frequent question heard is, "Is it best that a Yale captain should have such absolute power?" and "Is there friction on the Yale team?"

Taken all in all, Yale has two tough games ahead and will be lucky to win one of them. Why not put the Connecticut Aggies on Yale's schedule next year?

REMARKABLE RUNNING FEAT BY TWO MEXICAN INDIANS

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7.—(AP)—What is believed to be one of the most remarkable running performances in sporting history, if, indeed, the feat has parallel in modern athletics, was witnessed today when two Tarahumare Indians, Tomas Zafiro and Leonicio Sammiguel, ran more than 100 kilometres, or 62 1-2 miles, on the highway from Pachuca to Mexico City, in 9 hours 37 minutes. They finished fresh and fit; they were not panting and showed no evidence of fatigue and were apparently in shape to have continued running much longer.

Zafiro and Sammiguel started this morning at 3.05 at Pachuca bearing a letter from the governor of Hidalgo state. All the way to Mexico City they kept up their pace. They crossed across the city to the athletic stadium, and in the presence of a great cheering crowd delivered the letter to Governor Serrano of the federal district, who was surrounded by a party of high government officials.

Instead of the laurel wreath bestowed upon the ancient Greek marathon runners Governor Serrano placed around the brow of each Indian a bright crimson silk bandanna handkerchief—their favorite adornment. Throughout the race each had carried a red cotton one. For many miles outside of Mexico City the highway was lined with crowds which waited for hours to see and cheer the runners. Motor police kept the roads clear, and ambulances and automobiles of observers accompanied the Indians for the entire distance.

RUNNING FEAT HAS NEVER BEEN EQUALED

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—The feat of two Tarahumare Indians, Tomas Zafiro and Leonicio Sanmiguel, in running 62 1-2 miles between Pachuca and Mexico City today in nine hours and 37 minutes has never been equalled among modern recorded performances.

In 1882, J. Saunders during a run of 120 miles and 275 yards in New York, covered the first sixty-two miles in 10 hours, 10 minutes and 50 seconds, and sixty-three miles in 10 hours, 20 minutes and 50 seconds, or almost a full hour slower than the time of the Indians today. Saunders, however, went on to complete the 120 miles and a fraction in 22 hours and 49 minutes.

The only other comparative performance in official records is that of W. C. Davies, who ran 54 miles in 1882, in eight huors and 23 minutes. The best walk of sixty three miles recorded is that of G. B. Gillie, who covered the distance in 12 hours, 27 minutes and 40 seconds during a 100 mile jaunt in 1875 since 1882 no run of such a length has crept into the record books.

Treatment of the runners by massage of the arms and legs as was done by Red Cross ambulance men during the run today, might prevent such a performance being accepted as a record in the United States where no outside help may be given a runner during a race. The taking of nourishment and short rest periods of a few seconds would have no effect on officials here as marahton runners often slow to a walk or stop entirely for nourishment during American contests.

ACADEMY TO PLAY YALE FRESHMAN TEAM THANKSGIVING

The Academy football squad will meet the Yale university freshman B squad here Thanksgiving day in place of the Alumni game, which was originally scheduled. The game with the Yale team should prove a large drawing card and this eleven can be depended upon to give the Academy a much stiffer battle than would be the case with the Alumni as the opposition.

INTERCLASS CROSS-COUNTRY RUN AT ACADEMY TUESDAY

The annual interclass cross-country run will be held at the Academy on Tuesday afternoon when teams representing all four classes will compete over the two-mile course. There is no little interest in the meet as a cup has been given for the class winning the meet. This cup is on exhibition at Bliss' jewelry store on Main street.

The Squirrel Cousins Are Worried

Always worry can be found
By any one who looks around.
—Old Mother Nature.

It is a fact. It is the easiest thing in the world to find something to worry about. Worrying is the favorite pastime of a great many people. They are unhappy because they worry so much, but they would be unhappy if they didn't worry. They won't admit it, but they find a certain amount of pleasure in worrying.

But sometimes there is really good reason for worrying. The Squirrel cousins—Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel, Chatterer the Red Squirrel, Rusty the Fox Squirrel, Timmy the Flying Squirrel and Striped Chipmunk,—had made a discovery which was causing a great deal of worry to all of them. They had discovered that there was something wrong with the chestnut trees. They had noticed that most of the chestnut trees had been sick all summer. Now that they thought of it, they remembered that the year before chestnuts had not been as plentiful as usual and there had seemed to be something wrong with the trees. They hadn't thought much about it through the summer, but now it was fall and winter would soon be here, and there were almost no chestnuts. That meant that they must find food of other kinds.

They had discovered that there was something wrong with the chestnut trees

Now, there always had been a great many chestnut trees, and of course that had meant a great many chestnuts. There were not so many hickory trees or beech trees. All of them liked beechnuts, but so did a great many other people. Buster Bear liked beechnuts; Mr. and Mrs. Grouse liked beechnuts; Lightfoot the Deer liked beechnuts; Bobby Coon liked beechnuts; so there really were not enough beechnuts to go around. Besides, it was slow work storing away enough beechnuts to last all winter.

There were not so many looking for hickory nuts, but neither were there so many nuts. In fact, it was a very poor crop. So there was real reason for the Squirrel cousins to worry.

Now Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel and Rusty the Fox Squirrel were the biggest of the Squirrel cousins. Little Striped Chipmunk didn't stand any show at all against them. But though the others were so big, Chatterer the Red Squirrel was more than a match for them. Chatterer is a fighter and he can move so much more quickly than his big cousins that he had no fear of them. So Chatterer felt quite equal to getting his share of the hickory nuts. The only trouble was that while he was carrying away a nut to his own storehouse, Happy Jack and Rusty had plenty of opportunity to get their share. So for a while Chatterer didn't try to store away any nuts. He spent all his time trying to keep his two bigger cousins from getting any. He chased them out of the best trees and as he chased them back and forth and round and round, jumping from branch to branch, they managed to shake down some of those hickory nuts.

Now Striped Chipmunk took no part in the quarrel. He doesn't like to climb trees anyway. But there is nothing stupid about Striped Chipmunk. While he took no part in the quarrel between Chatterer and the bigger cousins he missed no chance to keep that quarrel going. You see, Striped Chipmunk was worrying about his own winter food supply, but he knew he wouldn't have to worry long if only he could keep that quarrel going. As long as his cousins raced around up in those treetops and knocked down the hickory nuts, he could fill his storehouse rapidly. And this is just what he was doing. He always took care to keep out of sight as much as possible, but whenever a fat hickory nut fell, Striped Chipmunk was pretty sure to have it inside of a few minutes. Meanwhile, the days were growing colder; and the hickory nuts were growing scarcer, and the Squirrel cousins were worrying more and more, all except Striped Chipmunk.

PRINCETON'S VICTORY OVER HARVARD IS FEATURE OF EASTERN COLLEGE GAMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—(AP)—Princeton's Tigers once again have timed their spring for the big "kill" by overcoming Harvard in their first clash of the 1926 series for the "big three" championship, the Bengals not only checked a threatened Crimson advance but displayed a return to form that seems likely to carry them to the top of the classic eastern triumvirate for the second straight year.

Only Yale stands in the way of the Tiger bid for closing glory and the Elis do not appear equal to the task of stopping the rampaging jungle cast headed by the elusive and versatile Jack Siagle.

Yale, with reserves in the front line, most of the time, took its third defeat of the season at the hands of Maryland Saturday, 15-0, rather than run risks with the regulars a week before the Bulldog meets the Tiger.

Princeton has another eleven combination of Bill Roper, coaching "Miracle Man," and Siagle, Harvard, on the up-grade, had been acclaiming its own mentor, Arnold Horween, as something of a miracle worker previously but his sturdy squad yielded Saturday for the third straight year to the spell of the Roper-Siagle magic. There was flaws in both machines as they played at Cambridge but Princeton's 12-0 margin was decisive enough to demonstrate that the Tigers have again reached top notch form for the battles with their ancient rivals.

This was Siagle's last fling at the Crimson and there will be no shedding of tears in Harvard yard on that account. In three seasons of conflict this triple threat star has run wild through the Crimson ranks. He has been the main factor in the Tiger onslaught that has rolled up 82 points against Harvard without yielding a single tally.

Yale's defeat by Maryland, even though at the expense of blue secondaries, was the outstanding upset of eastern gridirons. The Blue apparently underestimated the southern eleven, which uncovered an all around star in Myron Stevens.

Eight teams remained undefeated in the race for sectional honors but one of them, Holy Cross, had its slate marred by an unexpected tie with Fordham, 7-7, while several others had close calls. New York University's sensational team which had run rough shod over previous opposition found a stone wall opposition in Carnegie and only triumphed, 6-0, as a result of two field goals by Kenneth Strong. Boston College also was given a scare before downing Villanova, 19-7.

Army, Navy and Brown, now the "big three" of the title hunt, all swept secondary opposition aside to maintain their unbeaten marches. Brown won from Norwich 27-0, but the service elevens experienced little difficulty, Navy overwhelming West Virginia Wesleyan, 53-7, while the Cadets, with Harry Wilson running wild, smothered Franklin and Marshall 55-0.

Major tests await all three of these championships contenders next Saturday with Brown opposing Harvard, the army meeting Knute Rockne's undefeated Notre Dame team in New York and the Navy Battling Georgetown, which upset Syracuse Saturday, 13-7.

Lafayette had little trouble keeping its slate clean at the expense of Rutgers, 27-0, while Maine ran its streak to seven straight, and clinched the state championship by downing Bowdoin 21-6.

Pennsylvania, beaten by Illinois a week ago by the margin of a field goal, kept its unbeaten record on eastern soil intact by the same narrow margin in an unexpectedly close tussle with Penn State. Columbia, this week's opponent for Penn, also had a close call against William and Mary, 13-10.

Williams' defeat of Wesleyan, 28-14, cleared the decks for the decisive test of the "little three" championship series next Saturday. Amherst, moving forward with a 25-0 victory over Union, will be the favorite against Williams at this New England classic.

Cornell and Dartmouth, another pair of traditional rivals, face their annual battle this week at Ithaca after victories over minor opposition. The big Red eleven beat St. Bonaventure, 41-0, while the Green overthrew Boston University, 32-0. The Cornell-Darthmouth fray shares Saturday's spotlight up-state with the annual clash between Syracuse and Colgate, which conquered Providence, 28-0, yesterday.

Pittsburgh and Washington and Jefferson, drilling for a renewal of their feud this week, registered decisive victories. The Panthers upset West Virginia, 17-7, while the Presidents crushed Bethany, 26-0.

NEW LONDON STORE-KEEPERS SOUR ON LETTING OUT GOODS ON TRUST

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 7—New London store-keepers are said to have drawn the line on allowing credit to patrons much faster than it has ever been drawn before. It was a case of doing that or giving away goods that are not to be paid for. One merchant has expressed the opinion that even patrons who are good pay frequently get away with the last bill that is sent them, because they have nothing to lose and all to gain, if they are to leave the city.

PROVIDENCE AUTHORITIES WANT KENNETH DAVIS

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 7—Kenneth Davis, former United States Coast Guardsman, who is a prisoner at the county jail here awaiting trial with Charles Hummell, in Jefferson avenue, charged with stealing an automobile owned by William F. McGarry, 111 Washington street, Norwich, in this city a month ago, will probably spend a much longer time incarcerated than he anticipated. When he serves the sentence imposed for the theft of the automobile he will be re-arrested and taken to Providence, where he will be tried on a charge of embezzlement. The Providence police today informed the New London police that the former municipality held a warrant for the arrest of Davis on the embezzlement charge and they were informed that as soon as the case pending against Davis here is disposed of, he will be delivered to the Providence police.

BRONX SALESMAN THREW BOTTLE FROM SPEEDING CAR

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 7—Timothy F. Holt, 39, salesman, of 1438 Rosedale avenue, Bronx, New York, was arrested this morning by Patrolmen George Perkins and Lawrence Fardy charged with driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. He furnished a bond for his appearance in the police court Monday morning. Holt was driving his auto through Bank street at 3 o'clock and in a manner that attracted the attention of the officers. Holt was halted and just before the auto was brought to a stop, Holt is alleged to have hurled a bottle containing liquor from the car, the bottle crashing and being demolished on the pavements.

Judging from complaints made to the police this morning there were wholesale thefts committed at the salvation Army lodging house, corner of State and North Bank streets earlier in the day. The police received three allegations from uniformed men that they had been robbed while they slept. The complaints were delayed in being made, but an investigation is being conducted. The complainants are Louis E. Nall and Francis E. Horn, of U. S. S. Bushnell, stationed at the submarine base, and Charles Armbruster, another sailor.

Nall declares that he lost $37, Horn says that he was robbed of $87 and Armbruster declares that he was relieved of $25 and a coat. Two other sailors, Benjamin E. Titus and R. E. Muller stated that a man was observed to enter their rooms during the early morning hours, but when discovered he made his escape. A sixth sailor, J. Kane, submarine base, reported to the night clerk, Morris Agen, that his room had been entered during the night and that $45 and a gold watch had been stolen, but that he did not want anything done about it and for that reason Agen stated that he did not notify the police. The police are inclined to doubt the complaint of Kane and have been unable to locate him, that he might be questioned. They consider it strange that Kane should claim to have been robbed and not want an investigation made to determine the thief.

All of the rooms contain either double beds or two beds, for more than one person is always assigned to these rooms. The occupants are not provided with keys so that the rooms can be entered by anyone during the day or night. Horn declares that his money was hidden in his pillow and that the thief, in order to gain possession was forced to cut the pillow case with a knife or scissors. Agen was brought to the police station this afternoon and questioned. He admitted that Kane had reported the latter's alleged loss to him, but that he did not notify the police because Kne had informed him that the sailor did not desire any arrest made.

The police court dealt with a number of drunks Saturday. They were of varying degrees of offensiveness. One of them was sent to the state hospital at Norwich that he might be ironed out and made to see the error of his ways. He is to serve a term of six months which will be a season of benefit to him. Thomas Roberson of Norwich was another. He represented that he is a chimney cleaner and the father of three children. That won him leniency for the court did not desire to place any penalty upon the wife and children. Perhaps the court would not have been so lenient with him if the judge had known that a chimney cleaner from Norwich was in the city a fortnight ago and then charged $8 for cleaning chimneys when the work did not require an hour's labor. He worked the whole lower section of Montauk avenue.

One violator of the parking ordinances was fined $5, as it was his third appearance for the same offense.

An automobile, a Ford, bearing Connecticut registration, N-1518, and owned by John W. Bogue, R. F. D., Niantic, was stolen in this city Saturday night. Bogue parked his automobile on Huntington street, between Church and Federal street while he attended one of the theatres. When he returned at 9:45 o'clock to take charge of his auto he discovered that it had been stolen and reported the theft at police headquarters. The Groton and Canterbrook state police and the police of Norwich, Westerly, Middletown and Hartford were requested to be on the lookout for the stolen automobile.

Ragnar Oscarson, of Flanders, attended divine worship at the Swedish Congregational church, Linden street, Saturday evening and drove to New London in his automobile. He parked his car in front of the church and left a pair of grey trousers and three pounds of meat in the rear. When he returned to the auto an hour later he discovered that a thief had entered the auto and had stolen the trousers and meat. Oscarson reported his loss to the police.

Three automobiles were stolen from the streets of New Haven Saturday night and the New London police were requested to maintain a watch for them as it as believed that the automobiles might be driven through this city. One auto was a Willys-Knight, 1925 model and carrying Connecticut registration, E-286; a second auto was an Essex coach and carried registration 8181, while the third was a Buick sedan, 1925 model and had registration, Y-4790.

George Sheehan, 27, of West High street, several years ago an aspirant for pugilistic honors, and Thomas G. Davis, soldier, stationed at Fort Wright, were arrested Saturday night charged with intoxication and breach of the peace. They furnished a surety on their respective bonds of $50 for their presentation in the police court Monday morning. Sheehan, familiarly known as "Cowboy" Sheehan, and Davis hired a Checker cab about 8 o'clock and after riding about the city an hour and a half refused to pay the driver, Harry Young and alighting at the Union station, either Sheehan or Davis smashed a window of one of the doors. Neither Sheehan nor Davis would pay for the damage so Young summoned Patrolmen John Clifford and Thomas Lyden and Sheehan and Davis were arrested. Sheehan has been prosecuted in the police court several times on charges of intoxication and breach of the peace.

Mrs. Samuel Hick, wife of Police Sergeant Hick, is confined to her home, Blydenberg avenue suffering from a painful injury sustained Saturday afternoon Mrs. Hick was performing her household duties and in doing so used a kitchen step-ladder. While standing on the uppermost shelf, Mrs. Hick lost her balance and fell to the floor, sustaining an ugly laceration of the scalp. A physician was summoned and found it necessary to take several stitches to close the wound.

Morris Lampert, 292 North Bank street, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Captain Edward Kelley and Sergeant Martin Kane, special agents in the employ of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad charged with theft. He was released when Lampert furnished a surety on his bond of $600 for presentation in the police court Monday morning. Lampert, who is a veteran express driver, was arrested upon complaint of Elsio Minucci, 32 Walbach street. Minucci stated that he had about $400 worth of metal stored in his yard and that during the day Lampert drove his team to the Minucci premises, loaded the metal into the wagon and drove away. Minnucci's residence abuts the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, so when Officers Kelley and Kane happened along Minucci made complaint to them. Lampert was then in the railroad freight yard and was placed under arrest.

New London police are watching closely the movements of a gang of Providence gangsters, who are known to be in New London and have been in this city about two weeks. Two of the gang were the first arrivals here and the first night they were in the city they engaged in a fight on Railroad avenue with a local gambler, the latter sustaining a lacerated finger, which he sustained from a knife in the hand of one of the Providence men. Although the assault was known to the police, no action was taken by them. Recently the gang has been increased to five and after having attempted to extort money from a Main street gambler, the gang discontinued their attentions to the gambling fraternity and are now paying attention to the bootleggers.

Mary J. Rogers, of Waterford, has sold a cottage on Alewife avenue, Ocean Beach, to Nellie D. A. Smith.

Another mechanics lien was levied against the 325 State Street corporation, of which Walter S. Garde is at the head, when Jeremiah Twomey and Michael L. O'Connell, proprietors of the New London Glass Co., North Bank street, caused action to be taken to recover $1,663, which the proprietors of the glass company state is due them for glass furnished in the construction of the new Garde theatre. The lien was filed in the office of the city clerk Saturday.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel on Saturday ordered the driver's license of John Migo, 7 New street, suspended. Commissioner Stoeckel also suspended the right to drive of Timothy J. Fenton, 26 Grand street. Fenton was fined a week ago in the police court for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor.

Motor Druck, of Colchester road, is a patient at Bellevue hospital, New York, being under observation to determine his mentality. Druck was committed to the hospital Friday and Saturday Chief Inspector William Lahey, New York police department, requested the New London police to notify friends of Druck of his predicament.

Mrs. Joseph Mariano, of 5 West Colt street, and Harry Congdon, Ivoryton, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were dismissed Saturday.

Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney has started on his vacation of two weeks. During his absence from duty, the force will be in charge of Lieutenant James Sullivan. Desk Sergeant James Gaffney will be acting lieutenant.

A boy of about five, who but yesterday arrived from Kentucky, with his parents at the home of relatives strayed away from his temporary abode this afternoon and wandered to Willetts avenue, where he was taken in charge by a resident. The child could give but little information concerning himself and he was finally delivered to the police. About the time that Patrolman Walter Rahn arrived at the police station with the child, a relative communicated with police headquarters making inquiry as to whether the child had been picked up. When informed that the child was there a relative quickly went to police headquarters and took charge of the small wanderer.

OFFICER WHEELER'S WIFE DIES IN CHILDBIRTH

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 7.—Margaret O'Donnell, wife of Patrolman Louis F. Wheeler, 36 Darrow street, died in childbirth this afternoon at Home Memorial hospital. She is survived, besides her husband, by her mother and several brothers and sisters. Mrs. Wheeler was admitted to the hospital a day or two ago and this afternoon about 4:15 o'clock her condition took a sudden change for the worse, Mrs. Wheeler succumbing a short time afterwards. Patrolman Wheeler was at police headquarters when the change came and a telephone message called him to the hospital. He arrived there but a few minutes before his wife expired.

Annette Riley and Hazel Sansoucie, charges at the State Farm for Women, Niantic, made their escape this evening about 6 o'clock. The young women were missed a short time after and a request was made of the New London police to keep a watch for the runaways. About 7 o'clock the girls were found but a short distance from the home.

Alfred Gorton, employed by the city highway department this evening made another complaint to the police regarding boys stealing and destroying lanterns that were placed at an excavation on Crystal avenue, near 232. Gorton made the same complaint last Wednesday night and since then several lanterns have been smashed and another has been stolen.

Tonight, at police headquarters, there were 13 cases awaiting presentation in the police court tomorrow morning. Eight of the arrested men are charged with intoxication, another is charged with theft, still another is charged with driving while under the influence of liquor; two others are charged with breach of the peace as well as intoxication. Deputy Judge Lewis Crandall will be on the bench Monday.

Bread Theater

Adame with the fire of youthful revolt, Sandy, the modern flapper whose story has been followed with avidity by millions of newspaper readers, now appears on the screen. The film version of this celebrated novel of an up-to-the-minute girl opened yesterday at the Bread theater. The picture is presented by William Fox and made under the direction of Harry Beaumont.

Here at last is the daughter of 1926 dramatized as she has never been before. This is no plain "flapper movie" such as has been administered to the film-going public in over-doses during the past few seasons. Sandy stands by itself as a true and highly dramatic character drawing of the present day girl who has cast aside the conventions that governed the behavior of her mother and who is living life to the fullest, adhering to the philosophy that today is here, tomorrow never comes.

The practicability of this philosophy is slowly but relentlessly disproved by Elenore Meherin, author of Sandy. She builds up, with a masterly and sure hand, a tremendously convincing record of the girl's determination to "take the cash and let the credit go," and unfolds before us the inevitable price of such a code of conduct.

The secret of the film's realism lies in the fact that Sandy is shown not as a vamp or a girl of doubtful morals, but simply as a believer in personal freedom, who is indifferent to a public opinion, which, nine times out of ten, is only another name for idle gossip.

It is well worth the while of every woman in town to see Sandy. The picture features, in addition to Madge Bellamy, a brilliant cast, including Harrison Ford, Leslie Fenton, Bardson Bard, David Torrence, Gloria Hope, Lillian Leighton and others.

Backus Hospital Bazar

The Swedish flag flying from the peak of a little cottage, set in a miniature woods of cedar and pine trees, will point the way to the pottery, lamp shade and bag booth of the Hospital bazar. This cottage will be a close reproduction of one photographed by Mrs. Gardiner Greene while traveling in Sweden several years ago.

Following the pretty Swedish custom, a small fir tree will be growing, apparently, out of the roof, which is to be turfed, and a weather vane and pair of antlers will also have their places on the house peaks. Even the carved pillars of the porch are a distinctive feature of Swedish architecture, while the antlers over the front door carry their own special significance. The coat of arms of Sweden will also add its special note to the decorative effect.

The interior is very interesting; the walls will be gay with some real Swedish tapestries; a deer's head with branching antlers hangs directly over an antique mantel piece extending across the rear of the room, on which will be arranged a vari-colored assortment of pottery. From the counters placed in front of the two large windows, those in charge of the booth will sell bags of all kinds and colors, and for all purposes, imported baskets, pottery of lovely colorings, and artistically painted parchment lamp and candle shades. There will also be several pottery and basketry lamps for sale here.

Since pottery is one of the chief industries of Sweden, the little garden at the side of this alloted space, will represent a picture of native industry. Clustered around a work bench, a group of academy students, in costume, will busily ply their art of pottery and tile making. A certain percentage from the sale of these articles will go to the Art school.

The costumes will be the regulation Swedish peasant garb; plain, full black skirts, black bodices with white blouses, winged caps and long bright colored aprons. Miss Hannah Crowell will wear a costume specially designed and made for her in Sweden.

Mrs. Frederick S. Sayles is chairman of this booth. Miss Hannah Crowell, co-chairman and in charge of the decorations, and Mrs. Gardiner Greene has planned the costumes.

A tremendous amount of work and study of Swedish customs on the part of the whole committee, has gone towards making this booth well nigh perfect, and the tiny cottage with its little green garden is a picture worthy of an artist's brush.

The Fjords of America

An illustrated lecture upon The Fjords of America to which the Norwich Fish and Game association extends a general invitation to all who love the outdoor life is to be given Thursday evening at the Community house by L. C. Armstrong, renowned traveler and explorer.

"The last wilderness of America, whose beauty is beyond the dreams of imagination, whose fastness is unexplored, unknown, such are the Fjords of America. Mr. Armstrong brings this new country to you through the pictures and experiences he had this summer.

Palace Theatre

George Jessel, famous for his portrayal of "The Jazz Singer," one of the spectacular Broadway hits of the past year, is now starred by the Warners in a serio-comic heart drama of the days of the World War, "Private Izzy Murphy."

Izzy Goldberg, having to leave his quarters in the Ghetto, adds drawing appeal to the customers of the Irish neighborhood into which he moves, by renaming himself "Murphy." His delicatessen business thrives to the point of making it possible for him to bring papa and mamma from Russia. They come. Are delighted with their son's success. All goes well. And then—the World war!

"Izzy" joins up with an Irish regiment, still keeping the Hiberian name, with which he has also courted pretty Eileen Cohannigan, and goes overseas. Word comes that he has been killed in action. But after the armistice, when the boys are parading up Fifth avenue among the cheering crowds, when confetti drifts like snow and bugles blare—the Goldbergs go wild with joy to see their boy among the rest. Cocky, helmeted, gun on shoulder, "big as life and twice as natural!"

The complications which follow (with Eileen's father, Moe Ginsberg, the marriage broker, doughboys, neighbors) are so mirth-provoking, so human, that everyone in the audience forgets that such things as rancor and prejudice can exist in the world! It is one of those rare plays which have universal appeal. It is as American as baseball. As all inclusive as the circus!

"Private Izzy Murphy" was directed by Lloyd Bacon, son of Frank Bacon, author and star of Lightnin', and a genius in his own right. Vera Gordon, famous as the mother in "Humoresque," plays the part of Izzy's mother.

Patsy Ruth Miller is "Eileen Cohannigan," the pretty Irish sweetheart, and the supporting company makes the play a riot of mirth, a rough-and-tumble of all things American. It is human and tender and fine, the sort of play which makes us want to live and let live! You'll be cheer-leader for "Private Izzy Murphy."

Palace Theatre

Monte Blue and Marie Prevost are two of the most skilful and subtle of screen comedians, and add to their laurels by their sparkling performance in "Other Women's Husbands," the Warner picture in which they are co-featured, which opened yesterday at the Palace theatre.

Monte is a serious-minded young husband, and Marie a devoted little wife, but he insists upon bringing home an old college chum to dinner at a most inconvenient time, and she rebels. So when the successful attorney arrives to dinner (Huntly Gordon looks every inch the successful man of affairs) Marie engages in a little flirtation. This awakens his interest and he immediately begins to covet his friend's wife. During a short trip that Marie takes, Gordon introduces Monte to a gay companion of his lighter moments (Phyllis Haver) and she forgets all about the attorney when she sees Dick. Thus begins a triangle that becomes a rectangle, and winds through a series of clever and entertaining situations.

Eric Kenton directed "Other Women's Husbands" from the scenario of E. T. Lowe, Jr., and the entire production is perfectly cast, acted and directed. It ranks among the best screen offerings of the season and is worth the attention of the picture-goer.

Capitol Theatre, Willimantic

The growing demand for seats for Anne Nichols' big laughing success, "Abie's Irish Rose," which local theatregoers will see for the first time at the Capitol theatre, where it opens for an engagement of two nights with a matinee on Thursday, beginning Wednesday, Nov. 17, leads the management to believe that local theatregoers are going to turn out in great numbers to see this perennial wonder, which has shattered all records wherever it has been presented, and made local theatrical history in each place by the precedents it has established. It is no mere conjecture to say that the Capitol theatre will be the scene of many crowded houses before the engagement is over, and our advice to those who contemplate witnessing this Niagara of laughter, is to make their reservation as early as possible so as not to be disappointed.

Connecticut College Concert

The musical season in this part of Connecticut will be auspiciously opened Tuesday evening, Nov. 10, when Lucrezia Bori, prima donna soprano of the Metropolitan Opera Co., appears at the state armory. This incomparable artist is truly a world favorite, dividing her time between Europe, North America and our own country. Her concert here will be an event of great social and musical distinction.

Another Tuesday evening, that of Jan. 11, will bring the English Singers of London, Flora Mann, Nellie Carson, Lillian Berger, Cuthbert Kelly, Norman Stone and Norman Notley. Until Oct. 22, 1925, they were wholly unknown in this country. On that date Mrs. P. W. Coolidge presented them at her chamber music festival given in the Congressional library at Washington, D. C., and a few days later, Nov. 7, they appeared at Town hall, New York city. The next day their fame was nation wide. They bring a new repertoire to the concert room. Having rediscovered the wonders of Elizabethan music, their concerts of Madrigals, folk songs, ballets and canzonets are revelations of beauty. Critics of the New York newspapers unanimously agree that the English Singers demonstrate the last word in part singing and that nothing even remotely approaching their art has ever before been heard in this country. The college and New London may well take pride in securing one of the 70 dates booked for this group during the current season.

Tuesday evening, Feb. 15, the college presents the world's greatest 'cellist, that inimitable artist, Pablo Casals, who so completely captivated us two years ago.

And last but by no means least comes the Boston Symphony orchestra, Monday evening, April 4.

Here is outlined a series offering which cannot be excelled in any city of any size anywhere at this time. Larger communities can and do support more concerts, but none can have better ones.

That our public is coming to realise this, is reflected in an unusual advance sale. Course tickets may be secured now, and single seats will be placed on sale at Starr Brothers, Nov. 10.

Broadway Theatre

A gala Armistice week program was planned many weeks ago by the management of the Broadway theatre, resulting in what looks like the year's outstanding program for the first half of this week starting today.

The feature attraction comes here direct from B. F. Keith's theatre, Boston, with Homer Lind, known throughout the musical world for his excellent voice and his right to have vocal teachers licensed. His latest vaudeville revue should be greatly appreciated by all. There are six people in the offering, presenting mirth, music, song and dance, with many beautiful settings.

The other four acts are also going to be a revelation to the crowds which are sure to be on hand for the full three days.

The management believing that it is impossible to please all of the people all of the time, is at least making an effort to please them all some of the time. This feat is promised starting today, when the screen production of "Flames" will begin an engagement of three days.

"Flames" is a romantic story of the northwest, featured by thrills and fast action, the main dramatic moment being one of the most awesome and realistic forest fires ever screened. To make sure that this picture would please 100 per cent, the producers did not stop at the story but gathered together a cast for its presentation that is truly all-star. Four of the most popular and best known screen favorites have the leading roles. They are Virginia Valli, Eugene O'Brien, Jean Hersholt and Bryant Washburn.

Dodge Autos

Nationwide interest has been aroused by the invitation Now Drive the Car which has been extended by Dodge Brothers dealers from coast to coast to all owners of motor cars. Everyone who owns or has driven one of the improved cars, according to Jordan Auto company, local dealer, has immediately noticed the increased quietness, more rapid acceleration and greater power and speed. All express surprise at the remarkable smoothness of power throughout the entire range of engine speed.

"Conforming to policies established 12 years ago," Mr. Jordan states, "the maker has quietly and unceasingly worked for the betterment of his product. Each suggested improvement has undergone most thorough tests over long periods both in the laboratory and on the road before its adoption to demonstrate clearly that the change would result in a better Dodge Brothers motor car.

Dodge Brothers, Inc., announced important basic improvements recently incorporated in their motor cars in their characteristic conservative manner. Their advertising contained no extravagant or spectacular claims.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—(AP)—With stock prices failing to give any indication of a definite trend, chief financial interest this week was divided between the bond market, which rose to record high levels on a further lowering of time money rates, and the foreign exchange which witnessed a sharp recovery in French francs to the highest level since last spring, the establishment of the highest price in three years by Japanese exchange and the decline in sterling to a new low level for the year.

Except in a few individual cases, election results failed to cause any surprise in Wall street and apparently had no influence on the movement of security prices. The market appeared to be awaiting further light on the trend of business which continues to show irregularity. The so-called key industries—building, iron and steel, and automobiles—recently have shown a slackening in activity, but Wall St. has not yet been able to make up its mind as to whether this represents a normal, seasonal decline after unusually heavy mid-summer activity, or the beginning of a general downward drift. Bank clearings showed a rasmg off of five per cent in October compared with th eeame month last year but on the other hand freight traffic is being moved in record volume.

The credit situation, continues easy, with funds in plentiful supply for both stock market and commercial purposes. However, the small reduction in stock exchange member loans, compared with the decline shown in Federal Reserve bank reports, aroused apprehension over the market's technical position. Low money rates undoubtedly are providing the chief stimulus for the advance in bond prices.

NORWICH TOWN

About 5 o'clock Saturday morning, Norwich Town residents were awakened by the sound of the Yantic fire engine passing over the main highway at a fast speed, which signified that there was a fire somewhere. After passing through Town street, the apparatus was heard to stop and neighbors in that section were soon out of bed to locate the fire, which proved to be at the old Harland mansion on Sentry Hill, which is situated at Harland's corner at the junction of Town and Upper Washington streets.

When the fire was discovered at 4:30, a call was sent in to the central fire station and when the Yantic company arrived on the scene, it found squad A already on the job and fighting the fire which was chiefly confined at the rear of the house.

Many rumors were in circulation as to its origin, but it could not be definitely state just how it started, indications however, pointed to the cellar. Much damage was done by water and smoke, the interior being greatly demolished.

Since the death of General Edward Harland a number of years ago, this property has changed hands several times. At first this estate when sold to its first purchaser, was divided into several building lots. After a few old buildings were torn down, a new modern house, also a modern bungalow were built on the two plots adjoining the original homestead.

This was purchased a number of months ago by Paul Martinoff who, with his wife, occupied one of the apartments which was made over when the house was previously remodeled. Another family reported to have moved in recently from Baltic, by the name of Marshall, comprised the other occupants.

During the time of the fire the atmosphere was extremely chilly, and a kind neighbor, Mrs. William E. House, provided hot coffee for the firemen. This is the third fire in that locality in less than a month.

CHURCH SCHOOL ADDITION AT UNITED CHURCH IS DEDICATED

The new addition for the church school at the United Congregational church, providing seven class rooms, a gift from Miss Ella M. Norton in memory of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Norton, was formally accepted and dedicated Sunday at services held at the school hour at noon in the church school room.

After the opening devotional exercises, the gift of the room was accepted on behalf of the trustees of the church by John Trankla, chairman of the board of trustees; by the superintendent of the church school by Ernest L. Latimer, who read the 122nd Psalm; on behalf of the teachers of the school by Herbert B. Cary; and by the youth of the school, who were represented by the Misses Eleanor Sargent, Alice Higgins, Kathryn Zumbro and Betty Zumbro.

The prayer of dedication was by Senior Deacon B. P. Bishop.

Expressions of gratitude to Miss Norton were given by the entire congregation in the use of the 23rd Psalm and the singing of the hymn of dedication. The committee in charge of the building was represented by Arthur M. Thompson, who drew the designs for the addition and supervised the construction.

General William A. Aiken, deacon emeritus, participated in the exercises as representing learners in the school, both old and young, and the pastor of the church, Rev. Alexander H. Abbott, was heard in brief but inspiring remarks.

A memorial in bronze is to be placed in the addition, indicating the memorial character of the gift of these seven class rooms, which are on the northerly side of the building and are separated from the main rooms by glass doors so that they can be made a part of the main room when occasion requires.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS' CALL FROM ST. PATRICK'S PULPIT

The tender love for the souls of the dead is being manifested during November at St. Patrick's church, where at the four masses Sunday hundreds of communions were offered for those who may be in the probation state, not yet worthy to enter the presence of God. As was recalled Sunday at the 9 o'clock mass by Rev. John J. Reilly, it is one of the most consoling tenets of the Roman Catholic church that those souls detained in the purifying state can be aided by the prayers and good works of their friends on earth. The church, which ever impresses the truth that we have here no abiding city, strategist as she is forever keeps her eye focussed upon eternity for her children. In her changing moods she is sad during these autumnal days, but not for those saints who have died in the Lord; neither can she lament for those others who have stubbornly resisted grace and of their own choice have died in enmity with their Creator and Redeemer. But with tender solicitude her thought goes beyond the grave, perhaps for those whose funeral notice might rightly read: "They, by death bed repentance have escaped hell, yet are plunged into the torments of purgatory."

"Which of you is without sin?" Even the best of us are not holy as God is holy—must be faulty in God's sight. It is, then, one of the great consolations of religion to have a church like the heart of Christ, one of uplifting faith, meeting human requirements in the assurance that one's beloved dead are looking to their friends for help; that, in this great age of charity and kindness, those departed, as well as those living, can receive human aid. Newer friendships and later ties should not wipe out the memory of those once fondly loved. "The hand of the Lord hath touched them" and they appeal to their friends on earth for assistance, through prayers, almsdeeds, the offering of the holy sacrifice, one's holy communion, that they may be released from the bonds of the purgation state and be admitted to full friendship with a just and appeased God.

Evidently many hundreds had this thought in mind; for Rev. Myles P. Galvin, who read the mass required the assistance of Father Reilly in administering the Eucharist to those who had been to confession on the previous day.

In making the weekly announcements, Father Reilly called upon every member of White Cross council to join the Knights of Columbus in the Armistice day parade. He reminded them that the K. of C. were there—and very much there—when the event happened which Armistice day is commemorating; and that they are all 100 per cent Americans—even though they may never have had the blood test taken.

MOTION LIST MATTERS IN SUPERIOR COURT

Judge Brown reserved decision in the cases of Molinaro vs. Ferry; Molinaro vs. Neiderman, et al.; motion to cite in Fortunato Molinaro as a co-plaintiff.

Motion for more specific statement be filed within ten days in the divorce action brought by Elizabeth B. Ethier vs. Lionel R. Ethier was granted.

In the hearing on the motion to cite in Thomas J. Dodd, administrator of the estate of Margaret S. Dodd, as a co-defendant, in the case of Quinn, Admr. vs. Dodd, individually and as administrator, et al., Judge Brown reserved decision. The motion of disclosure of defense or, judgment of foreclosure and limitation for time for redemption in the same case went off the list.

Mrs. Virginia Brandow Greene of New London was allowed $50 to defend the divorce action brought by Alfred F. Greene, also of that city.

Supplemental judgment was granted in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Wilkinson vs. Frank Scialabba, et al.

GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE FOR THEFT OF COAT

After pleading guilty to theft of a sheepskin coat from the Segal clothing store on Thames street, James J. Maffett, 34, South Bend, Ind., told Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Saturday morning that he was intoxicated at the time. If he had been sober Maffett said he would not have done it. On his promise to leave Norwich, Judge Libby gave Maffett a 30-day suspended jail sentence.

NOTED WRITER HAS PRAISE FOR PENNIMAN CAT STORY

The clever and appealing book, "The Alley Rabbit," by James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D., of Philadelphia, Norwich Free Academy, '80, has been put upon the market in a new issue, with a newer and cuter cut of Raoul, the cat, as the frontispiece. The distinguished author who introduced Raoul to a waiting world has told such an absorbing story of the traits and adventures and good points of "The Alley Rabbit," that another distinguished man of letters, Prof. William Lyon Phelps, of Yale, writes of the book:

"Those who say that the cat has no affection for men and women are usually deficient in affection for the cat. There can be no deep and true understanding of a living personality without sympathy and love. Though I bestow all my goods to feed the cat, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. One must give something more than meat and fish: one must have intellectual respect for the cat, the charity that comes from mental sympathy, from an appreciation of the nerves and moods of the most mysterious of all domestic animals.

"It is clear that Doctor Penniman enjoyed the society of Raoul; their friendship was founded neither on toleration nor on condescension, but on that mutual understanding that preserves dignity while annihilating formality. Raoul is worth knowing for his own sake, also because we obtain glimpses into the feline soul.

"This brief biography, 'The Alley Rabbit' deserves to become a cat classic. It is the story of a feline personality, told with a delicacy and grace worthy of the subject; and cats have these two qualities to a high degree. Doctor Penniman has studied cathood patiently, sympathetically, scientifically, and while it is the character and habits of Raoul that he is here mainly concerned with, the book is a valuable contribution to cattist literature. All persons who sincerely love cats, from Montaigne to Thomas Hardy, know that the cat lends the last touch of perfection to a domestic life. What is home without a cat?"

Most interesting and informing are the cat facts which crop out through this engaging story of Raoul, from the citation of an Egyptian tablet of 1500 B. C. which pictures a cat sitting under a chair, or even of hieroglyphics of from 1700 to 2400 B. C., which make mention of cats, down to the tribute of Andrew Lang and the poem of Wordsworth, also to the memorable couplet from the New England Primer,

"The cat doth play,

The communion hymn sung with such finish at the high mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday by Roderick F. Sullivan was the new composition "Panis Angelicus," the chorus coming in on the refrain very effectively.

DISCIPLINE IS PURPOSE IN SUSPENDING LICENSES

The idea of punishment is secondary in the suspension and revocation of operators' licenses by the state motor vehicle department, according to a paper read by Commissioner Stoeckel before the fifteenth annual safety congress in Detroit last week. The principle, he said is to bring the person who has committed an offense before a state authority to determine whether his character and general attributes in the light of his most recent action as compared with his past record, make him a desirable person to have on the highway.

The licenses of 2403 Connecticut operators were suspended in the first six months of this year. Last year, 3362 operators were suspended.

There is no disciplinary action more nearly perfect than that by which a state exercises its right to take away, temporarily or finally, an operator's license from a person who has proven himself unfit to have it, the commissioner said.

The Connecticut department's first consideration is to get the dangerous driver off the highway. The menace to public motor vehicles is so great that the department takes no chances. As pointed out in the Detroit address, the department provides the facilities by which it is possible for an operator who feels aggrieved to have a prompt hearing before a department inspector whose sole business is to hold hearings. With the opportunity for hearing open to every one on short notice, it was explained, the department feels free to take up a license on any well-founded rumor or complaint.

"This is as it should be," he held, "for a person about whom a rumor is circulating may, by operating an automobile, do untold damage or the person about whom a complaint has been made may commit a crime in the absence of prompt action by an administrator. If, as a part of an organization, there is a hearing section where any person may appear and tell his side of a story, and especially if there is an appeal provided to a high court, then no person has any excuse for making a claim that he has been unduly deprived of his rights."

Adjustments and careful investigation are expected of the hearing section of the motor vehicle department. The department proceeds on the theory that "should there be an apparently bad actor on the highway the first thing to do is to take away his license as quickly as possible and thereafter consider the question as to whether he is or is not so bad as to need further discipline."

Anniversary Masses

Rev. Alfred Driscoll, from Greenwich, was in Norwich Saturday to sing the anniversary high mass of requiem at St. Patrick's church at 7:30 o'clock for his sister, Miss Anna Driscoll.

At 8 o'clock, relatives and family friends attended the first anniversary requiem high mass for Mrs. Hugh Kelleher, offered at 8 o'clock by the rector, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May. At both services Organist Henry J. LaFontaine directed the music and the offertory solos were by Roderick F. Sullivan.

FLOAT TO REPRESENT LIONS IN THE PARADE

William A. Anderson, president of the Lions' club, found that he could not lead the Lions in the Armistice day parade. Being a state officer of the American Legion, he will have to march with the Legion. The Lions' membership numbers 83, most of them being American Legion men who must march in the Legion ranks. The remaining Lions not members of the Legion, are presidents of other local organizations and by nature of their office, will have to lead the organizations in the line of march. Beside, several of the Lions are members of the parade committee and will be on duty at the armory and elsewhere without being able to march in line. It was therefore deemed best to place the Lions' banner on a float which will represent the Lions' club of Norwich.

Y. M. C. A. SERVICE WITH HISTORICAL MOVING PICTURE

There were very few vacant chairs at the Sunday afternoon meeting of the Y. M. C. A. After the singing of hymns, scripture reading and prayer, Hugh Kinder who furnished the music for the picture, rendered vocal solos to the pleasure of the audience. The historic story of "The Courtship of Myles Standish" was shown in five reels and the completeness of the story, the beauty of the scenes and the splendid lessons to be deducted all contributed to a period of real profit, and all present evidently greatly enjoyed the privilege.

Between the reels Secretary Edwin Hill gave a brief talk, and he spoke in part as follows: "If courtship is what it should be, it must be based on real genuine heart love, and therefore the thought of love comes to our minds. Generally speaking if the courtship is founded in real love, the married life that follows will be one continual courtship, but alas, the long list of divorces and other family discords tell a sad story. There is nothing so beautiful this side of heaven as a happy family life where love reigns supreme, and next to the gift of Jesus Christ for one's salvation, the best gift of God to man is a true, pure modest wife. Speaking of love, we need to cultivate more and more love of country. The many murders, robberies and the many broken laws in our America tell all too plainly that there are many who have little love for or pride in their country. Then there is the love of church. Jesus is termed the bridegroom, and the church is termed his bride; what a beautiful relationship, yet too many fail to manifest their proper love for the church of which Christ is the head. Of course the most perfect love is suggested in the words found in John 3: 16. 'Tis said that love may be tested by what it will do; behold what God has done for us by giving his only beloved son for our redemption. What are we doing for him? We read that if we do not love our fellowmen whom we see how can we love God whom we have not seen. The best way for us to prove our love to God is to demonstrate our love to those about us. There are many to whom we can minister in His Name, and let us do so as we have the opportunity."

11 CONVICTS RECAPTURED AFTER BATTLE WITH POLICE

Thirteen Prisoners Felled Three Guards at the Main Entrance to the Ohio Penitentiary at Columbus—All of the Prisoners Who Escaped Are Classed as Men Too Dangerous to Work—Eight of the Convicts Were Captured in a Cornfield Thirty Miles From Columbus After Being Driven Out by Hail of Bullets From a Posse.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 8—(AP)—Thirteen Ohio penitentiary prisoners, including five serving terms for murder, all members of the "red shirt" squad classed as too desperate to work, felled three guards at the main entrance at the main entrance of the institution today and trampled through to the street outside.

Eleven were back in the penitentiary tonight, while posses searched the countryside for the other two.

The break for liberty was made as visitors were being let in. The men were armed with crude knives, revolvers confiscated from the guards, heavy iron hooks used to hold bunks against the wall and a stout table leg.

All cells were quickly locked up and the visitors scrambled to places of safety. None was injured.

Eight of the convicts were captured in a corn field near London, 30 miles from here, after a hail of bullets from a posse drove them out. They had stolen an automobile to aid in their flight.

Warden Preston E. Thomas shot one fleeing prisoner as he passed the prison office, and another was hauled down by a fleet-footed guard near the penitentiary.

The two men at liberty both classed as mentally deficient, were.:

Oliver Glaspy, Athens county, serving three years on a statutory charge.

No one was seriously injured, although four of the prisoners were wounded in the corn field siege or in the fighting as the men broke out of the prison.

The wounded are:

The prisoners wounded in the corn field fight were:

John Neiman, Columbus, two fingers shot off; Charles Motohofer, Columbus, serving life for murder, shot in the hand; the notorious "George "Jiggs" Lostiner, Cleveland, serving life for murder, wounded in the leg, and Burton Carter, Darke county, shot in the shoulder.

The others captured in the corn field were:

Robert Hunt, Cleveland, serving life for murder.

Arthur Clayton, Cleveland, serving ten years for shooting to wound.

Frank Proctor, Cincinnati, serving ten years for robbery.

Thomas Gerak, Cleveland, serving life for murder, was hauled down near the penitentiary.

"The red shirts" made their break shortly after 2 p. m., today. They were exercising in the inner court, immediately in front of the main entrance as a troop of visitors were being escorted in.

Doors, both from the outside to the guard room and from the guard room to the inner court were open.

Drawing their concealed knives and bunk hooks and wrenching a leg from a table, the 13 rushed to the door leading to a guard house, clubbed Callahan, stabbing him as they fled, trampled through the visitors and knocked out Bennett at the outer door. In the meantime, others had pounced upon Landacre, who operated the telephone switchboard, and some had swiftly obtained two revolvers from the desk of the captain of the guards.

Then bullets spattered in every direction.

Lostiner was credited with firing the first shot. He sent a bullet at S. W. Lattimer, trusty, which went wild, and Lattimer returned the fire.

Payne swung out the door, a revolver barking in his hand as he went.

Warden Thomas leaped out of the window of his office, his revolver spitting flame. By that time the van of the prisoners were outside.

Every available guard opened fire and the prison soon was blood-stained and bullet scarred.

ESCAPED PRISONER GAVE HIMSELF UP

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 8.—(AP)—William Smith, Cleveland, one of the convicts who escaped from the Ohio penitentiary this afternoon, gave himself up to police tonight. Only one of the 13 prisoners involved in the outbreak remained uncaptured tonight.

Smith was apprehended at a restaurant a few miles from the prison. Approached by the proprietor, who had become suspicious, Smith admitted his identity, said he was tired and hungry and asked to be returned to prison.

DISCORD SEEMS TO ATTEND THE TOUR OF QUEEN MARIE

SPOKANE, Wash. Nov. 8.— (AP) — Queen Marie and her entourage speeded through Montana today, bearing aboard her special train further threatenings of the discord which marked her visit to the Pacific northwest last week.

After stops at Glacier National park, and Billings, her route lay toward Casper, Wyoming, where she is to be greeted tomorrow by another woman ruler, Governor Nellie Taylor Ross, of Wyoming.

WIthout the presence of Samuel Hill, for whose dedication of the Mary Hill museum the Queen declared last week she had made the trip to Washington, and minus that of J. B. Ayres, representative of the Ford Motor company, the royal party was threatened today with still further disagreements among its personnel.

The latest complications involved Miss May Birkhead of New York and Paris, press agent for Miss Lois Fuller, former dancer and close personal friend of Queen Marie. A reported statement by Miss Birkhead to another member of the party that Madame Lahovaria, lady-in-waiting to the queen, is identified with a Bucharest political group not in sympathy with the present Rumanian government, was the subject of questioning by Colonel John H. Carroll, official host to Queen Marie, and by Major Washburn.

Miss Birkhead suffered a nervous collapse aboard the train today and was under the care of the queen's nurse. Colonel Carroll announced that it was undecided whether she would remain on the train or be left in a hospital en route.

NEW TESTIMONY IN THE HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov 8.—(AP)—From De Rumsey's lane to Broadway, testimony moved today in the trial of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and brother, Henry and Willis Stevens, charged with murder. Another person who was in what seems to have been New Brunswick's most popular thoroughfare on the night of Sept. 14, 1922, told of the persons and things he saw there.

Two witnesses gained the information they reported in court on Broadway. A New York detective insisted over the previous testimony of Ralph V. M. Goraline, that the New Brunswick vestryman did tell him that he saw Henry Stevens in the lane, where the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills were slain. Another witness said he saw the slain rector and choir singer together on Broadway in 1921.

FIRE IN THE FAMOUS CHURCH OF STE. ANNE

STE. ANNE DE BEAUPRE, Que., Nov. 8.—(AP)—When the vault of the sacristy was opened today, hours after the fire which destroyed the temporary basilica of the famous church of Ste. Anne, the wrist bone of the saint was found somewhat scorched but intact. This relic, to which the fervent attribute miraculous power, is the center around which the entire shrine has been built.

A number of paintings and statues were saved, but the ancient bell and the most valued statue were destroyed, the loss of this statue, which the faithful credit with many miraculous cures, is considered irreparable.

The material loss is estimated at $500,000.

PASTOR WOULD HAVE CHURCH SHARE ITS GREAT WEALTH

HOUSTON, Tex., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Deeming it sinful to be so rich, Dr. Peter Gray Sears issued an ultimatum to his congregation yesterday that either Christ Episcopal property in the business district of Houston, valued at $1,500,000, must be sold and approximately half the proceeds devoted to other Episcopal churches or charity, or he would resign.

"You and I have come to the branching of the road," he told his congregation. "I want to talk with you people for the rest of my days, if you will let me. Please do not make it impossible for me to do this by saying you will not follow where I lead."

Dr. Sears has been rector of the church for 21 years. The church was established 87 years ago.

A few months ago, the congregation refused to sell the property, which occupies a half block opposite a 30 story office building. A recent proposal of the church vestry to spend $250,000 in improvements apparently brought the issue to a head.

SEEKS TO HAVE MENTAL COMPETENCY ESTABLISHED

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 8.—(AP)—George S. Knapp, a former manufacturer of paper boxes, now residing at a local hotel seeks revocation of a finding of mental incompetency against him, so that he may make a will leaving the bulk of his estate to the United Congregational church, it was hinted today by Attorney Loren Willis, coudsel for Knapp's wife, Jane A. Knapp, of 1414 North avenue, at a hearing upon his plea, before Judge Bacon Wakeman in probate court.

While cross questioning Rev. Forrest Lamar Knapp, assistant pastor of the United church, who appeared as a witness for Knapp, Attorney Willis asked the assistant pastor if he had knowledge of this intention on Knapp's part. The clergyman said he did not. It was disclosed at the hearing that Mr. Knapp and the plaintiff are not related.

INQUEST INTO DEATHS OF AUTO BANDIT VICTIMS

HERRIN, Ills., Nov. 8—(AP)—An inquest into the deaths of Mayor Jeff Stone and John Milroy, who were shot and killed Saturday night at Colp, near here, by unidentified gunmen in three automobiles was continued indefinitely today by Coroner Bell. No witnesses were called to testify.

The jury was empanneled but after the bodies of the victims were viewed, the jurymen were dismissed. State's Attorney Arlie Boswell said that the postponement was taken to secure additional evidence.

Stone and Milroy were killed when the gunmen, driving by in their automobiles, raked the street with the machine gun and rifle fire, first mortally wounded the mayor and later riddling Milroy's body with bullets when he ran to the assistance of his friend.

BLOOD FOR TRANSFUSION CARRIED BY MOTOR CAR

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—A consignment of blood by motorcar for a transfusion operation is the latest medical feat in London. An operation performed at Richmond was followed by a transfusion with blood taken from a man in a North London hospital and rushed by motorcar to the operating surgeon at Richmond. The operation and transfusion were both successful.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

MADRID, Nov. 8—(AP)—Alejandro Leroux, chief of the republican party and noted radical leader, was arrested last night and is being held by the authorities.

SHANGHAI, Nov. 8—(AP)—The Cantonese army, forging its way into enemy strongholds, has occupied the city of Kiukiang, 450 miles southwest of Shanghai. However, fighting continues in zones nearby, notably in the North Yangtze river, below the city of Kuqueh, 35 miles west of Kiukiang.

PEKING, Nov. 8.—(AP)—China's abrogation last Saturday of the Chinese-Belgian treaty of 1865 may become of world wide importance. It is the first cancellation of one of a series of treaties that concern the relations of 16 nations with China. The treaty was abrogated by China after Belgium had delayed negotiation of a new treaty based on equality and reciprocity, and had proposed reference of the question to the international court at the Hague.

AN INJUNCTION SUIT AGAINST DRY OFFICIAL

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(AP)—The William T. Truxton Company, Inc., of Waterbury has asked for a temporary injunction against C. P. Mills, federal prohibition administrator for Connecticut and New York, Frank T. Putney, deputy for Connecticut, and D. H. Blair, commissioner of internal revenue, restraining them from further interfering with their business in the capacity of a bonded dealer for the sale of denatured alcohol. The bill of complaint was filed in the clerk's office of the U. S. district court today.

Writs requiring the defendants to appear before a federal judge in South Norwalk on November 9 have been handed the U. S. marshal. At that time the defendants are asked to show cause why a temporary injunction should not be issued restraining them from refusing to issue a permit for the withdrawal of alcohol to the extent of 5,000 wine gallons.

The plaintiff claims that on August 16, 1926, the defendants refused permits to withdraw that amount of alcohol for each 30 day period. The company further claims that it has a large sum invested in the business, has expended a large sum to comply with the national prohibition act and is losing money daily because the permits have not been granted.

DR. CADMAN BELIEVES THAT WOMEN WILL ECLIPSE MEN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(AP)—No woman sees her husband as he really is, Rev. Dr. S. Parkes Cadman, of New York, president of the Federal Council of Churches, of America, told an audience at Yale university this afternoon, adding "Thank goodness!" "this," he said, "is due to imagination."

Opening his address with the statement that he was glad there were so many women present, he explained by saying that in his opinion women were eclipsing men and that woman's star was in the ascendant.

Our civic dangers, he said, will be crushed by the outpourings of the human mind, Mr. Cadman said, just as the knights of old were occasionally smothered by their ponderous heavy armor. Science, he added, is no bar to religion, but preachers who know nothing of science should stop talking about it, and thus stop making themselves the laughing stocks of the world.

Moving pictures are getting better "hard as some will find it to believe it," said Dr. Cadman, who is a member of Will Hays' committee on moving pictures.

Dr. Cadman spoke under the auspices of the Yale Divinity school. His general topic was the need of imagination in modern religion.

FRENCH HAVE INVESTIGATED THE GARIBALDI BROTHERS

PARIS Nov. 8—(AP)—Ricciotti Garibaldi, member of one of Italy's noted families, will within a few days probably have to face Colonel Macia, leader of the conspiracy for the separation of Catalonia from Spain, which was exposed by the French police. This announcement was made today by a spokesman of the foreign office.

On the charge that he was involved in the plot, Garibaldi was brought to Paris from Nice several days ago, and both he and his brother, Sante Garibaldi, have been under investigation by the French authorities.

In the meantime the examination of Garibaldi will be slowed up in order to permit the translators to decipher documents found in his villa at Nice.

Mystery surrounds the interrogation by the police of an Italian named Meschia. He is alleged to have had close relations with Ricciotti Garibaldi and Gino Lucetti, their attempted to assassinate Premier Mussolini with a bomb in September.

REPUBLICANS HAVE WON THE ELECTIONS IN GREECE

ATHENS, Nov. 8—(AP)—With about two-thirds of the ballots counted in the general elections held yesterday for members of parliament, the republicans now have a large majority over both royalist groups.

Based on present figures, it is estimated that the complete returns, available tomorrow, will give the republican coalition 140 seats, the royalists 110 and the advanced republicans 15, out of a total of 287.

The smaller groups failed to attract much support and the communist vote was insignificant.

All the party leaders were re-elected with the exception of M. Papanastasiou, whose faith is in doubt.

Premier Kondylis, who is a republican, promised to step out of office if the republicans obtained a majority, giving way to Kafandaris.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 8.—(AP)—Three Fall River Portuguese were sent to Boston today to await deportation after Judge Arthur L. Brown in the federal district court here dismissed petitions for writs of habeas corpus filed in an attempt to defeat a decision of the secretary of labor. The men, Diamintino Teixeira, Antonio Alves Pereira and Antonio Di Costa, were accused by federal authorities of publishing the bolshid paper, "A Lutaie" and of advocating the overthrow of all constituted governments.

To Transport Express Matter by Airplanes

American Railway Express to Have Air Service in Full Operation Before April 15, 1927.

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—The American Railway Express is to take to the air.

Robert E. M. Cowie, president, announced today that a contract to carry the company's packages by plane over two routes—the first of a proposed great national network—has just been signed with the National Air Transport, Inc.

Augmenting the present railway express system, the air service is scheduled to be in full operation on or before April 15.

"The demand of American commerce for the quickest possible transportation service at all times," Mr Cowie said today, "is responsible for the innovation."

The establishment of the new service represents the linking of the huge, war-unified railway express organizations of the country, and one of the largest private capital air-transport corporations in the world.

The express company will function in the pickup and local delivery of express packages, and the plane transport organization will do the carrying.

The planes will fly at night, as well as during the day, on fast schedules, with economy of time as one of the chief objectives.

In confirming the signing of the contracts, Howard E. Coffin, president of the National Air Transport, Inc., announced the culmination of negotiations in process since March, 1925.

"The signing of these contracts," he said, "thus marks the culmination of many months of experiment, of organization and of cooperative effort to this end.

"It marks also a long step forward in the firm establishment of that privately owned and operated commercial air transport which is the professed object of all the air legislation which has been enacted in Washington in 1926, and which has become a matter of deep rooted national policy.

"This group of representative American (National Air Transport, Inc.,) of whom I have the honor to be the president, has gone forward courageously and unitedly in the prosecution of its original object, although the group was drawn from many parts of the territory which it aimed to serve. It has operated entirely on its own capital. No stock has been sold to the public, nor is there any such intention. The policy of the company is to give a full, fair and thorough trial to transportation by air."

DEATH OF JABES K. HACKETT NOTED AMERICAN ACTOR

PARIS, Nov. 8—(AP)—James K. Hackett, noted American actor, who was long recognized as one of the foremost Shakesperian players of the time, today died from heart disease after a long illness from an internal complaint.

Mrs. Hackett, who was Beatrice H. Beckett of London, was at the bedside when death came. She has received already a great number of messages of condolence from personal friends and members of the profession.

Members of the family entourage said today that there would be no funeral services in Paris, but that Mr. Hackett's body would be cremated in Paris and the ashes then taken to New York for interment in the family vault at Woodlawn cemetery.

Mr. Hackett's illness made him realise a week ago that he would be unable to make a scheduled appearance tomorrow at a royal matinee before King George and Queen Mary in London. He was to have appeared in a scene from MacBeth for the aid of the Shakespearian theatre at Stratford-on-Avon, to replace the one which was recently burned. The scene from MacBeth in which Mr. Hackett was to have appeared was scratched from the program.

TWO ARMY AVIATORS WERE KILLED NEAR GETTYSBURG

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Nov. 8—(AP)—Two army aviators, Lieut. Kenyon M Hegardt and Lieut. H. W. Downing, were killed today when their De Haviland airplane crashed into a ridge on the South Mountain, 15 miles west of this place. They were said to have been bound from Dayton, Ohio, to Bolling Field, Washington, D. C.

Both fliers, who apparently had made an effort to launch their parachutes, were dead when residents in the vicinity reached the wrecked plane. The fliers came from the west. Miss Alice B. Kepner and her brother William, who lived about a half mile from the scene of the accident, said they saw the plane circle low above their mountain home three times and then head westward.

Two Offers Made U. S. Shipping Board

To Operate U. S. Lines and Purchase Five Ships of American Merchant Fleet For $1,000,000.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Two formal offers by New York shipping interests to operate the fleet of the United States Lines and to purchase the five ships of the American Merchant fleet for $1,000,000 were received by the United States shipping board today and taken under advisement.

The board had invited bids for both lines, but nine was made to purchase outright the five passenger vessels of the United States lines. P. A. S. Franklin, president of International Merchant Marine, however, entered on behalf of the Atlantic Transport Line of New York, a bid of $4,000,000 for the Leviathan alone, and the Potter Steamship Company, Inc., of New York, offered $1,505,000 for either of the two sister ships, President Roosevelt and President Harding, of the United States lines. These offers were dismissed by the board because they did not comply with the stipulations of the offer, which provided for the sale of the whole line.

The two companies making direct offers for the American Merchant fleet, consisting of the steamships American Trader, American Banker, American Merchant, American Farmer and American Shipper, were William F. Kenney, and the J. H. Winchester company, present operators of the American Merchant fleet, both bid $200,000 for each of the five merchant vessels and offered to enter into an agreement to operate the United States lines under charter.

A separate proposal by Kermit Roosevelt provided for the organization of a corporation to purchase the vessels of the American Merchant fleet for $252,000 each on condition that the vessels of the United States lines be allocated to the organization for operation.

RECOMMENDATIONS BY GOV. TRUMBULL IN ARMISTICE DAY PROCLAMATION

HARTFORD, Nov. 8—(AP)—The cessation of all activities for two minutes at 11 o'clock Thursday as a tribute to those who died during the World war is urged in the official Armistice day proclamation issued today by Governor Trumbull.

The governor recommends that the day "be observed throughout the state as a day of thanksgiving for the victory of our arms and a day of commemoration for all the heroic men and women whose sacrifices made that victory possible."

Schools throughout the state, will observe the two minutes of silence and will hold appropriate exercises during the day, it was said today at the office of the state board of education. Patriotic and civic organizations are expected to make special observance of the day, in Hartford and throughout the state. Inasmuch as the Armistice day parade and memorial exercises were held here Sunday, there will be no public observance Thursday beyond the display of flags and the suspension of activities at 11 o'clock.

"Eight years ago the clamor of conflict ceased and a strange silence fell like a benediction upon bloody battle fields where war weary men were engaged in the most gigantic struggle of all times. A storm of joy and thankfulness and solemn pride swept over the nation on that eventful day in November, 1918. Peace had come and with it a renewed sense of national security; the justification of high ideals and a consciousness of a fight well fought and honorably won.

"We are fast becoming, however to regard phases of the late war in the light of an evil dream and to overlook the ravages of war. It is becoming increasingly easy to forget even the spirit which prompted our own service. To the end that this service may be kept alive in our hearts I designate Thursday, the eleventh day of November, as Armistic day and I recommend that it be observed throughout the state as a day of thanksgiving for the victory of our arms and a day of commemoration of the all heroic men and women whose sacrifices made that victory possible.

"I recommend further that on this day, insofar as it may be practicable, all business and traffic be suspended at 11 o'clock for a period of two minutes in solemn tribute to our soldier dead. We can not too often re-consecrate ourselves to the great thing for which they gave their lives."

NEW METHOD OF MAKING INCOME TAX REDUCTION

Secretary Mellon Proposes That the Projected Income Tax Refund be Conducted Through a Credit to the Taxpayer on His First Two Installments of Income Taxes to Be Paid Next Year—Agreement Reached That the Credit on Next Year's Taxes Could be Made "At Least 12 1-2 Per Cent."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon ironed out the tax refund proposal of the executive today and agreed that it should be accomplished through a credit to the taxpayer of about 12 1-2 per cent on income taxes to be paid next year on this year's income.

While the president was busy adjusting his tax saving plan with his secretary of the treasury, congressional leaders were expressing varying views which indicated clearly the plan did not meet with full approval at the capitol.

Mr. Mellon accepted the proposal to take his surplus away from debt retirement, but he convinced the president that the idea for an immediate refund of income taxes collected this year would be too costly from an administrative standpoint.

The secretary also boosted the ante of the executive, who had suggested a refund of 10 or 12 per cent, and it was agreed at the white house conference that the credit on next year's taxes could be made "at least 12 1-2 per cent."

The plan worked out by the president and Mr. Mellon provides that the credit shall be taken on the first two installments of income taxes to be paid next year—in March and in June—which would permit a cut of 25 per cent of each installment if the 2 1-2 per cent figure on the year's taxes is authorized by congress.

The credit must be taken in the first two installments to permit the government to adjust its books by the close of the fiscal year, ending June 30. It was calculated at about $250,000,000, which is the surplus expected at the end of the year.

Up at the capitol, Chairman Smoot of the finance committee which would handle any tax bill, cautiously declined a statement on the proposal ending a more complete study, but he indicated he was not in sympathy with the general proposition.

Senator Norris of Nebraska, a leader of the republican insurgents, came out flatly against the president's proposal, declaring that if the treasury had a surplus, it should be devoted to retirement of the public debt.

Senator Smoot said everyone was in favor of tax reduction and indicated that he would support a reduction measure if the condition of the treasury warranted. He believed, however, that congress should proceed slowly in the matter and not reduce taxes to a point which later might make necessary a special levy to meet conditions that might follow a slump in business from what he regards as the present unusual conditions.

Both the republicans and the democrats were accused by Senator Norris of playing politics with the tax question. He declared he would approach the question of tax reduction from a business point of view.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND WAS MINUS ARMS, LEGS AND HEAD

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Patrick McClafferty, assistant superintendent in a fashionable apartment house in Flushing, was arrested today on a charge of murder after a woman's body without arms, legs or head was found hidden in a coal bin in the basement.

The woman was Miss Rabina Lyttle, about 40, often seen with McClafferty Miss Lyttle was a nurse employed at times by residents in the house.

McClafferty was found wandering around apparently dazed, a few blocks away. He is said to have confessed that he dismembered the body after Miss Lyttle died of some disease, and burned the missing parts. An effort is being made to get a clear story from him.

A physician said the woman had been dead about five days. Stains in a closet in McClafferty's apartment in the house led to the belief that the body was hidden for a while in the closet. Photographs of Miss Lyttle were found in McClafferty's rooms. Tenants say she visited him frequently, for days at a time.

MURDERER IN CHICAGO GIVEN 35 YEAR SENTENCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The tab Martin J. Durkin has been running with society was totalled today, and it will take the "shiek" murderer and automobile thief exactly 60 years and five days of penitentiary service to pay it.

To the state penitentiary sentence of 35 years for murder, and two sentences of five years each in a federal prison for interstate transportation of stolen automobiles were added today five sentences of one year and a day each.

Balked Sunday in his hope of a prison break when county jail guards found steel saws in his cell, Durkin today pleaded guilty to each of the remaining five counts of an indictment and was sentenced to a year and a day in each instance.

The court specified that the 35 years punishment for the slaying of Edwin C. Shanahan, federal agent, shot to death when he sought to arrest Durkin for automobile thefts, be paid first, and that after that the seven federal sentences be served consecutively.

In addition to the slaying of Shanahan, two other deaths are attributed to him, those of a police sergeant and a Durkin relative slain when a police trap laid for the "shiek" miscarried and he shot his way out.

PRINCESS ASTID BECOMES THE DUCHESS OF BRABANT

BRUSSELS, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Princess Astid of Sweden, now the Duchess of Brabant and bride of Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, today was given to the heart of Belgian people in a stirring enthusiasm that at times threatened to overwhelm her and her royal protectors.

At Antwerp, where the princess made her first landing on Belgian soil from the Swedish cruiser Drott, a huge eager crowd broke through the police lines and swarmed about the royal party. Several persons were injured, a few requiring hospital attention, when the police forced the crowd back. Some of the crowd were stepped on by horses of mounted policemen, among those thus injured being the Swedish minister.

When the Pytgia arrived at Antwerp this morning, Princess Astid was standing on the bridge waving he handkechief. King Airbert, Queen Elisabeth and Prince Leopold, who has not seen his bride since their civil marriage in Stockholm last Thursday mounted the bridge with others of the royal party.

"Where is Leopold?" asked Princess Astrid. A moment later, despite the onlookers, the princess threw her arms around her husband's neck and embraced him warmly, while the kiss they exchanged would never have passed American movie censors.

The princess' snow white dress turned gray and then almost to black under the pelting drops of Belgium's "drache national" as the winter rains are called.

A Swedish proverb has it that "the bride whose wedding bouquet is wetted by rain is certain to be happy." If the proverb is reliable, the future queen of the Belgians already has her happiness guaranteed.

HOURS BLOCK SETTLEMENT OF BRITISH MINERS' STRIKE

LONDON, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Adjustment of working hours still remains the great stumbling block in the settlement of the miners' strike. A number of lesser points, such as minimum wages and the percentages to be allocated to wages and profits, it is believed, were settled at No. 10 Downing street tonight, when government ministers discussed with the miners' leaders the controvesial questions.

The miners' leaders stoutly refuse to consent to any extension of the seven-hour day unless they possess power to argue upon the necessity of this in any district before a national appeal board. The mine owners as firmly insist upon longer hours. The government on its side is anxious to secure a negotiated settlement.

The miners' executive, if compelled to accept longer hours, will refer the matter to the men themselves and make no recommendation, for, they explain, they have no mandate to agree to longer hours.

Even if an agreement is reached, it must be submitted to a delegate conference towards the end of the week. An announcement is made that more than 300,000 men are at present at work in the various coal fields.

DECISION RESERVED IN APPEAL FROM STATE AWARD

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 8—An appeal from the award of the state highway commission in the matter of damages for land taken by the state highway department from the plaintiff's property in the survey and layout for the new state highway at Chaplin, in the case of Charles S. Turner of that town, was heard before John K. Beach of New Haven, as associate justice of the supreme court of errors, acting as referee, in the superior court chamber of the town building here Monday.

The plaintiff, along with a number of others in the town of Chaplin whose land bordered on or was used by the state highway department for the construction of the new highway, was awarded damages. The finding in his case was "Damages $175, benefits $35" leaving the amount to be paid Mr. Turner $150. The latter is of the opinion that the award is too low.

Attorney J. W. Carpenter of Hartford represented the highway commission in the case and Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of this city, the plaintiff. The testimony in the main consisted of valuations of the land in question, before and since the new highway was built, the value according to the tax list and the question as to whether or not that portion of the Turner property which is in part, is still an asset for business purposes.

Maps of the section in question were introduced as evidence, along with a description of the section taken over by the highway department. According to the description the property in question consists of .33 of an acre but this was changed with the consent of the plaintiff to read ".38 of an acre."

Mr. Turner testified that his only occupation at the present time was raising poultry which had been affected by the action of the state highway department in taking over land that was most essential to him in this connecticut. The land taken had been used as a runway for his chickens. His poultry plant was damaged, he said, and he would be unable to make the venture a paying proposition this year He said that in 1925 he had cleared $582.03 above expenses. This year he had very little success on account of the division of his property. The plaintiff and his attorney set forth that it was not due entirely to the value of the land that the award was rejected but to the damage to the poultry raising business.

Other witnesses heard on the plaintiff's side were Judge B. M. Welch, town clerk of Chaplin, and Merritt Welch, whose testimony in the main was a description of the property in question, and that of adjoining properties and their valuations. Judge Charles S. Ruse and O. F. Wilson of Chaplin and Charles W. Tryon, a local real estate agent.

Those appearing for the state highway commission were Divisional Engineer Herbert Smith of the state highway department and the following real estate men, Edward Dugan and Clark B. Whalley of Hartford and H. Mayberry of New London. Engineer Smith described the section of the Turner property before and after the "cut" was made for the highway and the grades and elevations of the land at the present time. The real estate men were of the opinion that the award of the highway commission was a fair one.

At the conclusion of the hearing Justice Beach announced that he would reserve his decision.

Jackson. Two and one-half pints of liquor were found in Kelley's apartments and confiscated. The accused had nothing to say for himself and was fined two hundred dollars and costs, totaling $216.15 and given a jail sentence of fifteen days.

NOANK

The West Mystic Bulldogs football team came to Noank Sunday afternoon and played the fast Noank Crushers on Williams field, before the largest crowd of the season. The kickoff was at 2:30 when B. Bracci, left halfback kicked to West Mystic and the ball was caught by Grant, left guard, who made a run of 35 yards before being downed by Tackle Crab Steele. The Crushers held for four downs with 5 yards to go, and Allen punted the ball. It was a great game to watch, both teams working hard for a touchdown for three periods. The score was nothing to nothing; West Mystic held the Crushers on the one-yard line where they lost the ball on downs in the final quarter, a sub named George Laffergean played in place of Dinty Banks who hurt his leg and standing on the 45 yard line, he kicked a pretty goal over the bar for 3 points in what was the only score of the game. The result was Crushers 3 West Mystic 0. Speed Langworthy, Laffergean, B. Bracci, left halfback were the stars for Noank, while Grant and Moore, the big fullback starred for their team. Referee, F. Rathbun.

A young lady of the village was getting ready one day last week to attend a big dance in New London and she took her fur coat from the cedar bag and put it out on the line to air when a dog named Mike that lives in that neighborhood saw it on the line, thought it was a bear or something like that, chewed the coat to pieces and then ran for home. The young lady found out who owned the dog and she was broken hearted to see the animal tear up a $55 coat. The owner paid what damage was done and will break his dog of the habit. The young lady did not attend the big dance.

Edward Jensen of New York was home for the week end.

At the Dew Drop inn dance hall in North Stonington Saturday night, about ten from the village attended the dance. Among them "Charleston Charles" from Noank, Alfred Ballertina, gave an exhibition of the Charleston in which he showed the crowd some fine steps. The orchestra played fast music, but Charles was right there and it was called the best exhibition seen on that floor. About 150 were present.

DANIELSON

BOY SCOUT TROOP TO PARADE AT NORWICH

DANIELSON, Nov. 8—A troop of Boy Scouts to the number of about 30 will leave here about noon Thursday for Norwich to participate in the Armistice day parade in that city. Arrangements have been made with Captain F. G. Armington of the Service battery for an army truck from among those kept at the state armory here to supply transportation for the trip. Scoutmaster Sidney P. Marland will be in charge of the Scouts. Mr. Marland said Monday afternoon that an invitation had been extended to Boy Scouts of Putnam to accompany the Danielson troop on the trip to Norwich.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary LeClair was held from her home in Attawaugan Monday morning with funeral services at St. Joseph's church in Dayville at nine o'clock. Rev. Ignatius Kost was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery. The bearers were Peter J. Stone, Louis Stone, George Stone, Delor Masse, Joseph Paige and Wilfred Aubin. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

After fluctuating very irregularly during the digging season, the price of potatoes appears to have become stabilized. Early last month, when there was some snappy weather and reports from Maine indicated a part of the crop there might be lost, potato prices here began to climb. Then came warmer weather, assurance of a complete harvesting of the Maine crop and more steady prices here. Some farmers in this territory are restricting their sales of potatoes, hoping for higher prices late in the winter or early spring.

The death of Mrs. Marshall J. Frink of Brooklyn at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam Sunday came as a great shock to her relatives and friends in Brooklyn and in this and other surrounding towns. Mrs. Frink entered the hospital Tuesday of last week.

One thermometer in Danielson that evidently was trying to set a record for high temperatures during November showed a reading of 92 degrees at 11:30 Monday forenoon. The instrument was exposed to the direct glare of the sun on a building in the business section of the town.

In view of the fact that there is to be no general observance of Armistice day here on Thursday, former service men have suggested that it would be fine if Danielson would note the anniversary by a displaying of flags and other patriotic devices. This, in some measure, would call attention to one of the greatest days in the world's history.

Large crowds greeted Dr. and Mrs. Rees at both services held in the Baptist church Sunday. The most impressive service of the day was the union communion service which was largely attended and furnished the desired atmosphere for the services which are to follow. The large union choir and orchestra conducted by Mrs. Rees led the song services which everybody enjoyed. The preaching of Dr. Rees was devotional and direct. He is a master preacher and all who heard him left the services feeling that they had enjoyed a feast of good things and that the best was yet to come.

This afternoon at three o'clock Dr. Rees will conduct a Bible reading at the Pentecostal church to which everyone interested is most cordially invited.

Thursday afternoon at the same place and hour Dr. Rees will speak to women only. This service will include girls of high school age and it is hoped that many will find it possible to attend.

Friday evening will be Sunday school night. Sunday schools from surrounding towns will be invited to come in a body and furnish two special numbers each in the program. This may be a solo quartet, chorus, instrumental number or anything else in keeping with the spirit and purpose of the service.

Sunday afternoon at three o'clock there will be a mass meeting in the Baptist church for men only. All men are invited to come and bring as many as possible. No man should miss this service.

At a session of the town court Monday morning Dona Thibeault of Putnam was fined $100 and costs and given 30 days in jail for having operated a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant. Execution of the jail sentence was suspended. Prosecuting Attorney Bill said that jail sentences are now being imposed in addition to the fine of $100 in such cases as this.

The very adequate letter of Leslie H. Tyler, New Haven, a special representative of the N. Y. N. H. and H. R. R. company as to why the railroad company burns up old ties instead of making them available for fuel will explain to a great many people along the company's right of way in this territory why such disposition is not wanton waste. The letter appeared in communications to the editor column in Monday's Bulletin.

With what appeared to be a season's supply of dry, hard wood on hand at the end of summer, wood dealers are now beginning to relate that this commodity is getting scarce and likely will be exhausted early in the winter, excepting as applies to a few men who have heavy stocks remaining. Already some dealers are beginning to talk about supplying green wood. This is not because there is a scarcity of coal this fall, for there is an ample supply in Danielson, but because many people became accustomed to using wood again during the coal strikes and are continuing to do so until real cold weather sets in.

Elmer Gallup, who has been quite seriously ill, is reported very much improved.

Sales ladies wanted, regular and part time work. F. W. Woolworth, Main St. —Adv.

Indian summer weather again on Monday with an afternoon temperature in Danielson of 72 degrees in the sun.

Out of sight again have gone the punch boards, long in disfavor in Danielson. A fine for one man who had one the past week accomplished the new hideaway.

A dog, Gypsy, owned by Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Woodworth, was killed Monday morning when it was run over by a truck on Broad street.

The name Pequot has taken on new significance for people up and down the Quinebaug Valley between Putnam and Plainfield.

A state conference of Congregational churches scheduled for today and Wednesday is of general interest in this section.

Members will hear reports covering the past year of activities when a meeting of the Windham County Agricultural society is held at Brooklyn next Saturday.

Members-elect of the legislature in towns hereabouts are now more or less given to speculation as to the committee assignments they will draw.

Mrs. Kent A. Darbie will have the members of the W. C. T. U. at her home on Broad street for a meeting this afternoon.

An exhibit that will include the handiwork of many nationalities will be a feature of the Americanization institute to be held here the coming week.

Chimney sweeps relate that there have been many calls for their services of late, and this may be regarded as insurance against so many chimney fires during the cold weather season.

Only two more weeks of the open season for hunters, who are making the most of every opportunity to go afield.

Because it would be so difficult for a great majority of the members to arrange to be away, the Service battery will not participate in the Armistice day parade at Norwich next Thursday.

Samuel Palmer and member of his family were visitors on Sunday from New London with Mrs. George Stone of Academy street.

Mrs. Sarah Nolan returned to Bridgeport after spending a few days here with her sisters, the Misses Dunn and Mrs. Peter Reynolds of North Main street. John Dunn of Nashua, N. H., also visited here over the week end.

Miss Eleanor Eddy of Blackstone has been a guest of Miss Helen Cronin.

Though the work is far from completed, a good state road is being built on the route leading southward from the Brooklyn fair grounds into Canterbury. This work was started last year.

There is always interest in new automobiles, as indicated by the successful opening and sales record of a new concern here on Saturday.

Plans are being advanced for the formal installation on November 30 of Rev. Harding W. Gaylord as pastor of the Westfield Congregational here.

The usual result of the first ride—

"MUSCLES ALL TIED UP IN HARD KNOTS"

Limbers up quickly after hard ride

"After several years' absence from the saddle, I took a hard horseback ride, and the next day my muscles were all tied up in hard knots. I applied Sloan's Liniment. Right away the tenseness in the muscles began to relax and in an hour or so, they felt as limber as ever."

The makers of this wonderful liniment have received many thousands of letters like this telling of the amazing relief that Sloan's gives to every kind of muscular pain.

Sloan's gives real and lasting help because it doesn't just deaden the pain. It gets at the cause. Right to the place that hurts it brings a healing stream of fresh, new blood. And stiff muscles quickly relax, and pain stops as the healing stream carries off the "fatigue poisons." Get a bottle today. All druggists—35 cents.

PUTNAM

ACCIDENTS RESULTS IN TWO BEING TAKEN TO HOSPITAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 8.—Victor Nickiicki, 51, of Eastford, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, suffering with several broken ribs and possible internal injuries. He was driving a dump cart with two horses hitched to it when one of the horses became unruly and they both started to bolt and run. Nickiicki jumped from the wagon and ran to their heads, trying to stop them. He was knocked down and the wheels of the cart passed over his body. He was taken to the hospital in the ambulance.

Mrs. Phillip Laflamme of North Grosvenordale is at the Day Kimball hospital with a badly lacerated scalp wound and other injuries, as the result of an accident while she was in a motor car with her husband. A car suddenly appeared in their path, and thinking a collision was imminent, she jumped from the automobile. A doctor was summoned and he ordered her taken to the hospital.

The Pocahontas lodge was entertained by Mrs. Walter Chandler at her home on Oak street. A salad supper was served and card playing was enjoyed. The guests present were: Mr. and Mrs. John Osier and family, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Spatcher, Mrs. Ola Litchfield and family, Mrs. Lillian Baker, Raphael Cotton, Austin Lincoln and Mr. and Mrs. Chandler.

November 8 to 13 is to be observed as Children's Book week at the Putnam public library. Visit the library and get suggestions for your Christmas book buying for the children.

RUNAWAY PUTNAM BOY FOUND IN PROVIDENCE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 8.—Frank Ayotte, 14, who was reported as missing last week, was found in Providence. The boy admitted taking a bicycle from the high school but denied taking a wheel from Main street. Captain of police went to Providence and brought the boy and the wheel back to Putnam where the boy was turned over to Peter A. Gardner, probation officer. Mr. Gardner kept the boy over night at a hotel. The next morning the boy asked to go to the wash room and attempted to escape through a window in the rear, but was caught. At a juvenile session of the city court, Ayotte was committed to the Connecticut School for Boys, as his record was not of the best and investigation showed that his environment might be better.

RED CROSS DRIVE TO START ON NEXT FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 8.—The roll call drive for the Red Cross will start the day after Armistice day, Friday, Nov. 12, and a house to house canvass will be made. Fifty per cent of the money raised from membership fees remain here for the use in Putnam district and one of the uses and the main one, is the maintenance of the public health nurse, a feature of the service that is vital to the town.

If the public can be raised to the same amount of enthusiasm that the committee now feels for the coming drive, a large membership will be enrolled. The committee is in personal touch with the service and perhaps realizes the excellent work being done. The Red Cross, however, is a national institution, and its work in relieving suffering and distress is known to all. Here in Putnam the same work is carried out on a smaller scale but nevertheless is very important to our community.

Many a poor family has the advice and assistance of the trained nurse as well as her labors in their home, many baby lives are saved yearly through the public health nursing service. When the person in need can pay a small fee is charged but lack of money is not considered when service is needed. The people of Putnam are urged to be ready to receive the house to house canvassers when they make their rounds. This will enable to complete their work sooner and without an untiring effort. There should be no need of urging or argument, and the membership fee should be willingly and cheerfully given that the work may go on.

A number of the members of the Second Congregational church of this city will attend the general conference of the Congregational churches which is to be held in the United church at Norwich on Tuesday and Wednesday of tis week. The program will be an interesting one and will consist of reports of committees, sectional meetings dealing with different phases of church work, platform addresses and business sessions.

The annual meeting of the Women's Board of Missions for New England will be held in the Pilgrim church, Worcester, Nov. 10-11. There will be missionary addresses besides studies in missionary methods and business. A number of the ladies of the Missionary society of the Congregational church will be in attendance at this meeting.

FOY-OAKES MARRIAGE MONDAY SOLEMNIZED AT ST. MARY'S

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 8—Monday morning at St. Mary's church Miss Ella Oakes became the bride of Joseph D. Foy, at a nuptial high mass sung by Rev. J. J. McCabe.

The bride was prettily gowned in gray chiffon and crepe, with picture hat to match and carried white chrysanthemums. Her matron of honor, Mrs. D. J. Connell of Blackstone, Mass., a sister of the groom, wore blue chiffon with black picture hat and carried yellow chrysanthemums.

A breakfast was served the bridal party at the Wauregan hotel, Norwich, and after the breakfast Mr. and Mrs. Foy left for a trip to Philadelphia and Washington. Upon their return they will reside in a new home on Brown avenue.

Both are popular young people of the town, with hosts of friends that are wishing for them good fortune and every happiness.

A number of local automobile parties were over the state road Sunday between Willimantic and Putnam via Chaplin and Phoenixville. At the village of Chaplin the Jewett City people halted and were given opportunity to take note of the setting off from the new cement highway, of that pretty little hamlet, by reason of the "make the crooked ways straight" policy in the new state road survey. When the new survey in Lisbon becomes a reality, then, as far as the main state trunk line is concerned, Jewett City will be left to the eastward on a little loop all its very own. Yet, the exile from trunk line traffic will be but partial, as it was learned Monday, that in the event of the change becoming absolutely expedient on account of through traffic demands, all the bus lines will be operated over the borough loop. The regular automobile procession that never stops within the borough limits, and the night-trick traffic, that nearly rattles dwellers from their beds, are about the only ones that will pass shy of the borough. Summer pleasure automobile parties will come through Jewett City for the privilege of seeing the beauties of the town's attractive highway.

A little distance west of Chaplin the parties were interested in another bit of road building economics, to be seen in the short detour, where, at an especially picturesque setting of rocks and a small stream, a new bridge, is in process of construction. Griswold has had to contend with the detour at Bishop's all summer, so at this point the method of handling the traffic was of interest. At Bishop's, the traffic staff system has accomplished the trick without confusion or delay. At Chaplin, a man with a red flag and a white one stood in the detour, midway between the ends, both of which he had in view. The waving of the white flag gave traffic the signal to move, meanwhile with the other hand, the red flag was presented to the approaching machines on the other end to hold them up. Was that man busy with the Sunday traffic? A one-armed paper-hanger with the hives, had nothing on him! But he was doing his job O. K.

Burial was in the Jewett City cemetery, the committal service being read by Rev. Mr. Carter. The bearers were William and George M. Robertson, George McFarland and Leslie Miller. Undertaker George G. Grant of Taftville had charge of the funeral arrangements.

Police Officer Henry Vegiard received three complaints Sunday that automobiles passing over Slater avenue were being stoned by urchins secreted behind buildings in the Hill section. In one case part of a brick hit the metal sash bar that holds the wind shield. The police point out the seriousness of this offense in itself, with possibilities of a breaking shield causing a bad accident.

Monday opening Educational Week, State's Attorney Arthur M. Brown addressed the pupils of the seventh and eighth grades of the Riverside Grammar school in Assembly hall. His topic was Constitutional Rights.

There was a rumor Monday that the new bridge at Bishop's will be opened to traffic November 17. The detour, if it could be removed to Rocky Point or Coney Island, would need but little development to furnish a snap-the-whip attraction that would be the real thing, and it wouldn't require an engine to run it!

Monday's weather was something to talk about "for the time of year."

SKINNY MEN THIS BEATS RECORD

He Gained 28 Pounds in 5 Weeks — Good Solid Healthy Flesh, Too

In every town in America you can see skinny, scrawny men and women with deep hollows in cheeks, neck and chest who are more to be pitied than blamed.

Doctors, Chemists, Scientists all agree that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh building, health promoting, strength increasing vitamins. They also agree and the whole world agrees with them that it is about the most evil smelling and nasty tasting, nauseating stuff that human beings come in contact with—it upsets most stomachs.

But now all that is changed—Cod Liver Oil comes in tablet form, sugar coated and as easy to take as candy. Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere sell McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets with the distinct understanding that if any thin, lean, underweight man or woman takes them for 30 days and does not gain at least 5 pounds, the purchase price will be returned.

Just try them for 30 days, all you folks who need 5 or 10 pounds of good, solid flesh. They have rounded out the scrawney places in thousands of people—they will help you.

Stanley E. Howe, Atlantic City, N. J., writes that he gained 28 pounds in 5 weeks and further writes, "I sleep, rest and eat and nothing bothers my nerves—I feel like a real man—thanks to McCoy's."

One woman, exceedingly thin, gained 10 pounds in 12 days; and don't forget that, being full of vitalizing vitamins, they do help feeble old folks who need a real tonic, and for thin, puny, undeveloped children — they quickly bring health, strength and increased weight. 60's tablets for 60 cents. Insist on McCoy's—the original and genuine.

THERMOMETERS AND COMMON SENSE

It's a cold morning.

How did you know?

Did you look at the thermometer or did your tingling fingers about the news? Perhaps the thermometer verified your own opinion but you knew it was cold before you looked. Your common sense told you.

Exactly!

When you take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound or any other medicine—how do you know it helps you? Do you ask the neighbors? Do you try to figure it out on a scientific basis?

Certainly not.

You feel better and your common sense tells you what caused it.

Science may confirm your own opinion, but you knew it all the time.

Try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Then judge for yourself.

The Third Generation

Mrs. W. O. Blewett, Route B, Box 197a, Lakeland, Florida, says: "I first took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl. My mother had taken it, also my grandmother used it in her family for her eight daughters and herself. I think this medicine does more for women than anything else I know of. I recommend it to my friends and several have taken it because of my recommendation."

USING THE SURPLUS

Already there is more talk as to what can or should be done with the surplus from this year's federal taxes and other revenue. There are those who have been advocating large tax cuts without knowing what the surplus is going to be and without much of any regard for what the effect of the tax slashing would be. The disposition to gamble with the future federal income cannot arouse much enthusiasm, however much political good might be expected to develop therefrom. Whatever is done in the way of tax reduction should be done in a sane manner and without danger of putting the federal treasury in a hole from which it could climb only by the resort to new tax levies.

In consideration of the indicated surplus for the present fiscal year, which promises to be larger than was estimated, President Coolidge sees where it is possible to give a rebate on this year's income taxes amounting to 10 to 13 per cent. He believes such a course is preferable to the permanent cutting of taxes at this time. It would deal temporarily with the situation and thereafter it would be possible to handle the question of tax reduction when a sufficient period had elapsed to test fully the existing levy.

Under the treasury plan, which has been offered when there has been talk of tax reduction, whatever surplus developed would be turned toward the elimination of the nation's indebtedness, from which there would be a steady reduction in interest and the whole country would experience the benefit since it would mean the quicker wiping out of the national debt and the elimination of what is a huge sum each year for interest.

The surplus is going to be the subject of attack from several directions in the short session of congress and the need is to see that, whatever is done with it, it should be handled wisely. The situation is one which calls for the use of common sense and not the advancement of ideas intended only to obstruct and result in doing nothing at all.

APPEALS FOR MORE CARE

In pointing out the fact that the automobile death toll in Massachusetts last month was the largest in any month of the year, Registrar Goodwin of the motor vehicle department of that state urges the drivers to use more care.

"I do not know whether periodical appeals for more care on our highways has any effect but it can do no harm, and, at this time, I wish to appeal to all the drivers of motor vehicles and to all the pedestrians to remember that November is probably the next worst month of the year to October," is the way the registrar comments on conditions in that state. Probably the heads of motor vehicle departments in other states feel much the same way about appealing for greater care, and yet that is just what is needed. There is that responsibility which drivers of vehicles and pedestrians must assume, and until they do there is reason to expect that the distressing list of accidents and deaths will continue and increase.

By continually hammering away at the need of care it is possible that those who need such warning most will eventually be brought to realize their weakness and supply the needed self control. It is certainly frightful to think that this great waste of life each month is going to continue and to increase each year for no other reason than the refusal on the part of too many persons to get into the habit of being a bit more careful.

Those who are involved in a serious mixup are probably furnished with sufficient reason for needing no further warning, but there are just as good reasons why others who witness, read about or are told of such happenings should take the lesson home to themselves and actually participate in the prevention of needless mixups where injuries and deaths are liable to follow.

Constantly pleading for the exercise of more care is to be regarded as necessary education for many automobile drivers whose attention can be gained in no other way. Obviously it is a matter which they should recognize themselves, but records and daily reports show that it is not done. Thus as long as the appeals do no harm and may gradually do some good let them be continued.

CANAL BUSINESS

When the Panama canal was built it was claimed that there was no intention of developing a money making proposition. It was primarily a short cut between the two oceans for the benefit of this country and as a protection in case of war, and the advantages of it were thrown open to the other countries of the world for the benefit of world commerce.

There was always the possibility that it might exceed expectations, in spite of the cost, and that is being gradually realized. In fact 1926 bids fair to be a banner year for the canal in the matter of transits and tolls.

The largest calendar year's traffic in the history of the canal was in 1923, when 5,037 commercial vessels used the waterway and paid $32,966,833.12 in tolls. The volume of traffic for this year has been such that, if it continued for the remainder of the year, there will have been 5500 or more vessels using the canal for the year with a total collection of tolls of more than $34,000,000, thus establishing a new record.

This shows the increasing appreciation for the canal, while new steamship services are constantly being provided which include the use of the canal and thus mean more business short cut between the Atlantic and Pacific has developed a large increase in coast to coast shipping, for while it is slower it is a cheaper method of transportation than by rail. But the business is not all being furnished by American vessels, nor by those destined to American ports. Through the canal is the recognized course for many lines of commercial vessels which are doing an international business and they are only too glad to get the benefit of the greatly reduced sailing time and cost of operation made possible by the water way across the isthmus.

It is gratifying to note that canal business is showing such gains and yet with each new record established it puts us just that much nearer the time when a decision must be made as to what new development is required to adequately handle canal traffic.

MAKES BAD IMPRESSION

The visit of Queen Marie hasn't gone on the rocks but it has gotten into some rough water and the unpleasantness must be having its effects upon the royal personage. It is certainly a spectacle which isn't expected to go with the transportation of royalty.

The queen of Rumania is in this country for the purpose of seeing the United States, seeing its attractions and studying the people and its institutions. There are times when she must have gotten some very favorable impressions. There are others such as the difficulties which have arisen in connection with members of her party, which are decidedly unpleasant.

The friction which has arisen seems to be due to the unfortunate arrangements connected with the tour. It is a case where the queen is supposed to be in the hands of her friends, but with some of them developing such jealousies that they are more considerate of the attention and publicity they are getting or desire to get than of the pleasure of the royal guest.

It is not a spectacle that makes the people of this country proud. Rather are they disposed to show the disgust which such developments prompt. Could Queen Marie's tour have been an independent one, free from the dependence upon special attention and clear from the efforts of commercialization there would unquestionably have been a different type of management, a display of much better manners and the avoidance of some of the distressing features which have already developed. But regardless of the circumstances they none the less make a very bad impression and cannot fail to in some degree mar the pleasures of the swing about the country.

LYNCH LAW REVIVAL

Within a year or two the number of lynchings in this country has dropped to the point where there has been more or less speculation as to how soon the year would come when there would be none. The downward tendency for the past few years has been an encouraging indication of better conditions. It has been credited with being the result of the demands on the part of the better sentiment in states and a reaction to the efforts which have been made to obtain a federal anti-lynching law.

Whatever the cause of it, the decrease was a welcomed change, but it appears that it is going to be too short lived, for with nearly two months left in this year there have already been 24 persons who have been put to death by lynching, or a third more than the 18 in 1925 and half as many again as the 16 in 1924.

This is much better however than the records of a few years ago but not what it should be. It may be too much to expect that states where lynchings have been winked at for so long are going to abandon that practice all of a sudden, but when such defiance is displayed toward the established laws of any state it is time that such a state through its authorities demanded something different.

The disgrace which goes with the refusal to give an accused person a hearing to which he is entitled under the Constitution should carry a sting that would get corrective action, and it would in most states, regardless of race antagonism, and the quicker such is done the quicker the great underlying cause of most of such acts will be eliminated. The southern states may be the greatest offenders but there are others which have localities which are just as bad if not worse, and with no effective steps taken to stop them.

"Hello-o-o-o-o—

"Oh, is it you? I'm so surprised—why, Mrs. Jones said somebody wanted to speak to me over the phone I didn't have any mo' idea it was you—

"Why, I didn't mean any such a thing. I think it's pehfectly lovely. I cehtinly do. The very idea of you thinkin' I meant I hoped it was somebody else—

"Why, I think it was just too sweet of you for wo'ds. I'm just as gl-a-ad

"Just wonderful—now. I wasn't feelin' very well about a half hour ago, but I'm fine now.

"Why, I don't know—just because, I reckon.

"You want to know just terribly, don't you? Well, maybe I'll tell you—if you're very, very, very good—sometime. Maybe I will.

"Maybe the next time I see you—maybe the time afteh that—maybe not evah—

"O, I don't know—I reckon maybe I'm too bashful—

"Well, if you've just got to know—then, it was because I was just so lo-o-nesome, and then you phoned me—and now I'm not lonesome any mo'—that's all the' is to it.

"Why, of cou'se I mean it. I always say what I mean—I reckon I just have to tell the truth because I haven't got sense enough not to. It don't seem like I'm sma't enough to make up things, like some girls can.

Now, you're just makin' fun of me and I'm goin' to hang the receiveh right up—

"You cehtinly ah. You're talkin' just like that nice boy down at the school that always puts his easel right next to mine and then he just sits there and makes fun of me—

"Now you know you don't mean a word of that—you're talkin' just like he does—just makin' fun of me—of cou'se I know you don't mean to hurt my feelin's and neither does he—he's just as awe-e-et—he wouldn't hu't anybody's feelin's—

"Why, of cou'se he's sweet. Just as sweet as he can be.

"Now you quit tryin' to make me say something that maybe I'll be sorry I said afterward—because I just won't do it—

"No, I'm just not goin' to—no matter how much you tease me—

"Because you'll laugh at me—I just know you will.

"But I don't want you to—

"I didn't say I minded havin' some people make fun of me—I just said I didn't want you to—

"O' just because, I reckon.

"O, I reckon you can guess if you want to, but if you truly can't, I s'pose I'll have to tell you. It's because—anyway, I reckon it's because—usually I don't care enough for people to care a lot what they do—

"Now you're tryin' to make me say something again—

"Well, maybe I'll tell you the next time I see you—

"To-night? Why, I'm just so so-o-o-ory, but I've got an engagement for to-night—

"Thursday night? Why, I'd just pehfectly love to only I promised—

"But, truly I don't ha'dly ever go any place. The' don't anybody ask me to. I just sit 'round home all the time generally. Truly I do—

"Dinneh and a show afterwa'ds? Why, I'd just adore it. And I think it was just too sweet of you to think about takin' me—I haven't been to a real show—I don't know when—and I haven't been any place to dinneh for so long I don't know if I'll know how to behave or anything—maybe I'll eat with my knife—and I haven't got a thing to weah—you'll be so ashamed of me—

"Well, you cehtinly do know how to say nice things—

"I cehtinly do mean it. I wouldn't say it if I didn't—

"Now I just got to hang up the receiveh, You won't min', will you? I just hate to. I'd a whole lot rather stay right here and talk to you than go keep that old engagement, but I just reckon I'll have to—

"Good-by then, till Monday night. I can't ha'dly wait. And thank you eveh so much. You won't forget you asked me or anything, will you?

YOUR HEALTH

WHY PRENATAL CARE FOR MOTHERS?

Theobald, M. M. Flynn, M. D., Erie, Pa. Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Why should a prospective mother take more than ordinary care of herself during that period, which, for nearly a year, precedes the birth of her little one? Have not children been born since the beginning of time and will they not continue to be born until the end of time? Is not the bearing of children a natural function with which nature alone is concerned? Does she not fit the back to the burden? And at all events, is not childbirth an event over which, or over the results of which, we have little or no active control?

These questions reflect an attitude toward the greatest of all human functions which has, until recent years, prevailed in all nations and among all peoples. Today, however, people are believing that the mother, in giving to the world another human being, has the right to the best prenatal care that her locality supports and can possibly provide. She must give to the world a child of health, and she, herself, must suffer in the minimum in so doing.

From the moment a woman becomes a prospective mother a new phase of her life develops. Nature, so prodigal in her multiplication and protection of all living things, rushes to her aid. But "men do not gather grapes of thorns, nor figs of thistles."

Countless reasons may operate to prevent the mother-to-be, unaided, from coming through her ordeal unscathed, while similarly, the infant may not survive the first hour of its existence.

The mother's inheritance, as to health, may itself be faulty, deficient. Family traits, weaknesses, susceptibility to certain diseases, all may make themselves strongly felt. The nervous system, heart and blood vessels, liver, kidneys, ductless glands, the intestinal tract; any or all of these may be quite sufficient to carry the individual through life in normal health under other circumstances without undue strain.

But will they or can they meet the superadded demands of another being, which in its earliest development, augments the already existing burden of life?

Here enters the wisdom of early and frequent consultation with the physician. His advice as to diet, manner of life, personal habits, should be followed. He will keep close watch on the condition of heart and blood vessels, kidneys, and the state of those organs which absorb nutrition and throw off waste. No complaint is so trivial as not to have an important effect on the final result. Continued careful attention is needed to return home a healthy mother and a healthy babe.

Solving the Problem

Auntie, who lives in another part of the state had made Mary a new coat. When it was tried on it was too large. Though small in size and young in experience, Mary realized something was wrong. She gazed at herself in the mirror for a moment and then remarked: "I wish auntie had made it high up around my neck so it wouldn't go down so far over my feet."

That became monotonous.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Rt. Rev. Lewis W. Burton, who today enters upon his 75th year, has been bishop of the Protestant Episcopal diocese of Lexington, Ky., for 30 years. A native of Cleveland, he received his scholastic training at Kenyon college, where he graduated at the head of his class in 1873, and then went to Philadelphia Divinity school for his theological training. After his ordination he returned to Cleveland as assistant rector of All Saints' church. In 1884 he was called to the pulpit of the famous old St. John's church in Richmond, Va., the church where Patrick Henry made his great speech before the Virginia House of Burgesses. When chosen as bishop of the new diocese of Lexington in 1896 Dr. Burton was rector of St. Andrew's church in Louisville. For two things in particular Bishop Burton is noted—his work among the mountaineers of Kentucky and his interest in Sunday schools.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

No One to Play With

'Tis only folk who work each day
That ever know the joy of play.
—Old Mother Nature.

Peter Rabbit, who has nothing to do but play, really never has known the real joy of play. Peter is always sorry for people who have to work, and people who have work to do are always sorry for Peter. That is the way of the world. Peter thinks that working is a waste of time, but of course Peter is mistaken.

Every fall, just on the edge of cold weather, Peter has a discontented spell. The only trouble is he has no one to play with. If he could play by himself, he would be all right. Very few people want to play by themselves. Most folks want somebody else to play with, and in this Peter is just like other folks. So it is that at this certain season of the year he has a period of discontent. Everybody he knows has either gone away, or is getting ready to go away, or is working to prepare for the coming winter. Nobody wants to play. And not a few of Peter's friends turn up their noses at him because he finds nothing to do but play.

Peter delights to hang around where others are at work, so he spent a great deal of time over where the Squirrel cousins were working so hard to fill their storehouses, and were worrying while they worked. But Peter didn't worry. He didn't worry one teeny, weeny bit, yet he didn't have one mouthful of food saved up for winter.

"What's the use?" demanded Peter, when Rusty the Fox Squirrel wondered that Peter didn't worry at all. "What's the use? I've always come through the winter somehow, and I guess I always will. Worrying is what I call borrowing trouble. I don't like to borrow anything not even trouble."

"You'll worry all right when the ground is covered with snow and ice and you have nothing to eat," declared Rusty. "Then you'll wish you had stored up some food, the way I have. I won't have anything to worry about."

"Yes you will," chuckled Peter. "I know you. You'll be worrying for fear your food won't last until the winter is over. I never knew it to fail. People who worry can always find something to worry about. Now I am a happy-go-lucky."

Rusty chuckled. "I'll say you are," said he. "You are the most happy-go-lucky fellow of my acquaintance. But let me tell you something, Peter Rabbit. Life wasn't intended to be all play."

"And it wasn't intended to be all work," interrupted Peter.

Rusty nodded his head. "Right, Peter, quite right," said he. "Do you know of anybody who plays any harder than my cousins and me when it is time to play? Let me tell you something, Peter."

"Go ahead," said Peter good-naturedly, "I'm listening."

"You don't know the real fun of play."

Peter opened his eyes very wide. "What nonsense!" he exclaimed.

"No, it isn't nonsense," replied Rusty. "It is only those who have done honest work and have earned the right to play who know the real fun of play. Think it over, Peter. Now I've got some work to do and I can't waste any more time." With this away went Rusty to hunt for hickory nuts. Peter watched him for a few moments, then went to look for some one to play with.

But though he looked and looked, he couldn't find anyone else with nothing to do. So he became discontented and unhappy, while those who had work to do didn't have time to be unhappy. (Copyright, 1926, by T. W. Burgess)

Make the Most of Books

By James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D.

Adds New Charm to Life

By taking an interest in what is going on around us we may add a new charm to life. We are surrounded by the wonderful and inspiring but only the great man or woman has the sense to see it; for all the rest life is hopelessly commonplace. The man who finds the most to admire gets the most enjoyment out of life. The study of nature teaches us to appreciate much that is beautiful in literature, and, on the other hand, books help us to enjoy many things about us that otherwise we should not have noticed. Men with finer faculties than ourselves have observed and recorded for us beauties that without their aid we should have been unable to perceive. "Books," said Dryden, "are spectacles to read nature."

Avoid Ugly Pimples

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c, 30c, 60c.

NEW SCENT OF POLITICAL CORRUPTION IN INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 8—(AP)—After a month of circling, the grand jury today caught the scent of the alleged political corruption in Indiana which it has been trailing. Two strong boxes in which D. C. Stephenson is supposed to have deposited evidence of illegal deals made by him with high state officials were traced to his former business partner, L. G. Julian of Evansville, Ind. Julian denied, however, any knowledge as to the contents of the boxes.

D. T. SHEA SELLS BUSINESS AND STORE BLOCK TO STAMFORD MAN

Negotiations were completed here Monday by which Daniel T. Shea, proprietor of the well known furniture firm of Shea & Burke at 37-39-41 Main street, sold the business as well as the five story brick building to Philip Silberman of Stamford who conducts the largest furniture business in that city where he has been located for 35 years. Mr. Silberman is to continue the Shea & Burke business, retaining the name of the old Norwich house, and will have his son-in-law, Herman Sharp, as manager. The young man is now on his wedding trip in Europe.

Mr. Silberman also bought the Water street property connecting with the rear of the Shea lot and his plans for the future include the erection of a building on the Water street lot, where there is now an old two story frame building, known as 44-46-48 Water street. The purchase of the Water street property was made from Ida Berlin and was concluded in the afternoon in the office of John A. Moran, real estate broker. The combined properties give a plot with 45 feet frontage on both streets and a depth from Main to Water street of about 125 feet.

The sale of the real estate, the business and the balance of the stock will effect Mr. Shea's retirement from the active business field, a purpose which he has had in mind since the death last April of his son, Thomas F. Shea, who was associated with him in the business.

Mr. Shea has had an honorable and successful business career in this city for the last 32 years in which he has made the name of his house widely known throughout this part of the state and counting his friends and satisfied customers by the thousands. In 1896 he started an undertaking business in the T. A. B. building on Broadway, and a year later formed a partnership with John W. Burke, under the firm name of Shea & Burke. At that time the new firm bought out the Doyle furniture business, located in the Doyle block at 37-39-41 Main street, and continued the business in the Doyle block for six years under a lease until Mr. Shea bought the real estate in 1900. After a year in the partnership, Mr. Burke preferred to retire as a partner, but he has continued ever since as an employe with an interest and faithfulness as great as if he were a member of the firm.

In the first year after he owned the property, Mr. Shea added one story to the building and put in an elevator, electric lights and a heating plant. While disposing of his furniture business now, he will continue the undertaking business under competent management.

Philip Silberman, the purchaser, is sole owner of the Silberman Furniture Store in Stamford, occupying a five story new building on Main street, which Mr. Silberman built a year ago, opening it Sept. 22, 1925, when about 20,000 crowded the building and blocked the street outside. He deals in many exclusive lines and does an annual business of about $350,000.

It is Mr. Silberman's plan, he said Monday night, to put a new white brick front, with plate glass windows, in the Doyle block if architects decide that this is a feasible plan, or he may tear down the building and re-build it entirely. The building to be erected on the Water street property will make a highly desirable addition to the Main street store and he promises that the completed establishment will make one of the finest furniture stores in this part of the state.

EAGLES ENJOY BANQUET AS PINOCHLE CHAMPIONS

The champion Eagles were victorious in the pinochle series with the Jibboom club of New London and as a result enjoyed a roast turkey banquet served at the Terminal at the conclusion of the evening's play Monday.

John Oney, substituting for Carlson of the Jibboom club was high on the visiting team with 7115, while J. Dwyer of the Eagles was high with 7485.

On account of travelling to New London for two consecutive seasons and defeating the champion Jibboom club of the Whaling city and also by winning every local tournament that they have ever played with the exception of one, the pinochle committee of Norwich Aerie No. 267 feels justified in claiming the city championship in pinochle as they have issued a challenge through the columns of the Bulletin which up to the present time has been accepted only by the We Moderns whom the Eagles committee expects to meet soon.

The committee at this time would like to meet the pinochle team of the Colonial club especially.

ART STUDENTS MEETING HAD INTERESTING EXHIBITS

The November meeting of the Norwich Art Students' association was held in the Converse building, Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The president, Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins presided. The reports of the various committees were read and accepted and eight new members were voted in. The constitution having been revised by special committee was read by Mrs. Robert W. Perkins and accepted after an animated discussion and voted to be become effective at the next meeting.

During the social hour that followed all were interested to see the work of the art students. Pottery in its three stages, green, the first firing and finished, drew forth many favorable comments. Miss Catherine L. Mallet, a teacher in the art school, exhibited several portraits in pastel, drawn from life. They were most pleasing and charmingly rendered. Marshall Howe's lampshades of leaded glass, colored by an original method of transparent oil paint, was most attractive and interesting.

BURGLARS GET INTO TWO PLACES AT OCCUM

Burglars visited the combination news store of Ernest T. Leonard and the barber shop of Herman Mossey at Occum some time between the closing hour of 10 o'clock Sunday night and the hour of opening on Monday morning.

Entrance was made from the barber ship section by the breaking of a pane of glass near a window catch allowing the window to be raised.

Razors, hair clippers and barbers utensils were taken from the barber shop.

In the news store portion the cash register was emptied of change, tobacco, cigars, cigarettes and confectionery were taken.

ARMISTICE PROCLAMATION FOR CITY AND TOWN

It is easy to forget that great deeds often fade rapidly from the memory, and it is fortunate that Armistice Day comes with the passing year to remind us of the sacrifices of our people during the World War.

We must not grow weary of payfered all they had for their country, fered al they had for their country.

We ask that the people of Norwich do everything in their power to make the Armistice Day celebration a success; that they decorate their homes and places of business, and that they extend to the strangers within our gates the hospitality for which Norwich is noted.

Mayor, City of Norwich.

SUSIE ATTENDS YALE-MARYLAND GAME AND IS MUCH DISAPPOINTED

Susie after seeing two of the Yale games does not think much of the Yale team as her letter this week indicates. She writes as follows:

Dears Sports Ed.:

Once again me and the boy friend sees them Yale fellers get licked and you can tell the world its getting to be a habit with them fellers down in New Haven. As football players them Ells would make a whale of a checker team they move so slow. The people what has seen Yale get licked by the Bears from Providence and the Army from West Point didn't come out to the Yale-Maryland farce for which they showed good judgment. They was only a mere handful compared with the mob what was at the Army game and them what was there left early.

Gosh it must be tough to be a stude in a college where your team is always getting whaled. I can just imagine how them fellers what cheers for Yale felt when they see their team getting pushed in the dirt by the Mary Land boys. I guess they felt disgusted with somebody for about the third part of the game half the cheering sector gets up and leaves after hollering their heads off for the varsity to go in. I dont know what the idea of that Tad Jones feller is in keeping the first squad of the field when them second string boys are getting away with everything. Somebody said that he was saving the varsity for the Big Three games. Gosh that Big Three stuff is the bunk, there ain't no big three now. It Yale, Harvard and Princeton is the Big Three then the Army, Navy and Brown is the Bigger Three.

Teams what get licked by little colleges like them big three teams has this year ain't got no right to set themselves up as the last word in football. It ain't no credit for them Yale fellers to get licked by Mary Land and Brown and then beat Princeton and Harvard, teams what have took as bad lickings as what Yale has.

I seen them Connecticut Aggie fellers play football and I seen Yale and believe me if the Aggies couldn't lick Yale I'll eat my hat. I don't see why Yale don't take a crack at them Aggie fellers some year, they couldn't get no worse beating than what they took from Mary Land. Besides if my football ain't wrong it was a Aggie man what played with the Army and mussed up a lotta Yale plays.

Well Ed. that ain't telling you much about the game what I saw in New Haven. What I saw down there was a scrappy little team what used only a dozen players and made the Yale huskies look like a grammar school team. I see some of them New York papers said Yale used her reserves, they oughta said her preserves. If I was coach of that Yale team I'd give all the players a good spanking and send them to bed without no supper. Of course from what I hear it ain't all that feller Joneses fault 'cause they say that the captain has more to say about the team than the coach. If the captain does he oughta get the gate. Can you imagine a kid what ain't played such a awful lot of good football telling a guy like Jones where to get off? They say there ain't the best of feeling between players on the Yale team. Well if that's so they oughta can the whole bunch or else give 'em some boxing gloves and let 'em go to it and settle it once and for all. You ain't going to have no football machine when there is a lotta dirt in the gears.

They tell me that Yale is going to erect steel goal posts set in concrete so's the winning teams what come there ain't got no chance of pulling 'em up and carting 'em away, or else let the contract for erecting them posts to some big lumber concern. The best way is to get a football team, even if they have to advertise in the wanted column of the newspapers. Gosh I like to see Connecticut teams win from teams from other states and I was sure peeved when them Mary Land fellers all ran wild down there. You got to give them southern fellers credit they played a sweet game and deserved to win.

Well Ed. I see them republicans winned the election and Connecticut is safe for a nother coupla years, according to the republicans, I suppose if the democrats had a won they would have said the same thing and it would have been the same. I'm glad we live in America and at election time there ain't no shooting just because the other fellers win out.

I guess the next big day is Armistice day when the boys get out the old uniform and parade. Oughta be some mob in town that day.

Them Academy boys is going to play Bulkeley next Saturday, and it looks like it would be a better game than what Yale has played this year. Of course everybody in Norwich and New London is going so I'm going to order my tickets in advance so's to be sure of a seat. Here's hoping the Academy boys mop up the old campus with them Bulkeley teams.

Yours as ever,

SUSIE.

HORAN FURNISHES EXCITEMENT FOR BERLIN BIKE RIDERS

BERLIN, Nov. 8—(AP)—Harry Horan, of the American team of Horan and Horder competing in the six day bicycle race here, surprised the field tonight by a sudden terrific spurt by which he gained two laps. Later, however, these laps were recovered by the entire field.

The Americans have been behind because Horder, thrown from his bicycle in a spurt last Friday night, was unconscious for two hours, and out of the race until Saturday morning.

At the ninety-seventh hour of the race tonight the German-French team of Junge and Marcillac was leading with 1,573.5 miles. The Americans were seven laps behind, running eighth in the field of ten.

Teams of 11 men each will compete in the Atlantic City-Philadelphia marathon race this Thursday, Armistice day, over a distance of about 60 miles. The Finnish-American squad of distance stars, led by Willie Ritola, comprises the leading entry.

OHIO STATE GROOMING FOR BATTLE WITH WOLVERINES

CHICAGO, Nov. 8.—(AP)—The same Ohio State fotball team which got kicked all over the western conference last fall went to work tonight with a big ten championship in view.

The Buckeyes meet Michigan Saturday, in a game which will eliminate one of the three surviving title contenders unless a tie results, and Wilce's galloping phenoms are the sensation of a vivid season, with smashing triumps over Iowa, Chicago and Columbia written into the season.

Yet, the Ohio State team is the same one, except for Raskowski, lineman, and Robin Bell, end, which a year ago was beaten by Michigan, Illinois, and Iowa, tied by Chicago, and a single touchdown better than the humble Indiana eleven.

Michigan preparing for Ohio State with renewed confidence born of the Wisconsin rout, saw a new ogre today, however, for Minnesota must be met again a week after the Ohio game; and the decisive manner in which the Gophers overwhelmed Iowa indicated that they will be no setup such as the Wolverines found in the season's first engagement between the two teams, which Michigan won, 20 to 0.

The other headliner of next Saturday's card engaged the attention tonight of Northwestern and Chicago. Northwestern, having proved by beating Purdue that it is real football team, shares the conference lead with Ohio State and Michigan, and is a heavy favorite over the Maroons, who have not scored a point in three conference contests.

Purdue rests by playing Franklin, before engaging Indiana two weeks hence, and Illinois will have a casual afternoon against Wabash. Indiana, having failed in all its big ten starts, may find a tartar in Mississippi A. and M., which is among the good teams of the south.

The west is in a dilemma as reards the Notre Dame-Army visit in New York. It wants to see Notre Dame come through to a national championship, and yet it hopes that the Army-Navy game here November 27 will be a scrap for the national title.

INCIDENTS RELATIVE TO TIGER VICTORY MAY CAUSE BREAK

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Princeton prepares for what probably will be the decisive test of the 1926 "big three" series this week against Yale with the aftermath of victory over Harvard arousing fresh discussion of a possible break in relations between the Tiger and the Crimson.

Whether or not developments of the "Battle of Cambridge" result in any official action, most observers seemed convinced today that any existing feeling between the ancient rivals was heightened Saturday, not only by the apparently rough character of the play, resulting in injuries to players on both teams, but also by the demonstration of Tiger rooters after the game in sweeping aside cordons of uniformed police to pull down the Crimson goal posts.

Harvard was a three-fold victim, for the Crimson lost the game, lost the services of its star passer, Guarnaccia, who had several ribs broken, and lost its goal posts.

In spite of the frequency with which first aid was administered to the players, one of the officials, Walter Okeson of Lehigh, was quoted today as regarding the game among the cleanest he had seen.

Princeton spokesmen, while not attaching special significance to the goal-post incident, which they regarded as only typical of such enthusiastic outbursts, questioned the wisdom of attempting to protect the uprights with detachments of police. The presence of the bluecoats, one official pointed out, instead of having a deterrent effect, "acted like a red flag to a bull."

While some Harvard and Princeton men were outspoken in criticizing the game and its after-developments, others took the view that incidents had been magnified by the reported break in Crimson-Tiger football relations earlier in the season. At that time Harvard was understood to plan a cantract with Michigan to replace Princeton but this plan was shelved and any differences apparently patched up at a conference of "big three" executives.

Should any break occur in Princeton-Harvard relations it would not be the first time since they first met on the gridiron in 1877. Relations were suspended for five years after a hotly contested game in 1889. There was another hiatus from 1896 to 1911.

TWO DAY QUALIFYING ROUND AT ST. ANDREWS NEXT YEAR

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, Nov. 8—(AP)—The Royal and Ancient club of St. Andrews has abandoned the sectional qualifying system for next year's British open golf championship in favor of a two day qualifying competition at St. Andrews.

All competitors for the crown now worn by Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga., will play their qualifying round at St. Andrews on June 20 and 21. The players scoring in the first hundred and all those tying for the hundredth place will be eligible for the championship proper which will be played under the same conditions as when Jones captured the title at St. Annes with a sterling 291 last June.

One round will be played on June 22 and another on the 23rd by the surviving players. After that all those fifteen strokes or more behind the leader will retire and the remainder will play two rounds on June 24.

For years the difficulties of reducing the number of aspirants for the open golf crown have been worrying the officers of the Royal and Ancient club. This year a sectional qualifying system, similar to that used in America was adopted, the total entry being divided into three sections—Sunningdale, St. Annes and Western Gailes.

The conditions under which the 1927 amateur championship will be played are the same as when Jess Sweetser captured the crown at Muirfield this year. The 1927 championship will begin at Holyoke on May 23.

MISS ANDERSON WINS MEXICAN TENNIS TITLE

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 7—(AP)—Miss Penelope Anderson of Virginia today won the women's singles tennis championship of Mexico, defeating Miss Martha Bayard of Boston. The score was 6-4, 6-2.

Miss Anderson's service and placing was superior to that of her opponent. Miss Bayard played brilliantly at times, but fell away in her good work noticeably at other times.

MORE CHANGES MADE IN YALE'S VARSITY

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 8—(AP)—Two changes in the lineup in the first team marked the opening of Yale's final work of preparation for the Princeton game Saturday. Stewart Scott who has been out because of an injury returned to left end and Jack Failing substitute back, who played well Saturday against Maryland, was given a trial at right halfback in place of Al Foote. Failing has been on the scrub team the greater part of the fall.

Fishwick was at right end on the first eleven today. The tackles were Richards and Benton, guards, Sturhahn and Webster, and center, Harvey. Captain Bunnell ran the team with Holabird, Kline and Failing the other three in the backfield. This combination had a long signal drill.

The second team all of whom played against Maryland also had a long signal drill. The lineup was: Collins and Mallory, end; Quarrier and Flaherty, tackles; Keil and Wortham, guards; Charlesworth, center; Decker and Switz alternating at quarterback, and Ordway, Foote and Wadsworth, backs.

HARVARD FACULTY NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR UNDERGRADUATE PAPER COMMENT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 8—(AP)—Indications at Harvard today were that no official action would be taken with regard to a special issue of the Harvard Lampoon, undergraduate comic, published after Saturday's big three football game here and devoted to an attack on Princeton university.

While spokesmen for the faculty, athletic committee and undergraduates agreed in admitting that the references to the New Jersey seat of learning were "in bad taste," it was pointed out that neither of the former bodies made it a policy to interfere with matter contained in undergraduate publications. The generally expressed view was that the Princeton team, in defeating Harvard 13 to 0 had used rough tactics and caused unnecessary injuries, but that attacks on the student body of Princeton contained in the Lampoon were unjustified. The publication implied loose morals and excessive drinking on the part of Princeton undergraduates.

The Harvard faculty would make no official comment on the incident, but a member of that body who refused to have his name made public outlined the stand usually taken by the faculty, in matters of the kind. He said it was the policy of the faculty not to interfere with undergraduate publications by way of censoring, criticizing or suppressing them. The faculty, he said, probably would pay no attention to the Lampoon's statements, this spokesman said, adding that in his opinion there was "nothing libellous or insulting" in them.

William J. Bingham, director of athletics, said:

"The athletic director cannot be held accountable for editorials expressed in undergraduate publications."

A large number of Harvard students expressed the opinion that the attack on Princeton was unwarranted and in bad taste. While the view was widespread among undergraduates that there was much rough work by the Princeton football eleven Saturday, and that the athletic relations between the Crimson and the Tiger, threatened on several recent occasions, had been endangered afresh, no justification was found for the sweeping criticism of the rival university.

"Criticism should have been confined to the actual play on the gridiron and to those responsible for it," was a view expressed by many.

UNDEFEATED TEAMS FACE TOUGH GAMES THIS WEEK

NEW YORK, Nov. 8—(AP)—The "big three" in the eastern championship race—Brown's "iron men," the Navy's rugged crew and Army's stalwart eleven—start drives this week that will make or break their gridiron title aspirations. The closing campaigns of this trio rival in interest, even thought they do not eclipse the struggles of the original "big three"—Harvard, Princeton and Yale.

All three of the championship contenders face stiff opposition in the run down the stretch. Brown, with triumps over Yale and Dartmouth already scored, tackles Harvard this week, then may ease up against New Hampshire before meeting the Colgate team that nearly upset the Navy's victorious march.

The midshipmen have a difficult barrier to hurdle next Saturday in Georgetown, which turned back Syracuse last week. This will be the last test for the sailors before going to Chicago for the big climax with the Army.

West Point has Notre Dame to worry about this Saturday, Knute Rockne's warriors have pointed for this game. The sting of a 27-0 defeat at the hands of the cadets last year at the Yankee stadium, scene of this week's conflict has spurred on the mid-western eleven and its full bag of tricks will be opened for the benefit of the soldiers.

Army has virtually intact the eleven that trampled Notre Dame last season but Rockne's men, with an added season of development and experience, are expected to furnish a much stronger and more resourceful opposition than they did a year ago.

Should both the Army and Navy hurdle this week's obstacles and go to Chicago for the annual battle unbeaten, claims to the championship of the east will depend on the result Born, alone, the critics concede, would be able to challenge the supremacy of either the cadets or middies. The bruins will have a strong voice in the argument if they beat Harvard and Colgate.

New York university, Lafayette and Boston College may enter the title dispute but none of these contenders plays as imposing or exacting a schedule as Brown or the service elevens. The Navy, for instance, in beating Purdue, Drake, Princeton, Colgate and Michigan, with Georgetown and the Army yet to come, will complete as difficult a slate as any eleven in the country.

Lafayette seems certain to keep its unbroken record intact with only Susquehanna and Lehigh to conquer. Victories over Pittsburgh and Washington and Jefferson comprise the chief items of the maroon record. N. Y. U. facing Davis-Elkins this week, looks for its biggest test against Nebraska on the following Saturday at Lincoln. Boston College is on the warpath this week with the Haskell Indians. If the hub team escapes a scalping it will have Holy Cross as the last obstacle.

Holy Cross also is undefeated to date but has been tied by Fordham, Maine is another unbeaten eleven but scarcely figures among the major title contenders.

NORTHWEST IS THREAT, OF BIG TEN CONFERENCE

CHICAGO, Nov. 7—(AP)—Northwestern is threatening to scramble the championship of the western conference, and is giving Michigan and Ohio State, the other two undefeated teams in the big ten something to worry about.

Northwestern has a chance to win the title, or at least tie for it, depending upon what Ohio State does to Michigan in their battle at Columbus next Saturday and what Illinois does to Ohio in the final game of the season two weeks hence.

Northwestern's lopsided win over Purdue and Michigan's comeback against Wisconsin were the outstanding results of Saturday's games, Northwestern showed plenty of power in defeating Purdue.

Michigan came back in surprising form against Wisconsin after their jolt from the Navy. The experts figured that the Wolverines needed some sort of a setback to make them play at the top of their form and the Badgers, rated as a very mediocre team, felt the brunt of their fury.

Chicago seems to have reached the limit of its improvement. All the progress has been made in the direction of defense, which the Gophers attack has excellent passing and speed as well as power. Iowa, with the possible exception of Nelson at tackle, Cowboy Nick Kutsch in the backfield, is rated as an ordinary team.

Ohio State was idle yesterday.

The standing of the Big Ten, with total points for all games including non-conference:

Michigan	5	0	0	147	16

BENNY FRIEDMAN WINS A LEGAL VICTORY

DETROIT, Nov. 8—(AP)—Benny Friedman, who captained the University of Michigan to a conference football conquest Saturday, won a personal tilt today with Benny Friedman, Inc.

With Robert M. Toms, prosecuting attorney acting as referee, an agreement was reached whereby Benny Friedman, Inc., will discontinue using the name of Benny Friedman in advertising the merits of its floral shop.

The latter business bureau was called upon after Benny Friedman of Ann Arbor had had heated words with Benny Friedman, 50-year old head of the florist shop. The party then moved over to the prosecuting attorney's office where Benny of the forward passes sought a warrant for Benny of the flowers.

Captain Benny pointed out that the flower shop until recently was the Garfield Arbor Florist shop. The football played claimed that the name was changed as soon as his gridiron play had made the name "Benny Friedman" widely known.

EXPELLED H. C. PLAYERS TO RETURN NEXT YEAR

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 8—(AP)—John (Blondy) Ryan of Lynn, Clary Ryan of Worcester and Henry Shanahan of Jamaica Plain, the three Holy Cross football players barred recently from participation in Holy Cross football games for the remainder of the season, who withdrew later from the college, will be permitted to re-enter next year, it was announced tonight by college authorities. It was said the boys were not expelled but were advised if they withdrew they would be allowed to return to Holy Cross. The action followed the failure of the three young men to attend a football class.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press.)

New York's first "sleepless week" for the six-day bike race fans starts December 4 at Madison Square Garden. Fifteen teams, it was announced today, will compete in the 41st national grind. One of them is likely to consist of Otto Petri of Germany and Dave Lands of Irvington, N. J., winners of the recent Chicago six-day race.

Old grads have scratched their heads to recall, without success, any season when Yale has failed to score a single point in three successive games prior to meeting its "big three" rivals. The Ells have been blanked by Brown, Army and Maryland in a row, the opposition rolling up 55 points.

Lee Murray, Australian lightweight champion, will make his bow at Madison Square Garden on Nov. 19 against Solly Seeman of New York. Murray is to appear in one of two ten round bouts supporting the junior lightweght title fight between Todd Morgan and Carl Duane. The other bout pits Frankie Finn of Texas against Eddie Anderson of Wyoming.

Dates and scenes of next year's title golf fixtures will be approved at a meeting of U. S. G. A. officials in New York on Nov. 18. The Oakmont club of Pittsburgh is slated to get the open championship, the Minikahda club of Minneapolis the amateur and Cherry Valley the women's event.

H. F. HOLLOWAY HELD FOR TRIAL BY NEW LONDON CITY COURT MONDAY

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8.—Harry F. Holloway was before the police court today charged with embezzlement of $3,682.14 from the H. L. Handy company, a corporation existing under the laws of the state of Massachusetts and doing business in this state, especially in the section about New London and Norwich. The embezzlement is alleged to have taken place during August, September and October a year ago, and was brought about by the collection of various sums of money from patrons of the Handy company which never got to the company. Holloway it is understood, denies that he failed to account for all the money paid to him and will set up as a defense the incompetency or carelessness of the company's system of bookkeeping and accounting. Seven times the prosecutor has tried to get the case before the court and have Holloway present to answer, but he had been unsuccessful till this forenoon. Holloway last week was alleged by Dr. Douglass to be in such a condition physically that his presence in court was out of all questions, and his attorney has represented that Holloway could not reasonably be expected to be present for trial. Today he was presented, but his attorney would not make any defense. He demurred to the complaint and probable cause was found for holding the accused for trial at the January term of the superior court. He is under a bond of $4,000, with his father as security, so he will be at liberty during the time intervening before the criminal term of court.

Witnesses have been summoned from the headquarters of the Handy company in Massachusetts, from Norwich, Noank, Mystic and Montville, so there will be a considerable amount of costs attending the trial.

YOUNG NIANTIC HUNTER ACCIDENTALLY KILLS CHUMB

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8.—While hunting in the woods of East Lyme Saturday afternoon, Lester W. Beckwith, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Beckwith, of Niantic, was shot and almost instantly killed by his companion and intimate acquaintance, Fred Odgers, 18, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick C. Odgers, also of Niantic. Coroner J. J. Desmond, Norwich, is conducting an inquest and pending his finding in the matter, Odgers has been paroled in the custody of Constable Charles R. Tubbs, of Niantic. Young Odgers has suffered greatly from the shock of the fatality, to such an extent that he is not considered responsible for his acts and he is being constantly watched for fear that he might do himself bodily harm.

The young men, who have been chums for a long time decided to go hunting about 4 o'clock and went to the Yale preserve where small game is plentiful. They were accompanied by Michael Perrino, also of Niantic. Arriving at the preserve the hunters had sought game but a short time when they became separated, but in sight of each other. In prowling about the wooded section, Odgers sighted a squirrel and raising his gun, took aim, and fired. Beckwith at the same time and not observing Odgers aiming, started to walk across a small stretch of the land and in doing so walked directly in range of Odgers' gun with the result that he received the contents of the shell in the back. Beckwith fell in his tracks and expired a few minutes later ,before any effort could be made to secure medical attendance for him. Odgers picked him up and carried the bleeding youth a distance of about three miles to the home of Constable Tubbs where he told the story of the fatality. Odgers was in a highly excited condition, so that it was considered inadvisable to allow him to remain unwatched. His clothing was besmeared with blood and he presented a sorry spectacle, as he delivered the body of his companion at the home of the officer.

Michael J. Doyle, 57, of 232 Jefferson avenue, died Sunday night at 9.30 o'clock at Norwich state hospital, where he had been a patient less than 72 hours. He is survived by a son, John Doyle, of this city; three brothers, Thomas and David Doyle, this city, and James Doyle, Portland, Ore., and by two sisters, Mrs. Daniel C. Young, of Norwich, and Mrs. Mary Redden, of this city. Mr. Doyle was admitted to the hospital Friday morning, but his condition was so weak that he did not respond to treatment. Mr. Doyle was well known in this city, having resided here his entire life. He was a contractor and for many years was a successful proprietor of a trucking business. His wife died about a year ago.

The automobile owned by John W. Bogue, of Niantic, which was stolen from Huntington street Saturday night while the owner attended a theatre, was recovered this morning by the New London police. A woman on Williams street, who refused to reveal her name, communicated with the police, stating that an automobile had been parked on Williams street, near the Connecticut College for Women, since Sunday. Patrolman Augustus Ray was sent to where the automobile was parked and identified it as the stolen auto. Bogue was notified of the recovery of his car and came to this city and took charge of it.

There were 19 cases before the police court this morning. All or nearly all were traceable to the use of liquor. Some of the cases were what formerly was called "plain" drunks, but other cases had frills on them in that bibulous defendants created more or less disturbance. Judge Crandall was on the bench and he handed them all opathic doses of penalty. One of the offenders comes from Montville, or at least claims to be employed there. He has been arrested a score of times in recent years. Jail does not appear to be an experience that he dreads for he has served terms there often. He is there now for a short stay.

Clothing dealers point out that one reason for the absence of buyers is the fact that so many automobiles are in use that the operators of them do not care for any but the commonest and the scantiest of clothes. They say that no one knows whether an autoist is well or poorly dressed and that worn garments serve all the purposes that fashionable clothing would serve.

Merchants declare that the change in the weather has quickened trade with them.

The police state that there are several men about the city who are regarded as soaks. They do not become so intoxicated that they are found drunk and so they escape arrest. The officers say that if these fellows were sent to some afornatory where they could be purged of the liquor that is in them and could be made to realize their situation as regards health and happiness such treatment would be for the benefit of the liquor users.

INGROWN NAIL

Turns Right Out Itself

A few drops of "Outgro" in the crevice of the ingrowing nail reduces inflammation and pain and so toughens the tender, sensitive skin underneath the toe nail, that it can not penetrate the flesh, and the nail turns naturally outward almost over night.

"Outgro" is a harmless antiseptic manufactured for chiropodists. However, anyone can buy from the drug store a tiny bottle containing directions.

GIRL WHO BOBBED HAIR ABLE TO GET HER JOB BACK

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8.—Miss Margaret McNamara, of Huntington street, stenographer in the employ of the Connecticut Power company, aroused the displeasure of Viggo E. Bird, manager of the company, when she bobbed her hair a month ago with the result that she was dismissed from the company's employ on the grounds that she had violated the edict of Manager Bird that girls who bobbed their hair would not be given employment there. She has now returned to her former position. Miss McNamara, it is stated, went to Hartford recently where she conferred with officials of the Stone & Webster company, owners of the Connecticut Power company, relative to the incident, after conferences with Manager Bird did not bring about her reinstatement. The conference with the Hartford officials caused an order to be issued that Miss McNamara be tendered her former employment and that she be given full compensation for the time that she was forced out of employment.

Andrew Fallon, a Montville laborer, became intoxicated Sunday night and wandered to Winthrop street. There he continued his wanderings and finally went to the highway where he was staggering about when an automobile driven by William J. Sparks, 36 South Ledyard street, came along. Sparks endeavored to guide the automobile clear of Fallon, but was unable to do so, Fallon being struck and knocked down, but he did not sustain injuries more serious than severe bruises of the right leg. The police were notified of the accident and Patrolman Frank Philopena, who was assigned to investigate it, arrested Fallon. This morning he was presented in the police court and was fined $5 and costs. He was unable to pay and was committed to jail.

BONDS, EDUCATION, COST CITY THE MOST, SAYS MANAGER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 8.—The city council held a very brief session this evening, the meeting consuming less than thirty minutes. Twenty one permits for building applications were asked for and all were granted About half of them were for the erection of garages, many for additions or alterations and four of them for the erection of houses. Pocetta Brothers were given a contract for alterations in fire headquarters, at a cost of $600.

A tentative budget submitted to the council awakened some discussion, during which Manager Holt said that the expense of bond payments and the cost of education consumed about 57 per cent of all the receipts of the city, while 43 per cent was devoted to all other expenses. He declared that the back taxes collected last year, that is the last fiscal year should have been partially applied to the sinking fund for taking up bonds whereas it was used for current expenses.

Complaint having been made as to the strength of the fire alarm, the city manager was asked at the last meeting to report and recommend a method of strengthening the alarm of tuning it up as the mayor expressed it. The manager reported that the fire marshal had under consideration a new type of alarm that could be operated by the air system, which could be adapted without expense to speak of. The report was received for record.

Applications for two signs, one at Broad and Williams street, and one at 105 Bank street, were referred to the city manager, with power to grant or deny the applications.

The Red Cross society asked for permission to stretch a banner across State street at Union street during the latter part of the month, but it was found that permission for that privilege had already been granted to another organization so an arrangement must be made so that the banner will not get smarled up at the given dates.

The council adjourned that it might meet with a committee of the board of school visitors to talk over appropriations for schools.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Benefit Masquerade

This evening one of the most unique of the fall social events in Taftville will be the benefit masquerade to be held at Parish hall for the benefit of Sacred Heart church. There will be plenty of fun and merriment at the affair. One of the odd features will be the parade of masked fun makers who will march to the hall from the Taftville postoffice. The parade will form at 7:30 o'clock and there will be a band to furnish the spirited music for marching.

Bred Theater

Don't condemn the modern flapper until you hear her side of the story! There have been scores of motion pictures assailing the morals and behavior of the daughters of the younger generation. Now Eleanor Meherin has risen to their defense in a story that after serial publication in over a hundred newspapers has now found its way to the screen as a Fox film.

The picture closes its eminently successful engagement at the Breed theater tomorrow. It was brought to the screen under the direction of Harry Beaumont with Madge Bellamy in the title role. Other favorites too are featured—among them being Harrison Ford, Bardson Bard, Gloria Hope, Leslie Fenton and David Torrence.

Lucrezia Bori

It is seldom that an individual is blessed by the Gods with beauty, figure and a glorious voice, but Lucrezia Bori, the Spanish prima donna who is one of the finest artists of our time has been most generously favored. Bori has been too little heard in concert during recent seasons chiefly because the Metropolitan Opera has claimed her entire time while in America, but in response to insistent and increasing demands she will devote the early part of this season to concerts, returning to the Metropolitan Opera house in January for the balance of the season.

Something of the singers great popularity may be learned from the fact that all the seats for her concert at Richmond, Vt., were sold out in three hours and at Lynchburg they were sold out in less than two days. Already there has been an unusually large number of inquiries for tickets to this single appearance at the New London state armory, Tuesday evening, Nov. 16. They will be placed on sale Wednesday at Starr Bros.

Palace Theater

All sons should take their mothers to see Private Izzy Murphy, the Warner picture, now at the Palace theater. In the first place, it is a mother and son story, a mirthful, heartening, tender story of war and love and human hearts. Irish and Jewish hearts, made one by things mightier than disputes and prejudices. George Jessell, who is starred, is personally the chief pal of his own mother, his father having died when the lad was but nine. Patsy Ruth Miller, who is the Irish sweetheart in the picture is noted in Hollywood for other than her screen success, especially for the fact that she and her mother are practically inseparable, even having identical hairbobs! Vera Gordon, who is one of the featured players, is perhaps the most celebrated of all portaryers of "mother parts." Private Izzy Murphy glorifies American motherhood.

Coming to the Palace Wednesday and Thursday, The Lady of the Harem, a succession of tremendous scenes. Mere words cannot convey the splendor of the Sultans palace. The slave market, the magic and mysterious harem, the warm love scenes, the flash and color and drama—and breathless suspense, and another splendid feature, in Sandow the worlds greatest dog, in Code of the Northwest. Don't fail to see this spectacular melodrama.

LEDYARD

Miss Marion Keeney teacher in district No. 4 Ledyard with her pupils gave a Hallowe'en party at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph A. Clark, Friday evening Oct. 29. The house had been decorated with colored streamers and emblems suggesting Hallowe'en. Many grotesque and hideous costumes were worn during the parade. Prizes were given for the best, funniest and most grotesque. Fortune telling and games were featured. Doughnuts sandwiches, cake, apples and sweet cider were the refreshments. Nearly every family in the neighborhood and some further away were represented. There were about 50 present.

The state election in Ledyard was very quiet this year. Not so many voted at the annual town meeting in October. There was a large republican majority, Samuel E. Holdridge was moderator in the first district. Mrs. Sarah Gallup, box tender, Enos M. Gray, Checker. Edwin Avery and James R. Gray were booth tenders. Mrs. Mary Belle Garrapye and Mrs. G. A. Montgomery, had charge of the tickets. Mrs. Leslie P. Gray and Miss Andrew Avery cast the first votes, George A Montgomery was the last one to vote, Carl Holdridge, Frederick W. Burton, Enos M. Gray and Mrs. F. W. Burton were the counters. Oysters, pie and coffee were provided by the sisters of the grange.

At a chicken pie supper in the vestry of the Congregational church Wednesday people were present from all the surrounding towns. This supper had been advertised in the Bulletin and it paid, as there was one of the largest crowds ever assembled at a church supper here. It was considered by all one of the best chicken pie suppers ever served in this vicinity. Dancing followed in Grange hall, the music being furnished by an orchestra from Jewett City. The receipts were about $230.

Acid Stomach

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia"

Better than Soda

Hereafter, instead of soda take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any drugstore. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co., and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1875.

TODAY'S EVENTS

A pageant of boyhood throughout the centuries from Roman times is to feature the annual lord mayor's procession in London today, when Sir Rowland Blades is to be installed as lord mayor of the British metropolis.

Notable speeches are expected at the lord mayor's banquet at the Guildhall in London tonight, when the dominion premiers attending the British Imperial conference will be present as the guests of honor.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

New Manager for Hudson-Essex Cars

Kenneth M. Webb of this city, who for the past three years has represented the Buick and Lincoln dealers in New London county has now taken over the management of the Norwich Motor Sales company, 394 North Main street. Representing Hudson and Essex cars. Mr. Webb will be pleased to see his friends and acquaintances.

Auto Selling Reaches New Stage

The high pressure salesman is passing from the automotive field, and with his passing the various tricks and schemes he used on prospects are being relegated to the land of the things that used to be.

That, at least, is the opinion of Sid Black, general sales manager of the Chandler-Cleveland Motors corporation, whose cars are handled locally by Dolco garage.

"It wasn't so very many years ago," said Mr. Black, "that the high pressure salesman and his obnoxious tactics were considered necessary to sell motor cars.

"For some reason, dealers seemed to think that locking a prospect in a 'closing' room with a high pressure artist handy to fling words at him until he signed the dotted line in despair, was the last word in salesmanship.

"Today things are different," continued Mr. Black. "The dealer has changed his viewpoint, he sees that new car sales are not the only factor in his business—he appreciates the importance of performance demonstrations and good service, in selling prospects and keeping owners happy about their cars.

Broadway Theater

What a glorious holiday week program opened at the Broadway theater yesterday. Every bit of the bill from the first flicker of the screen feature to the last number by the Keith-Albee vaudeville artists, was one long round of big time entertainment.

The stage offering started with Tommy Evans in Musical Versatility. He is a master of many instruments including violin, saxophone, banjo and French horn.

Raymond and Ann presented a remarkable ventriloquial offering called The Tourists. This lends them an idea for real good comedy and song to good results.

Then came the feature of the evening—The Homer Lind Revue. Mr. Lind, known on every concert, opera and vaudeville stage in the world this time has five young ladies with him in which is offered a medley of mirth, music, song and dance. For 30 minutes the audience was held spellbound.

Joseph Ward and Carl Taylor, the two American aristocrats have a comedy offering that is one continuous laugh.

In Wait and See, the closing act offered by Thelma Arline and company was a real surprise in store for all which was greatly enjoyed.

This picture is Flames, the Associated Exhibitors photoplay which ends in a whirlwind of thrills when two men battle in a burning cabin in the midst of a blazing forest fire.

Backus Hospital Bazar

The Grab Bag booth of the Hospital bazar will represent a little Turkish kiosk, gay with oriental rugs and hanging to create the proper colorful atmosphere.

This booth will cater principally to the children, for whom the novelty of paying their money and drawing out some surprise from a grab bag, never loses its pleasure. The grown-ups will not be entirely neglected in this respect, however, and there will be some "grabs" suitable for adult enjoyment in this game of chance. Many pretty trinkets have been purchased for this trade, which is sure to be flourishing, as a grab bag carries with it a lasting appeal of uncertainty and fun. Popcorn balls and Turkish sweets will also be on sale here.

Chances are now being taken on a very handsome Oriental rug, which will be displayed at this booth both evenings and afternoons of the bazar. This is a splendid opportunity to draw a most attractive rug for a small sum, and anyone of the committee may be approached for a chance.

An additional attraction consists of a really, truly fortune teller, who will predict the future for all who want to confide themselves to her psychic powers and card reading. Why not take a chance and see what is in store for you this winter?

Those in charge will be dressed in Turkish costume of loose red trousers, gay jackets and sashes, and gauzy head dresses. Red will be the predominating color throughout. In planning and working out the exotic eastern effect the committee has had the invaluable assistance of Mr. Louis Walden, who has designed and carried out the scheme of decorations. Miss Ruby Vaughn and Mrs. Louis Walden are joint chairmen of this booth of surprise and fun.

Are You "Toxic?"

WHEN one hasn't good elimination, and there is a poisoning of the blood from the waste products of metabolism, one is said to be "toxic." The kidneys are the blood filters. Functional inactivity of the kidneys permits a retention of waste poisons in the blood. Symptoms of this toxic condition are a tired, languid feeling, drowsy headaches and dizziness and, often, a dull, nagging backache. That the kidneys are not functioning as they should is sometimes shown by scanty or burning passages of secretions. Many readers have learned the value of drinking plenty of pure water in this condition and the occasional use of a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's Pills have been winning friends for forty years the country over. Doan's are a stimulant diuretic* acting on the kidneys only. Users everywhere endorse them. Ask your neighbor!

MARKET WAS STRONG

NEW YORK, Nov. 8.—(AP)—Renewed efforts of bear traders to bring about a general reaction in stock prices by attacking the motor shares again failed today when the market moved upward, after several intervals of heaviness, under the leadership of U. S. Steel common. Steel closed 3 3-8 points higher at 147 1-3 on buying influenced by predictions of an unusually favorable October tonnage statement on Wednesday.

Speculators for the advance laid considerable stress on President Coolidge's advocacy of a rebate on 1925 income taxes, pointing out that several large corporations would benefit materially by such action. Another interesting development of the day was the New York stock exchange's correction of brokers' loans figures for last month, making the decrease $107,760,085 instead of a drop of only $27,800,085. An increase of $38,183,000 in brokers' loans for the week ended last Wednesday was reported after the close by the New York Federal Reserve bank. Banks called baout $30,000,000 in loans during the day, and the call money rate held steady at 4 1-2 per cent, although loans in the "outside market" were reported as low as 4.

While several brokerage houses circulated reports that a $4 extra would be declared on General Motors' common at Thursday's meeting, large blocks of stock were pressed for sale throughout the session, the closing price of 148 representing a net loss of 1 1-4 points on the day, but 3 3-8 points above the day's low. Jordan broke below 14 to a new low level for the year.

Railroad equipment shares responded to reports of good October business, Baldwin closing 7 points higher at 126 7-8, after having touched 118. Pullman showing a net advance of 3 1-4 points at 179 3-4 and American Locomotive, General Railway Signal and Westinghouse Air Brake advancing a point or so. Coppers also gave a good demonstration of group strength, American Smelting climbing over 3 points while Kennecott, Utah, Ray and Green Cananea advanced to new high levels for the year.

Allied Chemical, Foundation Co., Alco Sheffield, U. S. Smelting, Virginia Iron, Coal & Coke and Woolworth also closed 3 to 6 points net higher.

Heavy buying of Rock Island, which touched a new high at 58 3-4 in anticipation of an early declaration of dividends, was one of the features of the railroad group. Atchison also received good buying support. The Van Sweringen issues were quiet.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Commodity prices were mixed. Wheat futures advanced 1 to 1 1-2 cents a bushel in reflection of stronger foreign markets for the commodity. Coffee prices sagged about 25 points and raw sugar was unchanged.

Foreign exchanges eased slightly in quiet trading. Demand sterling was quoted around $4.84 1-4 and French francs just below 3.90 cents. Italian lire held steady just below 4 1-4 cents, pending further study of plans for the proposed consolidation of the Italian floating debt.

SIGNALMAN STRUCK BY TRAIN NEAR NIANTIC

Earl Baldwin, 45, of Guilford, is in a critical condition at the hospital in New London suffering with a fracture of the skull, as the result of being struck by west-bound freight train BN1 near the Niantic station shortly after 10 o'clock Monday morning.

Baldwin, who is employed by the New Haven railroad as a signalman, was working with a gang near the Niantic station under Foreman R. W. Hubbard. It was reported that Baldwin was engaged in picking up wire alongside the track when the freight train approached. Another freight train was approaching the other direction in which Baldwin was facing and it is believed that he did not see the train behind him.

As the engine of the west-bound train drew abreast of Baldwin, it is believed, he became startled and in straightening up from a stooping position was sideswiped in the back of the head by the engine and hurled to the ground.

Other employes of the road went to his aid and Dr. Frank M. Dunn was summoned.

BAMFORD'S CONDITION IS CRITICAL

THREE BULLETS REMAIN IN HIS BACK

With three bullets lodged in his back, Thomas Bamford of Hanover, 53, shot by his wife Sunday evening, lies in a critical condition at the W. W. Backus hospital. Late Monday night inquiry at the hospital as to the man's condition brought the statement that it is critical. All three bullets fired at him by his wife entered his back, and up to Monday night they had not been removed.

Monday morning at 10 o'clock Bamford's wife, Mrs. Beatrice Bamford, 42, was presented before Justice of the Peace Adams at Baltic on a charge of assault with intent to kill Grand Juror A. Cote prosecuted. Mrs Bamford entered a plea of not guilty and waived examination. Justice Adams found probable cause and bound her over to the January term of the criminal superior court without bonds. She was taken to jail to await trial.

The motive for the woman's attempt to kill her husband is said to be jealousy over another woman, but the theory is advanced, in view of the fact that she had been a patient at the Norwich state hospital for the insane, that she shot her husband in a fit of insanity.

It is probable that the woman will soon be examined by a sanity commission appointed by a superior court judge to ascertain her mental condition. In the meantime she will be confined at the local jail.

Although Mrs. Bamford told Deputy Sheriff John J. McGuire that she intended to use two bullets remaining in the revolver to shoot a woman of whom she was jealous, this idea is scouted by residents of Hanover, it is understood. They profess no knowledge of any "other women" in the case and affirm their belief that this unknown personage is purely a figment of Mrs. Bamford's imagination.

PUBLIC HEALTH NURSING DEPARTMENT IS ACTIVE

The public health nursing department of the United Workers is indebted to the following people for donations given during the past few weeks: Miss Amy Cogswell, Mrs. Charles Henry Osgood, Mrs. Charles Jacobson, John Brunelle, Dr. Clarence G. Thompson, Mrs. James L. Case. The Sodalitas Lebanon gave ten quarts of milk which was most acceptable and James Reed gave the use of the garage room for the summer.

One hundred and fourteen new patients were admitted during the month of October and 95 cases were discharged. The nurses made 1175 calls.

Sixty-five children attended the Well Baby conferences, held monthly at Yantic, Occum and Taftville. At the Rock Nook Clinic held each Wednesday afternoon at No. 9, Washington street, 64 visits were made.

Some Tuberculosis "Don'ts."

Don't think that tuberculosis cannot be cured. It can.

Don't think that because an acquaintance has tuberculosis it is useless for him to try to get well. It isn't.

Don't think that a careful tuberculosis patient who is properly instructed is a source of danger to every one with whom he comes in contact. He is not.

Don't think that because the instructed, careful tuberculosis is safe, the careless patient is not to be feared. He is.

Don't think that a healed tuberculosis patient is not as much entitled to a job he can fill as someone who is never sick. He is.

Don't think you will not need to use a great deal of patience and forbearance in the handling of tuberculosis patients. You will.

Don't think that the tuberculosis patient is not appreciative of the assistance given him in his fight against his disease through public appropriations and contributions to the work. He is.

Don't think that a history of tuberculosis in your family means that you must ultimately be a victim. Keep in good physical condition.

Every Tuesday afternoon a chest clinic under state sanatorium supervision is held at the United Workers, No. 9, Washington street. At this clinic all cases which cannot afford a specialist's fee, are given free examination.

COMPENSATION FOR DEATH IN ELEVATOR ACCIDENT

The sum of $1,250 in settlement of all claims, has been awarded Mrs. Nora Conlon of Worcester, Mass., mother of the late Miss Mary Conlon, killed on June 16 in an elevator at the William W. Backus hospital, Norwich, where she was employed.

An informal conference was held by agreement of the parties at the office of the commissioner for the first district in Hartford, at which time Maurice L. Katz of Worcester, attorney for the claimant, contended that the injury sustained by the decedent arose in the course of her employment, and that the claimant was a partial dependent.

S. Polk Waskowitz, attorney for the respondent insurance contended at this conference that the decedent's injury and death did not arise out of and in the course of her employment and that the said injury was due to her serious and wilful misconduct, and that the use of the elevator on which she was killed was not risk incident to the employment of the decedent with the employers' respondent.

In view of the number of technical and legal questions involved in the various claims and in view of the doubt existing as to whether the injury arose out of and in the course of decedent's employment, a stipulation has been submitted under the date of Oct. 28, 1926, signed by, the claimant and her attorney, also by Mr. Waskowitz for the respondents, with the request that, a finding and award shall provide a lump sum of $1,250 in full and final settlement of all claims.

EVEN LAWYERS FORGET— JUDGE BROWN REMINDS THEM

What is a court to do when counsel argue on a motion of which there is no required paper on file? asked Saturday's Middleton Press, Judge Allyn L. Brown, of Norwich, of the superior court faced a dilemma of that character. In a conclusion sent in today the court points out the oversight and suggests a remedy.

Mame L. R. McGeorge of Summit, N. J., brought an action in the common counts against Alfred Flath of Moodus. To this complaint counsel for the defendant filed a plea in abatement. When the case came before Judge Brown, counsel for the plaintiff argued as though he had filed a demurrer to the plea, when nothing of the kind had been done. Plaintiff for the defendant did not seem to realize the situation and so both argued as though a paper was on record. Judge Brown called attention to the oversight and handed out a bit of advice as well.

ARMISTICE DAY SERMON BY UNIVERSALIST PASTOR

"The Militarist and the Pacifist on Armistice Day" was the theme of the sermon Sunday morning at the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) by the pastor, Rev. A. N. Foster. He spoke from the text Isaiah XXVI-12. Lord, Thou wilt ordain peace for us; for Thou has wrought all our works for us, and said in part as follows:

The terms "Militarist" and "Pacifist" are used to denote tendencies rather than to mark rigid and absolute definitions of social classes, for most of us commonly live between the two extremes. Among those who readily recall the momentous events of eight years ago, there is a line of division marking two groups of citizens of patriotic attachment. The one looks upon the Armistice as marking a military triumph to be joyfully commemorated as the success of vast armies and as assuring a rearrangement of the spoils of war before the several countries should again be summoned to war. The other group looks upon the Armistice as a halting of the armies for the sake of making the treaty of peace which should be enduring because cemented by allied and even world co-operation. This group gave approval to the war only after hesitation and on condition that it was a war to end war—a reversion to barbarism which should not be repeated.

The drastic terms of the treaty of peace and the persistent aloofness of America have made such a consummation most difficult. The danger is that Armistice day observance may be diverted to serve that military propaganda which ignores the lesson of the kaiser's policy of "preparedness". The danger is that we shall forget the command of the vision of the seer and idealist of a world organized for peace. Economics, commerce, education all show the advantages of peace over war; of concord over strife and suspicion. Religion and prophecy declare that no state—however large and resourceful—is sufficient unto itself for in both individual and national life, the soul finds salvation only as it seeks to save others. "Save thou a soul and it shall save thine own."

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Methodist Episcopal church the pastor, Rev. Albert E. Whitten spoke on Prohibition, in observance of World's Temperance Sunday, which was generally observed the previous Sunday.

Owing to a special request for Good Literature day, October 31st, Rev. Mr. Whitten was obliged to postpone his Temperance address a week. He spoke from Matthew 7-17, A Corrupt Tree Bringeth Forth Evil Fruit. Rev. Mr. Whitten emphasized the consequences that corrupt laws must inevitably produce, a corrupt social order and nation. He said: The wets are trying to gull us into the belief that an occasional bootlegger with a pint of whiskey in his hip pocket in the city of Chicago, is selling just as much as Chicago was in pre-prohibition days, with her 7,800 saloons open day and night as well as all day Sunday. The speaker quoted a poem by Edgar A. Guest, which he said he wished might be placed in the hands of every official in the country, entitled "Law and Leadership." Miss Florence M. Brown was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service in the evening. The topic was "How to make war against war," in observance of World Peace Sunday.

The entertainment given at the Norwich Town Methodist church, Friday evening was an hour of inspiration. Melville E. Osborne of Woonsocket, R. I., who provided the unique programme, captivated his audience as a soloist and public speaker. His vivid descriptions of Oriental life, punctuated with humor and pathos, made every one live for the hour in the heart of India, with its burning sun, its brown people, their woes, their joys and their heart-hunger for religion.

Mr. Osborne dressed in Oriental costume sang several songs in English and in Hindustani. His sons Wesley and Melville Osborne, Jr., assisted him, singing songs in Hindustani.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed at the First Congregational church Sunday morning, following the hour of worship. Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached a communion sermon, his text John 5-6: "When Jesus saw him lie and knew that he had now been a long time in that case, He saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?" Herbert L. Yerrington was the delegate chosen to attend with the pastor of this church, the general conference of Congregational churches of Connecticut, in session today (Tuesday) and Wednesday, at the United Congregational church, Norwich.

At the Norwich Town church, Sunday evening, Miss Margaret Chapin was leader of the Young People's Christian Endeavor service. The topic assigned was "How to make war against war?" Scripture references were in Matthew and Isaiah. This was a consecration meeting in observance of World Peace Sunday. At the Congregational mid-week prayer services, the minister will speak from the text, Phil. 2:4, with reference to 1-11.

Preceding his sermon at both masses at Sacred Heart church Sunday, the retiring pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan, in bidding farewell to his parishioners said: "This is my last Sunday among you and I wish to thank you for your kindness to me, also your co-operation, since my coming here, nearly fourteen years ago. During the time we have worked together there have been some losses, the most serious one in the burning of the church; but, thank God, the church has been rebuilt and paid for and for its size is one of the prettiest in the diocese. A new organ has lately been installed and is all paid for and the church financially is in good standing, with a surplus on hand."

In conclusion, Rev. Father Brennan expressed the hope that his good people would after this life, receive their reward among the Saints in Heaven.

Rev. Father Brennan's departure from Norwich is not only sincerely regretted by his parishioners but the spirit of good fellowship has extended far and wide among the townspeople in general, and his cheery greeting and agreeable personality will be missed by a large circle of friends outside his own parish.

Since being assigned by his Bishop to Norwich Town he has been known as a broad-minded, generous-hearted, cultured gentleman. It is expected that Rev. Father Brennan will report for duty at his new parish in Waterbury, the Blessed Sacrament church, on Thursday. His successor, Rev. Edward J. Quinn, is to assume charge of the local parish Sunday next.

At this church Monday morning at 7:30 an anniversary mass for the repose of the soul of James Keating, was celebrated by Rev. Father Brennan. The musical part of the mass was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. William A. Murphy. The choir sang and at the offertory, Miss Mary Buckley sang De Profundis. At the conclusion of the mass she sang Abide With Me. In the large attendance were relatives, family friends and neighbors.

Mrs. McCormick Reveals Secret of Good Health

Victim of Heart Trouble, Nervousness and Weak Stomach, Mother of 7 Children Finds Relief. Strength Restored. Praises Tanlac

"Words cannot express the agony I went through," says Mrs. John McCormick, a popular matron whose seven beautiful children are the pride of Taft Avenue, Portland, Me.

"My strength had vanished. I was afraid to go out on the street alone, my heart caused me so much trouble. It would skip a beat and palpitate. And my stomach was so upset that the sight of food nauseated me. And when I managed to force down a little food I would suffer for hours.

"My plight shattered my nerves. And many nights I would hear the clock strike every hour, counting the minutes that seemed like years, tossing and turning, waiting for dawn to come. Then I would be so weary and worn that I could hardly drag one foot after the other. Life and the care of my children was a burden. In vain I sought relief.

"Then a neighbor told me about Tanlac. And three bottles of this tonic relieved me of all my troubles. Quickly my old strength returned. I began to have an appetite for food. And now I can eat everything without a sign of indigestion. My heart never bothers me. And even the noise of seven children playing does not ruffle my nerves. Tanlac was a godsend."

Tanlac relieves pain that ravages health. It often conquers serious troubles and builds up strength in famished bodies. It is Nature's own remedy made from roots, barks and herbs.

Enjoy good health and strength. Begin taking Tanlac. The first bottle brings amazing results. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today. Over 40 million bottles sold.

TAX REFUND PROBLEM TO BE FOUGHT OUT IN CONGRESS

President Coolidge Merely to Make Suggestion For Non-Partisan Consideration—White House Spokesman Has Announced That the President Would Leave It Entirely Up to Congress If and How Tax Relief Should Be Given at That Time.

The official spokesman at the white house declared the president would leave it entirely up to congress if and how tax relief should be given at this time.

Moreover, he said, the executive had not finally endorsed the programme advanced by Secretary Mellon for a credit of about 12½ per cent. of next year's income tax payments, rather than an immediate refund. He will talk with members of the house, where the legislation must originate, before fixing upon a final plan.

There was no hint at the white house, however, that Mr. Coolidge would sanction any permanent revision of the tax rate at this time—a demand which has been made by some democratic leaders. Senator Smoot, chairman of the finance committee, which must consider any tax legislation that comes before the senate, meanwhile, has reiterated his view that the prospective $250,000 surplus for this fiscal year should be used for retirement of the public debt. If tax relief is to be given now, however, Senator Smoot said today that he considered the plan of Secretary Mellon practicable.

Whatever it does, Mr. Coolidge believes congress should avoid politics and consider the tax question from a non-partisan viewpoint. The programme followed by congress last session in working out the revenue bill stands out in his mind as an excellent example of what he desired in this respect.

PLEADINGS TODAY IN TEAPOT DOME INQUIRY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9. — (AP) — Pleadings on the first of the four indictments growing out of the senate's Teapot Dome investigation will be made tomorrow in the District of Columbia supreme court.

Albert B. Fall, interior secretary in the Harding administration and Edward L. Doheny, California oil man, will answer formally to an indictment charging conspiracy in connection with the Elk Hills, California, naval oil reserve lease, which Fall executed to Doheny in 1921.

They are expected to remain in court only a few minutes, as the trial of the case is not set down until Nov. 23.

Doheny and Fall will enter pleas of "not guilty" after they have been arraigned before Justice Hoehling. The reading of the voluminous indictment probably will be dispensed with by agreement between counsel.

Besides this indictment, there is another in which Fall and Doheny and the oil man's son, Edward L. Doheny, Jr., are charged with bribery in connection with the delivery of $100,000 by young Doheny to Fall about the time the contracts between the government and Doheny's companies were being negotiated.

In voluntarily disclosing this transaction to the senate committee, Doheny insisted it was merely a loan from one friend to another and that Fall had given his personal note as evidence of the debt.

RELIGIOUS MARRIAGE OF PRINCE AND PRINCESS TODAY

BRUSSELS, Nov. 9—(AP)—Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, united by a civil wedding in Stockholm last Thursday, tomorrow will be married by a Roman Catholic ceremony in the cathedral of St. Gudrule.

In the mediaeval setting of Brussels' most beautiful and historic palace, the Belgian capital officially received Princess Astrid today. While her reception on the second day of her presence in Belgium was of an official character, its warmth and spontaneity came from the heart of the people. The good people of Brussels are rejoicing in the welcome to the dream princess of the north," Burgomaster Max said in greeting the princess in the reception room of the city hall.

Fully 100,000 persons turned out to greet the "little lady of the snows" who looked radiantly happy in the sunshine which beamed upon her today in contrast with the dismal rain of yesterday. Leopold, in the uniform of a lieutenant of grenadiers, appeared to be striving to keep his happiness from a too exuberant display, but when 300 brass instruments, composed of various military bands began to play he stood at attention and his eyes were visibly moist.

ARGUMENTS ON APPEAL OF THE MOHICAN CO.

BRIDGEPORT, Nov. 9—(AP)—Arguments on the appeal of the Mohican company from a judgment rendered against them in the action brought by the Newfield Building company of this city, were heard this afternoon before the full bench of the supreme court of errors. Fifty eight questions of error were offered by the Mohican company, which was ordered on December 18, 1925 to pay to the Newfield Building company the sum of $42,500 and to surrender its lease to property situated at the corner of Golden, Hill and Main street.

Judge John R. Booth who returned the judgment against the Mohican company set $30,000 annually as a fair rental for the premises. The Mohican company had leased the store site on February 24, 1909, at a rental of $1,000 monthly. The lease was drawn to run until May 1, 1929.

The action was brought by the Newfield Building company on the allegations that the Mohican company had broken the lease when it sublet part of the site to the Carle J. Mintz and the Schulte cigar store. A surrender of the lease, a division of any profits made by the sub-leases and $25,000 were sought.

NEW HAVEN TO SEEK EXTRADITION OF CLARKE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Steps are being taken by local police to secure extradition papers for the return from New York city of R. H. C. Clarke, president of Clarke and Company, Inc., who was taken into custody by New York officers early today after he was alleged to have offered a worthless check at a hotel there.

No new developments have come to light in connection with the operations of the brokerage house, which is said to have milcted people in this city and vicinity of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Carl Clarke and Jackson H. Kernan, arrested when complaints reached the police of alleged fraudulent practices of the company, are free under bonds of $7,500 each for their appearance Thursday in city court.

HEROISM MAY RESULT IN PARDON OF LATTIMER

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 9.—(AP)—C. W. "Tex" Lattimer, former big league baseball player now serving a life sentence in the Ohio penitentiary for second degree murder, may have won himself a pardon by his heroism during the pitched battle that attended the escape and recapture of 13 convicts at the institution yesterday.

Lattimer, a trusty, was working in the penitentiary office when the riot alarm sounded. He seized a revolver and joined the guards.

Miss Amanda Thomas, daughter of Warden P. E. Thomas, heard in the residence quarters above, the sound of the shooting and started downstairs. Lattimer endeavored to persuade her to stay upstairs in safety. When she refused, he placed himself in front of her, it was said, to shield her from the convicts.

Lattimer was a catcher with the Baltimore American league team in 1901, and a member of the Brooklyn Nationals in 1902.

Governor Vic Donahey today promised to push the official investigation of the escape until he was fully satisfied as to the facts. He said Lattimer's case had been discussed "unofficially" but no action had been taken. "Something may be done later," he said.

IDENTIFIED WINTERS AS MAN WHO ATTACKED HER

WINDSOR, Vt., Nov. 9—(AP)—John Winters, one of two former convicts detained during investigation of the murders of Miss Cecelia Gullivan, treasurer of the Cone Automatic machine company, at her home here yesterday, was identified tonight by Miss Dessie Pandjarvis, a nurse, as the man who attacked her a few hours before Miss Gullivan was killed.

Winters will be arraigned tomorrow on an assault charge, while Sheriff Wallis L. Fairbanks and State's Attorney Robert R. Twitchell of Woodstock continue their investigation of the killing.

Discovery of several burrs on the spot where Miss Pandjarvis was attacked and on the sleeping porch of Miss Gullivan's home, where her body was discovered yesterday, are expected to link the two occurrences, but the authorities indicated that they would move cautiously in the hope of uncovering still stronger evidence.

An autopsy revealed that Miss Gullivan was clubbed to death Saturday night with some blunt instrument, and part of the investigation has centered on an attempt to discover the sort of weapon used.

Tonight the lord mayor's banquet was held in the ancient Guild hall with all the city fathers and time-honored customs. On this occasion the function had more of an empire character, inasmuch as the visiting Dominion premier were among the guests. RADIO, GIFT OF THE GODS, ABUSED IN SOME INSTANCES

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 9—(AP)—"Socrates" and "Demophone" decided in a discussion here tonight that radio is a great gift of the gods, but that man is abusing the gift in some instances. The discussion was held in the studio of Station WTIC. "Socrates" was Prof. Frank Cole Babbitt, head of the department of Greek at Trinity college. "Demophone," the "voice of the people," was Remsen B. Ogilby, president of Trinity.

"Plato would be intensely interested in the radio were he alive today," said Prof. Babbitt, "for he would see the vast possibilities in the increased range of human ears. One use he would see is the dissemination of political speeches during a campaign."

"That ought to put a heavy handicap," agreed Pres. Ogilby, "upon the demagogue who hitherto has held away in political gatherings by the persuasive force of his personality and eloquence. The radio is pitiless in the way it strips a speech of its external graces and makes it depend upon the ideas conveyed."

Another great achievement of the radio, Prof. Babbitt pointed out, is in conveying into the homes of America great music, interpreted in masterly.

At present, however, not all is on the credit side, in the opinion of the two Greeks. Great harm is being done, said Dr. Ogilby, by the broadcasting of play by play accounts of games on Saturday afternoons in autumn when men should be outdoors gaining physical and spiritual strength from nature and exercise.

"To say one thing seems to me more useless than sitting on an altogether inadequate plank to watch others exercise. It is to listen to the sounds of a game when the air is clear, the sky blue, and the distant hills beckon their admirers to see the pageantry of autumn foliage," concluded the "voice of the people."

SHOULD ADAPT INDUSTRY TO MODERN CONDITIONS

WORCESTER, Mass., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Abandonment of old traditions in industry was urged this morning by M. L. Wilson, vice president of the Blackman company of New York, speaking at the New England district, International Advertising association convention here when he said that tradition may become a fetish today when the whole tendency is toward changing and developing.

"New England always faced hard conditions courageously, holding on to reach her objective," he said, "but she must use modern tools and the strongest of these is advertising.

"She must go back to her basic principles in her large development. She must pioneer as her ancestors did and must use to her full extent those qualities that made her great. Pioneering skill that has characterized New England, combined with New England tenacity that has become a national tradition, plus its ingenuity, she can win out handsomely."

Mr. Wilson also cited the industrial building expansion in the New England states, stating that in the past year industrial building has increased 89 per cent compared to a three per cent average gain for the country.

He also pointed out that on the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad alone, four hundred miles of new sidetracks have been installed since 1920, which he termed evidence that New England isn't slipping.

MATTERS BEFORE BRITISH IMPERIAL CONFERENCE

LONDON, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Behind the closely guarded inner chambers of No. 10 Downing street, ministers of the crown, the dominion premiers and the representative of India are battling with problems that disturb in some measure King George's far-flung realm.

Before the conference closes a committee of the premiers will make an announcement on dominion relations to on another and to the mother country.

The committees are reaching the stage of passing resolutions.

The committee on nationality, which is considering the naturalization difficulties of British women married to aliens, today practically reached an agreement on its resolutions, but there is still a question as to whether these should contain some retroactive provision.

New Jersey is to Be Made a Separate District — Two Administrators Deposed.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—Two prohibition administrators were deposed today by Assistant Secretary Andrews, chief of the dry force, in a realignment of the prohibition forces along the Atlantic coast.

Ben Sharpe, administrator for North and South Carolina and Georgia, and R. A. Fulwiler, administrator for Virginia and West Virginia, lost their commands in the shake-up. This was disclosed in an announcement late today by General Andrews, who said merely that the changes were made for administrative reasons.

Sharpe will be offered the post of deputy administrator for a new district covering Virginia and North Carolina, if such an arrangement is satisfactory to the new administrator. Andrews declared, and Fulwiler will be offered an opportunity to become legal adviser in a district embracing Maryland and the District of Columbia.

The reorganization will become effective December 1. The new alignment of prohibition districts comprises the following changes.

New Jersey was separated from eastern Pennsylvania and made a separate district in charge of Ira L. Reeves as administrator.

The middle district of Pennsylvania was taken from the western district and added to the eastern district with headquarters at Philadelphia, under Thomas Cavanaugh, present administrator there. Delaware was separated from the Maryland district and also added to the Philadelphia headquarters.

West Virginia, which has been connected with Virginia, was added to the western district of Pennsylvania, with headquarters at Pittsburgh under J. D. Pennington, present administrator.

Virginia and North Carolina were made a new district with headquarters at Norfolk, Va., under R. G. Merrick, now an istant administrator at Chicago.

Maryland and the District of Columbia were made one district under H. H. White, former administrator for Texas and Oklahoma.

The seven judicial districts of Illinois which have been under the supervision of the St. Louis headquarters, were transferred to the Chicago office.

DELVING INTO POLITICAL CORRUPTION IN INDIANA

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 9—(AP)—L. G. Julian, of Evansville, Indiana, today began to unfold to the grand jury that is investigating allegations of political corruption, to indicate his knowledge of the affairs of D. C. Stephenson, the ex-Ku Klux Klan leader, who was reputed to have exercised great influence in republican party councils.

Julian, former busines partner of Stephenson, spent three hours and twenty minutes in the grand jury room and will be back tomorrow for further examination.

NORWALK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Raiding parties of state police, led by Sergeant Frank Virelli, of Bridgeport, and armed with bench warrants issued by the superior court on request of State's Attorney William E. Comley, arrested 15 persons in thirteen liquor raids in Norwalk this afternoon. The raids were made without the knowledge of the Norwalk police, and all of the prisoners were brought to Bridgeport, before being admitted to bail. In each case, evidence of liquor selling previously had been obtained, through the visits of investigators, and in all cases today, supplies of illicit liquor were seized, including whiskey, wine, gin and other liquids, which were loaded onto three trucks and taken to Bridgeport, where the material was locked in the county court house.

Among the persons arrested in the raids were six women. With the nine men, they were charged with keeping liquor with intent to sell, and with selling intoxicating liquor. With the exception of two men, all of the accused were released on bail of $1,000 each, bonds being posted with Assistant Clerk Henry P. Lyons, of the superior court.

EASTERN RAILROADS NOT ARGUING INABILITY TO PAY

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Eastern railroads are not arguing inability to pay in opposing demands of trainmen for a 20 per cent wage increase.

A statement to that effect was made today at the meeting of the board of arbitration investigating the demands of the trainmen by J. G. Walber, vice president of the New York Central railroad and chairman of the conference committee of eastern railroad managers.

"Do you claim for the eastern district railroads that they are unable to pay these increases?" W. N. Doak, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen asked Walber.

"We have not advanced any argument that the roads are unable to pay them," Walber replied.

Walber maintained that the earning power of employes and not the basic day rates should be considered the basis of a settlement of the wage dispute.

Errors in Phila. Election Returns

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Three precinct election officers were today held in $1,000 bail for the grand jury for "seroing" candidates other than the republicans in their returns of last week's election in this city.

When their divisions, the 2nd, of the 36th ward, was reached in the official count, Judge James G. Gordon, Jr., and Charles B. McMichael, presiding over the election court, could not understand the unanimity of the voters of the division when the returns showed 295 for each of the republican candidates from W. S. Vare for U. S. senator down to the lowest office, while the democratic candidates, headed by William B. Wilson, were not credited with a single vote.

Their suspicions being aroused, the court summoned the election officer, and made them recount the ballots. This showed that Wilson had received five democratic votes.

The judge and majority and minority inspectors, of the division, all Negroes, could not explain the discrepancy but insisted they tried to make an honest count. Judge Gordon sitting as a committing magistrate held the three men in $1,000 bail each on charges of conspiracy to make a false return and making a false return.

The canvass of the city vote, which is expected to be concluded tomorrow, has been carefully watched by the committee of 70, a body of independent citizens.

The unofficial figures of the election gathered last Tuesday night showed more than a score of divisions out of the 1500 in the city had returned scores for the democratic candidate for U. S. senator. In several instances election officers have come into court to correct their figures, declaring that mistakes had been unintentionally made.

So far the official canvass showed about 32 divisions where no Wilson votes were recorded and an equal number where only one vote was credited for him.

As the figures were not challenged by anyone there was nothing for the court to do but pass the divisions. In the one case where the court made a recount of the ballot box today the court became suspicious when identical figures were given for all republicans and scroes for the democrats.

No allegations of fraud in any division has been filed by anyone. But the commitee of 70 is making a complete investigation and if voters can be found who were not recorded in their election divisions, action is promised.

TECHNICAL TESTIMONY IN HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 9.—(AP)—Technical testimony on fingerprints developments and autopsies today claimed attention of the court trying the Hall-Mills case here. Scientific expressions and medical terms filled the day's record. Two of three witnesses heard had stage settings to make their explanations easier to follow. One fingerprint expert used numerous exhibits. The doctor had a wax figure for illustration.

Result of an autopsy performed last month on the bodies of Mrs. Elanor R. Mills and the Rev. Edward W. Hall, was told by Dr. Otto H. Schultze, assistant medical examiner of the district attorney's office of New York county. After testifying that any one of three bullets entering the head of Mrs. Mills would have caused death, Dr. Schultze said that the larynx, the tongue and the upper part of the windpipe had been cut from Mrs. Mills' body after death. One slash with a knife had cut the slain woman's throat.

The exhibit produced to illustrate his testimony was a wax representation of a human head, and an additional wax representation of the crosssection of the head and neck as far as the collarbone.

PARTIAL INSOMNIA AIDS EFFICIENCY OF BRAIN

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Loss of sleep promotes rather than decreases the efficiency of the brain, but takes it out on the body, it has been shown by recent experiments in the psychologist's laboratory.

Results of these experiments, started at Yale and carried on at Colgate university, are published in the current issue of Industrial Psychology, Colgate university department of psychology publication. The articles, by Donald A. Laird, head of the department, and William Wheeler, Jr., of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York, tells concisely "what it costs to lose sleep."

Three young men and 15 daily difficult multiplication problems were the primary materials of the experiment. Also included in the laboratory equipment were the alarm clocks waking the students after two hours less sleep than their habitual quota, a stop watch to time their multiplication exercises, a mathematical expert to check their results for errors, and an apparatus measuring their oxygen consumption.

It was found that while each young man did his sums from several seconds to more than a minute more quickly, and with no more mistakes on the shorter sleep ration, he used up from two to three times as much energy in the act.

FLASHING SIGNALS BETTER THAN CROSSING WATCHMAN

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 9—(AP)—Experience has proven that flashing signals afford better highway crossing protection than do crossing watchmen, was the contention of the New Haven railroad at a hearing today in Hamden before C. C. Elwell, public utilities commission. Several witnesses for the road testified to the efficiency of the flashlights.

The railroad wishes to substitute the signal for a watchman at the Allen street crossing in Highwood, and the town authorities oppose the change.

15 PERSONS WERE KILLED BY WINDSTORM AT LA PLATA, MD

Thirteen of the Dead Were School Children—Storm Shattered a Schoolhouse in Which 50 children Were Studying—Eleven Children Perished in the Ruins—Two Others Died While Being Rushed to Washington, 31 Miles Distant, For Treatment—At Least 20 Persons Were Injured—A Negro Man and Woman Were Killed in Their Dwelling—Town, With Population of 500, Was Dazed by the Disaster.

LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 9—(AP)—A twisting wind struck suddenly out of a sultry sky today and shattered a schoolhouse here in which about 50 children were studying.

Eleven perished in the ruins, and two others died while being rushed to Washington for treatment. At least 20 more were injured some seriously and a negro man and woman were killed in their dwelling, one of three caught in the narrow mile long path of the storm.

La Plata, which has a population of only 500, was dazed by the disaster. At 3 o'clock, only a little rain was falling and everything was calm. Two minutes later the wind, driving a torrent of rain before it descended upon the village. Dr. G. D. Heath, Maryland health department official, whose office was across the street from the school, saw it twisted into a mass of splinters. A moment later, John M. Burr, 11-year-old pupil, rushed, sobbing with terror and pain from his injuries, to the home, nearby, of the Rev. W. S. Heighan, Episcopal rector.

"Please tell everybody," he cried, "the whole school house has blown away."

The whole town soon was rushing up the little knoll on which the school house stood. Injured children lay in the wreckage, which was strewn over a wide circle. Other children were running about dazed, and crying for help. Some had been carried by the wind several hundred feet; others had fled, stumbling and weeping.

Although several houses had been smashed in the storm's path, its greatest force seemed to center in the one small spot on which stood the little school house. The wind and rain came out of the southwest and up the Potomac river, which flows not far away. Cutting a northeasterly path, it missed the greater part of the town.

Miss Ethel Graves, one of the two teachers of the school, called the children about her when the first inkling of the storm was given. As they gathered the building began to move and then the framework was sheared from the foundation as if cut by a scythe. The larger part of the building was carried about fifty feet away.

Within ten minutes after the storm, calls for aid had been sent to Indian Head and Dahlgren, Maryland, and Washington. Medical aid was despatched at once. The physicians and nurses first on the scene found only a measure of order restored, but most of the severely injured had already been started to Washington, and for others, the town's two hotels and newspaper office served as hospitals.

One of the few children within the school who was able tonight to give an account of the disaster was Muriel Hardesty, 13, one of the oldest in the classes. She suffered only a few bruises.

"The first time I knew what was happening," she said, "was when the windowpanes began to clatter. Then there was a thunder-clap and a roar. The stove began to wabble about the room and then the whole building went over. The next thing I knew, I was in the Bowling hotel."

Some described the storm as first hitting the house of Mr. and Mrs. James Padgett, demolishing it and injuring Mr. and Mrs. Padgett and their two children. Next in its path was the home of Mrs. Charles Jamieson. It, too, was wrecked, and she was injured. The school house was then in line, and from there the storm swept down in a ravine and smashed the home of Rufus Watts, negro. He was killed, and Elise Watts was injured.

Mrs. Helen Hughes, principal of the school, buried under a pile of wreckage, was protected by a twisted mass of framework and received only minor hurts.

It seemed impossible to those who viewed the ruins of the structure that any one within it could have survived. Little shoes, books, clothing and bodies were tossed about in mad confusion.

In one or two cases, the wind tore the clothing from children, tangled it in their desks, and hurled them several hundred feet away.

Many of the physicians and nurses who hurried here from nearby cities and military camps, remained tonight to care for the injured and the stricken parents, while others went back to Washington with the ambulance carvans. Funeral plans were put off until tomorrow.

COLD WAVE MOVING TOWARD ATLANTIC COAST

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—Winter strode across the corn belt today, turning rain to snow and leaving in its wake the coldest temperatures of the season as it advanced toward the Atlantic coast.

The storm was borne to the Great Lakes region from the Texas Panhandle end, from from here it turned eastward promising snow as far east as the seaboard within a couple of days.

The snowfall swept by a strong wind across Iowa, Illinois and Indiana today, ceased toward nightfall as the storm moved eastward. Cold weather ensued, lowering the mercury to 12 degrees in St. Paul and 16 in northern Iowa and bringing temperatures to the rest of the area.

The cold wave will move east, forecasters said, behind the snowfall, but a moderation may be expected in time for Saturday's football games.

In Chicago the snow fell so heavily that it failed to melt outside the business districts as it fell. Wisconsin has five inches of snow. One train from the west was 20 hours late, but most roads reported their trains on time or only a few minutes behind schedule.

PRESIDENT COOLIDGE IS EN ROUTE TO KANSAS CITY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—President Coolidge travelled tonight toward the middle west to deliver an Armistice day address at the dedication of the Liberty Memorial at Kansas City, Mo., where, five years ago, as vice-president, he spoke at the cornerstone exercises.

In addition to Mrs. Coolidge, the president also had in his private car Secretary Dwight Davis of the war department, who is a resident of Missouri and will speak at the ceremonies, Everett Sanders, secretary to the president, and military and naval aides.

The president is due to arrive in Kansas City Tuesday morning and remain there seven hours. He will speak at the exercises at 11 a. m. and then attend a public luncheon at a hotel.

It is the first time Mr. Coolidge has been into the middle west since he addressed the American Farm Bureau federation in Chicago last December.

Citizens from all parts of the southwest will attend the dedication exercises. Governors of several states and national, state and local officials will take part. No formal stops have been arranged en route for the special train, but there will be opportunity for Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge to greet citizens from the observation platformat various points.

COUNTESS KAROLYI HAS ARRIVED AT MONTREAL

MONTREAL, Que., Nov. 99—(AP)—Countess Karolyi, wife of Count Michael Karolyi, who has been barred from the United States by the American department of state, arrived from overseas here today and registered at a local hotel as plain "Mrs. Karolyi". She said that her visit was purely personal, and indicated that the Karolyi family might settle in Canada.

The countess said that it was not her intention to attempt to enter the United States. Beyond stating that she intends to visit western Canada, the countess revealed nothing of her future plans.

(Countess Karolyi's 1925 visit to the United States was early in the year. When she again sought to enter America in October of the same year in order to complete a lecture tour, the state department denied her permission to enter.)

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE AT GRADE CROSSING

EAST HAMPTON, Nov. 9—(AP)—A few bruises and a broken arm were the extent of the injuries received by George F. Hubbard of Bloomfield when his sedan, stopped on the tracks was demolished by a passenger train on Chamberlain's crossing in Westchester. Hubbard was taken to a hospital in Hartford.

ARRESTS BEING MADE FOR TREASURY BALANCE LOTTERY

BRIDGEPORT Nov. 9—(AP)—Further arrests are hinted by Assistant State's Attorney E. Earle Garlick in the investigation now under way by the state's attorney's office of the activity in this city and vicinity of treasury balance lottery ticket sellers. The investigation followed the arrest Tuesday night of James C. Welch, of New Britain, who it is claimed, was the operator of a huge gambling system which has flooded this section of the state with the tickets.

He was arrested in New Britain last night by State Police Sergeant Frank Virelli. He was brought to this city and was released when a $5,000 real estate bond was posted with Assistant Superior Court Clerk Henry P. Lyons, of 585 Park avenue at the latter's home. The names of the bondsmen were given as John C. O'Brien and John J. Walsh, also of New Britain.

According to Attorney Garlick, Welch's "ring" of lottery sellers is only on a par with that of a number of others who are flooding the east with many thousands of the "chance" weekly. It is only necessary for a man to secure sumficient backing and a supply of a ready sale of tickets, to embark upon the field. It is necessary, however, to hire "agents" in several of the larger cities of the state to make the individual sale of the tickets.

It is through this agent that the winner or holder of the lucky number of series of numbers is paid. There is an exception however, in the case of a bigger winner. He is paid directly by the chief or originator of the ring.

The farm is one of 142 acres, mostly mowing land. There are two years' tax liens on the property. Judge Baldwin allowed for the plaintiff to recover the amount of the mortgage, $1,000 with interest and tax liens totaling $1,241.94. The period of limitation for redemption was set as April 1.

The next case taken up was that of Shaheen Haddad vs. M. G. Wright and Joseph Peck. The case involves the attachment by Constable Peck of fixtures in a store conducted by Joseph K. Haddad on Union street, this city, several months ago. Shaheen Haddad claimed ownership of a show case attached in the place and it was returned. The defendants were given judgment to recover damages of $8 with costs.

AFTER EVERY MEAL

A Baby in the Home

The smallest member of the family requires a great deal of attention. Sometimes, in caring for her child, a mother overtaxes her own strength. Particularly when there are other children to work for, she must learn to preserve her health.

Then her home becomes a place of order and happiness. She finds time to play with her children and the whole family enjoys the dimpled baby as he grows from day to day.

Many young mothers have learned that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helps them to find the strength they need.

Before her marriage, Mrs. R. N. Frankum of 3947 Gold St., Omaha, Nebr., was a working girl. Like many girls, she sometimes had to stay at home from her work. A friend told her of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she found that it relieved her trouble.

She was in good health until her second baby came. "I began to take the Vegetable Compound again," she writes, "and was soon able to do my housework. Now I can say I never felt better in my life. Women ask me what I have been doing and I tell them about your medicine. I feel that I owe a lot to it."

DANIELSON TO HAVE HALF HOLIDAY ON ARMISTICE DAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 9—There was definite assurance early Tuesday afternoon that Armistice day will be a half-holiday in Danielson, insofar as the activities of business concerns is involved. Bernard Casey, member of the American Legion, crystallized sentiment as to closing during Tuesday by going about with a form for signatures agreeing to such an arrangement. At the noon hour Mr. Casey had a long list of signatures and was yet to experience one refusal to close at noon on Thursday. It would appear that everyone was willing to declare the half-holiday and that the only need was someone to go around and get a fixed agreement. Everyone was waiting to see what the other fellow would do, a natural attitude if one cares at all about his business interests. Now the half-holiday is assured for those engaged in Danielson's trading centers. It means the release of a great many who have been anxious for time off to get down to Norwich to view the parade on the holiday. The mills, it appeared Tuesday, will adhere to their previously announced program for operation during all of the regular working hours of Armistice day, though ex-service men who request the privilege will be let off for the day.

By this time a letter should have arrived at Hagerstown, Md., telling a resident of Liberty street in that city that a toy balloon let loose from there on October 13, was picked up by Norman Reeves of Reynolds street in a field near the Brooklyn fairgrounds. A tag attached to the little balloon requested that the finder of it notify the Hagerstown address from which it presumably was sent up. In view of the fact that the attached card did not designate what state Hagerstown is located in, it is a reasonable assumption that the persons who turned the balloon loose felt almost certain that it would come down with a few miles from its point of release and not travel northward several hundred miles into southern New England before coming to earth.

After an illness of a month the death of Andrew Higgins, 56, occurred during Monday night at the home of his sister, Mrs. Catherine Norton in Elmville. Mr. Higgins, a widower, was a native of Roscommon, Ireland. He came to this country as a young man and had since remained here, living for many years at Harrisville, R. I. He had been making his home in Elmville for a considerable number of years. In addition to Mrs. Norton, Mr. Higgins leaves another sister, Mrs. Mary Ray of Pascoag. There are six nephews, Joseph Norton, James Ray, Thomas Ray, T. F. Quinn, all of this town; Andrew Ray of Pascoag and Thomas Quinn of Woonsocket. Mrs. Katherine Quinn of Lynn is a niece.

For the great many who are interested in the complex life of this complex nation of peoples from about every nook and corner of the globe, the Americanization institute to be held in the town hall three days the coming week will offer much well worth while seeing and hearing, or both. On Tuesday evening Robert C. Deming of Hartford will lecture on the subject Immigration and Our Responsibility. Prof. David G. Vaughan of Boston university will be heard Wednesday afternoon on the subject American Ideals. Arthur W. Logee has a clipping from a Miami paper sent to him by his sister broadcasting under an Oneco date line that the Connecticut Mills of this town is to operate a plant at Albany-Decatur, Ala. "and that 700 hands will be thrown out of work in Danielson." Now there's some "news" for this community.

The raids by motorists in this territory on forest growths is getting into full swing early this year. Many Rhode Island machines have been noted with nifty little pine trees, pulled up roots and all, on their running boards. Taking of these trees constitutes a vandalism that is forbidden by law, but there are hundreds who appear to care very little about that. They take what they can get away with—and the chances attendant upon such a venture.

Because of the wet and slippery going there were a few minor automobile accidents hereabouts on Tuesday, these largely due to skidding.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

At the meeting of the town school committee held at the library Monday evening, it was voted to change the date of the trip of the high school seniors to Washington. It has been customary for a number of years for the senior class to take a five or six days' trip to the national capital during the spring vacation which begins the last Friday in March. The trip will be set back two or three weeks and instead of going in March the class of 1927 will go during the latter part of April or early in May, the dates to be decided upon by the high school principal and the superintendent of school. It is thought that the weather will be much pleasanter later in the spring. The weather last year was cold and stormy and a number of the students came home with colds.

FIGHTING WASTE

That was a big field of operation on which Secretary Hoover set out five years ago when he began the fight for the reduction of waste. Waste has become such a habit with many that they are unable to think in any other direction. It has prevailed in so many ways and for so long that it is difficult to bring about a change, despite the glaring need for it.

Nevertheless Secretary Hoover put his shoulder to the wheel, set forth the conditions prevailing and the need of correcting them and has good reason for being proud of the result even though it has been an uphill task. While good results have been obtained none knows better than the secretary of the chance for still greater improvement.

When the secretary points to the results of the efforts to make life better worth living, to greater efficiency in rail transportation, to increased use of water power for the generation of electricity, the reduction of losses through waste in industry it is a record which means much to the people of this country for they are getting the benefits of these changes.

The secret of this success would seem to lie in the fact that where the department of commerce has been able to direct attention, either directly or indirectly, to conditions which are wasteful and should be improved, to conditions where there should be greater efficiency displayed, to wasteful practices which ought not to be continued but corrected there has been a disposition to respond to the suggestions. Through various agencies that cooperation which gets results has been furnished and the result is the greater good for the greater number. With improvements all along the line the work of the department has not been devoted in an unappreciated cause. With the department taking the lead and showing the way the response has been general, and as the good work is continued it should produce even greater and more satisfactory results. Getting the tide of thought turned in the right direction has been one of the great tasks. Secretary Hoover has certainly fought a great fight and is entitled to full credit.

CHRISTMAS DAY DELIVERY

One test of the idea of having no mail delivery on Christmas day has been enough. The lack of that service did not please the people of the country. They wanted their Christmas cards and presents on Christmas, not the first or second day after, and in spite of the urgings to mail such matter sufficiently early that it might be distributed the day before Christmas such failed of accomplishment. The result was far from pleasing and the cause for widespread complaint. In fact it is a question whether the postal employes were satisfied with the arrangement, for it simply piled up the work that might have been distributed over one more day and shut off many of those Christmas presents which are handed out to the postman and others on Christmas morning.

Had such a plan been continued this year it would have meant probably one delivery on Friday and then not another mail until Monday morning, with everyone clamoring for better service. The order of the postmaster general will serve to prevent this situation and mail that is ready for delivery Christmas morning can be expected to be in the hands of the one for whom it is intended on that day, provided he doesn't live on a rural route.

But this doesn't mean that there can be any greater laxity in the matter of mailing Christmas packages early. With greater demands every year upon the postal service this becomes more and more important. The Christmas mail that gets to its destination a day or two in advance isn't going to be held over into another week. No harm is done by early delivery and much uncertainty and confusion are eliminated when the mailer lends that much assistance to the postal service. It is one way in which everyone has a chance to insure against disappointments on Christmas day. It is quite as necessary with a Christmas day delivery as it is when there is none. Early Christmas mailing should certainly go with early Christmas shopping.

WREAKING VENGEANCE

There are those who continue to applaud what was done in New York state by the defeat of Senator Wadsworth. Among such are the prohibitionists who seem to get a lot of satisfaction out of the fact that the republican dry candidate for the United States senate put forward by them succeeded in getting enough votes to elect the democratic candidate and defeat Senator Wadsworth, but there appears to be no attention, or very little, given to the fact that while the senator was defeated because he was wet, and acknowledged the fact, his successor is equally wet. The elation of the drys thus seems to be over the preference as to which wet senator should sit in Washington.

What the prohibitionists did in New York state is not so different from what Governor Pinchot did in the state of Pennsylvania in his run for the nomination for a seat in the United States senate. It is no secret that he thought he had the job cinched, but only because he refused to read conditions as they were. And yet he was so determined that he would rehave known that he could not succeed, that he gave the best possible assistance to the very opponent he disliked the most. Senator-elect Vare of Pennsylvania can attribute a far greater measure of his success for the nomination and therefore the election to the campaign made by Governor Pinchot than to any other reason. It was his persistency in the face of positive warning to the contrary that made Vare's minority choice possible. He accomplished the elimination of Senator Pepper, a moderate as to prohibition, and played into the hands of a sopping wet candidate.

Just where there can be any great amount of satisfaction gained from such tactics, when it means the loss of the better man in both instances in the national legislature, is difficult to understand. It is a case of course of sowing a little spite and reaping a boomerang, and then trying to claim that something has been gained by it. Cutting off one's nose to spite his face is strange and painful beauty practice.

STATE PARK AT GARDNER'S POINT

A proposition in which there cannot fail to be much interest in this part of the state is that which concerns the taking over of Gardner's point in the town of Groton as a state park with a view to opening it up and developing for the public in the same manner as Hammonasset state park in Madison has been made to meet the public demands.

Gardner's point is that attractive piece of land which projects into Fisher's island sound west of Groton Long point and is particularly advantageous for such development as is proposed. It is an entailed piece of property, which cannot be bought but would have to be condemned, but it is an ideal location and just such an outlet as the public has long sought in this part of the state.

At many of the beaches there is no chance for the general public. From Watch Hill to Hammonasset beach there are certain points where the public can spend a day at the seashore, but the restrictions are steadily increasing. It is preferred that the general public go elsewhere at a number of them, and while they may not say so in so many words the restricted accommodations make it necessary.

The state park commission has done a fine thing for the people of the state in taking over Hammonasset beach and maintaining it as a public resort. The crowds to be found there indicate it and there are reasons for believing that there is opportunity for similar effort at Gardner's point.

Through the combined efforts of the chambers of commerce of this part of the state and the sympathetic support of the state park commission the merits of this proposition should be most favorably presented before the next session of the legislature. There is no thought of having the state go into a land promotion scheme but to provide and maintain a shore resort that will be for the use and benefit of the public for all time under state supervision.

Could resort developers have obtained it, it would have been in the hands of promoters long ago. The man for whom it is named prevented that but it is possible for the state to open up its attractions to the general public.

JAMES K. HACKETT

Among the American actors who have come into much prominence was James K. Hackett, whose death occurred in Paris. Hackett had ambitions in other directions in his early years. While he was fitting himself for the law he suddenly turned to the stage. What the bar lost as a great and dramatic pleader will never be known. What the stage gained is no secret.

He had a wonderful stage presence, made deep impressions in his roles as the hero especially in the characters set forth by Anthony Hope in The Prisoner of Zenda and Rupert of Hentzau. He demonstrated the fact that he possessed great talent and during the days when the drama commanded greater attention than it does now he was one of the leading American actors.

For a dozen years he has added to his fame in the roles of Macbeth and Othello so much so that probably his change from the law to the stage brought him into much greater prominence than would otherwise have been the case. By his death the stage loses one of the great romanc actors. He was in fact deeply and successfully interested for many years in all departments of the theatrical business.

EDITORIAL NOTES

There are apparently some thoughts which it is not wise to think out loud in Italy.

The man on the corner says: If we haven't had our Indian summer, it was a close rival.

Is the weatherman getting ready for a fair Armistice day when Norwich will entertain many thousand visitors?

If an apple a day will keep the doctor away perhaps two apples a day would keep the doctor and the nurse away.

With marines in China, Nacaragua and many American cities they are being depended upon more and more every day.

Isn't it about time for the governor of New York to announce that he is through with politics just as soon as his new term is complete? Meaning, of course, nothing of the kind.

Thus far the weatherman has kept the woodlands well dampened as a protection against those who carelessly drop matches and other firebrands. But that doesn't justify carelessness.

If North America is sinking probably it is only an adjustment that nature is making to meet the situation which is being caused by Chicago in throwing the water of the Great Lakes.

ON THE ELEVATED

His appointment was for 10 o'clock and he sat in the street car reading the advertisements.

He went over for the how manyeth times the tomatoes that never grew on land or sea, yet were claimed to reside in a glorified soup; the fairy-handed damsels who handled pots and pans on gas ranges warranted neither to burn, blister, nor stain their users; the ointments that made stewed witches beautiful and kept beauty eternally young—you know. And then his eye fell from the row of cards and rested on the woman across the aisle.

She wasn't exactly pretty. No she was handsome, rather. And yet she wasn't entirely handsome, either. It was just a look she had, a shine in her eyes, a tilt to her head.

But he couldn't resist the desire to look at her again, and again she caught him at it, and looked away. It went on for several stations.

All of a sudden she looked at him. Without a smile. But without a frown. Just looked at him quite steadily and serenely.

She made the faintest most indefinite motion sideways with her head.

He never even glanced toward her until they were approaching the next station. Then, "At this one?" asked his eyes.

"At the last one," said, then, her eyes.

The last station was quite a long way ahead, but he never once glanced toward her again, nor she toward him. She descended fro mthe car. He too.

"May I speak to you?" he asked her.

"I don't in the least see why I should allow it," said she.

Then she laughed, at least she gave a small, gurgling chuckle.

"Why do you laugh?"

"Oh, I can't help it, it is too amusing . . ."

"What is too amusing?"

"Well, one always thinks, no man will ever look at one again, and then when one does . . . it's funny, but its nice . . ."

"Doesn't every man you ever meet look at you?"

"Oh, no! Dozens don't. Hundreds don't."

"Look here," he said, "I am a perfectly respectable man . . ."

"I hope that is true. It isn't exactly original."

"But I can prove it to you."

"How?"

"Well, I can give you references . . . show you . . ."

"How would you go about it? I am interested to know."

YOUR HEALTH

THE HEALTH VALUE OF A HOBBY

Harold Duncan Cochrane, M. D. Albany, N. Y.
Member Corgas Memorial Institute

Everyone has an account in the Bank of Health.

Before annual vacations the balance is pretty low. In fact, some of us, to our sorrow, have been known to overdraw. During holidays we make substantial deposits to our credit. The autumn finds most of us back on the job and the problem that confronts us is, how are we to conserve our health resources and, if possible, add to our reserve energy and well-being during the exacting months that lie ahead?

Right Living and Right Thinking are twin sisters who are ever on duty in the Temple of Hygeia. If we would but listen to their suggestions and act on their advice, the problem would be half solved.

Right Living bids us eat in moderation, dress appropriately, see to it that our homes are properly heated and ventilated, and that we get a reasonable amount of exercise and sleep, maxims familiar to all and large in reward for those who follow them.

Yet it is the message of the other sister, Right Thinking, that needs to be stressed at this time. A great deal of happiness and health depends on how we spend our hours of recreation. With the advent of the long winter evenings a real problem presents itself.

All should have a hobby to bring mental refreshment through the change of activity. A complete list of such possible avocations would fill a good sized book. They naturally divide themselves into three groups—handwork, headwork, and a combination of the two.

Here are a few examples of each. A carpenter's bench in the attic or cellar, a few inexpensive tools, and a small investment in some lumber, furnish the background for those who enjoy making household furniture from raw material. You know of many women who spend their leisure moments profitably plying the embroidery needle and thereby find a source of relaxation from the routine of the busy world.

Under the second group of hobbies, involving headwork, come such mental activities as chess and whist, study of a foreign language, imaginary journeys and nature study. In any of which our pursuit may be pleasantly and profitably guided by attractive textbooks and study courses.

The third division, combining both physical and mental activities in a broad sense, include such varied pastimes as music, amateur photography, and collections of many kinds, ranging from insects to rare books with autographs, postage stamps and old coins as favorite examples.

Of course the foregoing are only suggestions in a broad and varied field.

While we ride our hobbies to our hearts' content, never let them ride us. If they can be turned into a remunerative channel, so much the better. The dividends, paid into the Bank of Health will reward richly for adventures in the Land of Recreation.

Stories That Recall Others

Her Husband Helped Her.

The colored bride went to call on the woman she had formerly worked for, and was telling Mrs. Jones how well she was fixed in her new home.

Mrs. Jones said: "Well, Martha, you have always worked hard, and I hope your husband will be a help to you in making the living."

Martha replied: "Indeed he is a help to me. He has got me two more washings to do already."

The Bright Side.

The seventh girl baby had recently arrived in the family, much to the disappointment of the parents, who were anxious for a son.

One day the parents were lamenting the fact that the new baby was not a boy. The little six year old daughter, who was present and heard the conversation, said: "Now, momma, I would not worry as the baby may turn out to be a boy yet."

Make the Most of Books

By James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D

Can Choose Books If Not Companions

We form our characters from the men and books that we associate with. We cannot always choose our companions but we can choose our books, and it is our own fault if they are mean books. A man may be known better by the books he reads than by the company he keeps, we should be quite as likely to find a judge making a companion of a pickpocket or gambler as to find a lowminded man reading an essay by Lowell or Emerson. Tell me what you read and I will tell you what you are. It is what we take an interest in that stamps us.

Matthew Arnold gives a concise definition of culture when he says that it is "to know the best that has been thought and said in the world," and he makes this idea clearer by saying "culture is reading, but reading with a purpose to guide it and with system." He elsewhere states, "Culture is a study of the perfection which consists in becoming something rather than in having something, in an inward condition of the mind and spirit, not in an outward set of circumstances." Self-activity is called by Sir William Hamilton the primary principle of education. By lovingly reading the best books we may go on, year after year, giving ourselves a fuller education than can be gained in any university, because it is life long;—eternity long. Such an education requires time rather than money and any one who has the determination to improve himself, may like Sir William Jones "with the fortune of a peasant give himself the education of a prince."

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Peter Does Happy Jack a Good Turn

Who does a good turn every day
Will never lack friends along the way.
—Mother West Wind.

Peter Rabbit is just like a great many people; he is happy-go-lucky, never worries about anything, and in many ways is heedless and thoughtless. But he is always ready to do a good turn for others when he can or when he thinks of it. So Peter has many friends.

While all the Squirrel cousins were busy hunting for food to fill their storehouses, while Jerry Muskrat was mending the roof of his house to make it ready for winter, while Paddy the Beaver was cutting food logs that he and his family might not go hungry when the ice should come, while Johnny Chuck was stuffing himself to make sure that he had a thick coat of fat underneath his fur coat before going to sleep for the winter, Peter Rabbit was wandering about trying to find someone to play with.

There was frost in the air, just enough to make Peter feel good. It was splendid weather to go frisking about. So it was that Peter did a lot of roaming. He spent most of his time over in the Green Forest, and there one day he discovered in a place he had seldom visited a hickory tree that seemed to have been overlooked. Anyway there were a lot of fine hickory nuts on the ground, and, although Peter hunk around for some time, he could not see one of the Squirrel family.

"This is funny," thought Peter, "I wonder how it happens that no one seems to know about these hickory nuts. I'll go and look up Happy Jack. He ought to know about these. They are no good to me, but they certainly ought to make Happy Jack feel good."

So Peter went to look for Happy Jack. It didn't take him a great while to find Happy Jack. Just as usual, those Squirrel cousins were quarreling and their unpleasant voices rang through the Green Forest. Peter began to understand why it was that that long hickory tree had not been found. They were so busy trying to keep each other from getting what they have found, they haven't the time to look anywhere else," thought Peter. And this was exactly the case.

Peter found a comfortable place to sit and watch. He could afford to be patient. He knew that sooner or later Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel would come his way. Finally Happy Jack did. In fact, he buried a nut under the leaves just back of Peter.

"Don't you tell!" said he to Peter

"Don't you tell!" said he to Peter. "Don't you tell!" said he to Peter.

"I won't," replied Peter. "I won't tell anybody. But don't you think it is foolish to try to hide a nut so close to the tree?"

"I haven't time to carry it away any further," replied Happy Jack. "I've hidden a lot around here under the leaves. By and by when there is no one to see me, I will dig them up and carry them away." He rushed off. Hardly was he out of sight when Rusty the Fox Squirrel came running up and dug up that nut that Happy Jack had hidden. He carried it a little way off and in his turn hid it. Then he, too, hurried away. Hardly was he out of sight when Chatterer the Red Squirrel came along, and in his turn hid it. Then he, too, hurried away. Hardly was he out of sight when Chatterer the Red Squirrel came along, and his sharp nose soon found that very nut. He, too, carried it off a short distance and hid it. Peter almost laughed aloud. He watched this foolish game for some time. At last Happy Jack once more came near enough for Peter to speak to him. "I know where there are many hickory nuts and no one has found them," said Peter.

"Where?" cried Happy Jack excitedly.

"When no one is looking, slip away and follow my tail," replied Peter. This Happy Jack did.

CHILD TRAINING

ON TELLING THE TRUTH

Ruth I. Cloniok

Judith disliked spinach. She declared with all the vehemence that is permitted to a six-year-old that she just hated spinach, that it was bitter and that it tasted like "horrid old grass!" Not even when the spinach was fortified by special dessert could she forget this comparison. Her aversion was quite sincere.

But Judith ate spinach. She ate large dishes of it whenever it appeared on the table, and sundry fragments salvaged from the kitchen after the table was cleared. She ate it bravely, persistently, and hopefully, for Judith's life ambition was to have beautiful curly hair like Maralin Moore, and Judith's mother had told her that the whole question of curly hair was a matter of eating spinach.

This had been explained in detail so many times that Judith had quite a mental picture of the bitter spinach juice working its way up to her head and wrinkling the hair inside so that it would grow out in curls.

One day after lunch, Maralin of the coveted golden curls came over to play with Judith. In the midst of establishing a very nice home in the back yard, Judith suddenly paused and eyed Maralin speculatively.

"I know how your hair got curly," she said. "From eating spinach."

"No Sir! We don't have spinach at our house. My daddy doesn't like it."

"Then how did your hair get curly?"

"It was born that way," answered Maralin grandly.

"Well, my mother told me that my hair will get curly if I eat lots of spinach." Judith held up a dark wisp of her straight bobbed hair, and said, "See it curves a little on the ends."

"Pooh!" said Maralin, who was two years older, "that's nothing. And I don't believe it about the spinach."

"I think you're bold! If you don't believe it, we'll ask Teacher tomorrow. Then you just wait and see! My mother wouldn't tell a lie."

Accordingly next day after school, Maralin, the braver of the two, approached Teacher.

"Miss Thomas," she said, "will eating spinach make your hair curly?"

Miss Thomas looked down upon Maralin's blond curls and smiled.

"Hardly," she said. And then noticing Judith in the background, "But I think straight hair is very lovely on some people."

"Mother," she accused, "I've found out that it isn't true about spinach making my hair curly. Mother, it isn't true; it's—it's a lie!" Unexpectedly Judith began to cry.

It took many days and much diplomacy to form even a thin covering of healing over Judith's wounded feelings. Naturally, the sharpest disappointment centered about the hair. But beneath this was another hurt; an infantile sense of disillusionment regarding Mother, who had broken her own commandment about telling the truth. Being a child, Judith did not reason this very far, but being a sensitive child, she felt vaguely the injustice of grown-up standards.

Children's choice of food should be guided by parents, but this should not mean that truth must be sacrificed. Tactful explanations of the natural benefits of healthful food will accomplish satisfactory results for children who have confidence in their parent's word. This confidence is the most precious bond between parent and child. Protect it.

Little Talks on Thrift

DONATED DOLLARS AND EARNED DOLLARS

More and more attention is being given by employers to the welfare of reeled in 86 and Prince Humbert had the individuals employed by them. These efforts, however, should not be regarded as charitable activities. The point of distinction between paternalism and co-operation is much the same as the difference between charity and rightful reward. One is represented by the donated dollar, the other by the earned dollar.

The employe, through loyalty, faithful service and intelligent effort, is one of the direct factors in the prosperity of the company employing him. Hence his rewards should as nearly as possible be in keeping with the prosperity which he has helped create.

GET RID OF YOUR FAT

Thousands of others have gotten rid of theirs by my simple and efficient method of fat reduction without starvation diet or burdensome exercise, often bt a very rapid rate and WITHOUT PAYMENT until reduction has taken place!

I am a licensed practicing physician and have made a careful study of the physiological requirements of the human body. This has enabled me to select such ingredients and in such proportion as in my opinion will produce not only a loss of weight without harm and an improvement in health, but with it an alleviation of all of the troublesome symptoms which frequently accompany and often are a direct result of overstoutness, such as shortness of breath on slight exertion, palpitation of the heart, etc., not to speak of the relief from the embarrassment of being too stout. Stout persons suffering from such diseases as Chronic Rheumatism, Gout, Eczema, Asthma and high blood pressure are greatly relieved by a reduction of their superfluous fat.

My treatment will relieve that depressed, tired, sleepy feeling, giving you the reserved energy and vigor which come as a result of the loss of superfluous fat.

If you are overstout do not postpone but sit down right now and send for my FREE TRIAL TREATMENT and my plan whereby I am to be PAID ONLY AFTER REDUCTION HAS TAKEN PLACE if you so desire.

DR. R. NEWMAN, 286 Fifth Ave., New York — Desk D

Success, through mutuality of effort, should bring a corresponding mutuality of reward.

Such processes are constructive. The earned dollar means the creation of new wealth. The donated dollar means the depletion of wealth.

It is important in our industrial life that good service be regarded by the employe in the light of personal thrift. It is the surest way of getting ahead.

Thrift is progressive. The longer one practices it the more enjoyable it becomes, and the more satisfying and substantial, are its benefits. And it is along these lines that the individual, impelled by honest enthusiasm, attains a constantly increasing degree of efficiency and usefulness.

There is no better type of thrift than complete co-operation between employer and employe. The more nearly they attain the relationship of co-workers, with a mutuality of confidence, enthusiasm, loyalty and reward, the greater will be the successful outcome of their relationship. —American Society for Thrift.

The queen of Italy is the champion trout catcher of the Italian royal family and Prince Humbert is the worst. This was proved to the satisfaction of all the royal household by a fishing competition in brooks and lakes surrounding the Alpine castle of St. Anne de Valdieri, where the Italian royal family was summering. The queen finished the one-day competition with 343 trout to her credit. The king came far behind her, but next, with a catch of 179. Princess Yolanda scored 151, Princess Mafalda lured 31 fish on to her hook, Princess Marie reel in 25 and Prince Humbert had to be content with only 16 fish in his creel.

$1,000,000 for this way to end Colds

One of the world's largest laboratories perfected a way to end colds. It combined a number of modern discoveries. That way proved itself so efficient, so quick, so complete that we paid $1,000,000 for it.

That way is called HILL'S. It checks a cold in 24 hours. It ends the fever, stops the headache. It opens the bowels, tones the entire system. And without any ill effects. As a result, one usually feels better than before the cold began.

Millions now employ it. When they learn its results they keep it ever on hand. Then a cold rarely gets started.

Here is all-in-all for colds—the best modern science knows. Things will change tomorrow if you take it now. Go start it without delay.

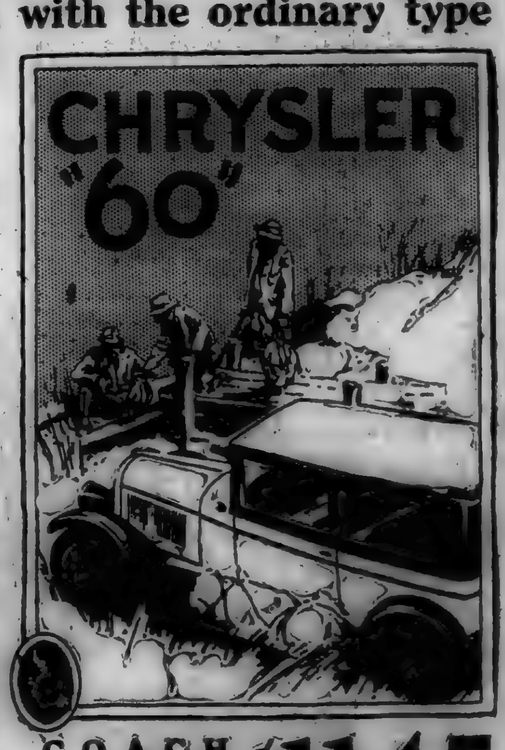
NEW LOWER PRICES place the Chrysler "60" further than ever beyond comparison with the ordinary type of light six



ANY attempt to compare the Chrysler "60" with the ordinary type of six is like comparing the modern dirigible with the old-style balloon—impossible, because the two are fundamentally different.

The difference begins with a black-and-white difference in engineering, the Chrysler "60" being designed and built under the plan of Standardized Quality, as if required to give 60 miles an hour for every mile and minute of its life.

Necessarily, the difference stands out even more sharply in performance—the extraordinary power reserve of the "60" giving it a smoothness at average speeds that you recognize at once as unattainable in the ordinary type of six built by ordinary manufacturing methods to ordinary performance standards.

Just as pronounced is the difference in comfort, agility and handling ease—in gasoline economy, dependability and long life—in every single feature that makes for complete motoring satisfaction.

Try out the Chrysler "60"—discover for yourself why, at its new lower prices, it is the inevitable choice of every purchaser who searches for utmost value in the light six field.

Try Magnesia for Stomach Trouble

People who suffer from indigestion usually have tried pepsin, charcoal, drugs and various digestive aids and know these things will not cure their trouble—in some cases do not even give relief.

But before giving up to chronic dyspepsia, just try the effect of a little Bisurated Magnesia—not the ordinary commercial carbonate, citrate or milk, but pure Bisurated Magnesia which you can obtain from practically any druggist in either powder or tablet form.

Take a teaspoonful of the powder or four compressed tablets with a little water after your next meal, and see what a difference this makes. It will instantly neutralize the dangerous, harmful acid in the stomach which now causes your food to ferment and sour, making gas, wind, flatulence, heartburn and the bloated or heavy, lumpy feeling that seems to follow most everything you eat. You can enjoy your meals without a fear of indigestion.

REPORT GREATEST YEAR IN STATE FOR CONGREGATIONAL CHURCHES

Two hundred and fifty delegates registered Tuesday for the 88th annual meeting of the general conference of the Congregational churches of Connecticut which is being held at the United Congregational church in this city. The conference opened Tuesday morning at 10:30 and continued throughout the afternoon and evening. It will come to a close today, (Wednesday), morning and afternoon sessions being scheduled.

Former Congressman E. W. Higgins of this city was elected moderator for the annual meeting. Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey of this city was chosen scribe and Rev. Arthur H. Hope of Suffield, assistant scribe.

Growth of Denomination

Two reports of especial interest were given at the Tuesday afternoon business meeting, one by Rev. Samuel E. Clifton of Winsted, chairman of the state committee of missions, and the other by Rev. William F. English of Hartford, registrar and statistical secretary of the conference.

The regular or apportionment missionary contributions from the 323 Congregational churches in the state last year were $386,095, a new high record, it was reported by Rev. Mr. Clifton.

The increase in missionary giving last year over the previous year was $21,571, the largest increase for any state conference in the denomination, it was stated. The total giving was only exceeded by Massachusetts with $694,000.

Comparison between the missionary giving in Connecticut and in the denomination throughout the country, was made by Mr. Clifton.

"As a nation-wide denomination," he said, "we are giving $1 to missions or benevolences for every $6.91 we devote to parish expenses; in Connecticut we give $1 to others for every $3.87 we spend on ourselves. The Congregational denomination gave to regular or apportionment benevolences at the rate of $3.59 per capita; while we in our 323 churches, gave at the rate of $4.75 per capita. Last year registers for us a supreme achievement in missionary giving.

"Your committee feels that these happy results are the inevitable consequences of improved methods, new interest, increased devotion and more prayer for the sake of Christ's kingdom in the world. More and more our pastors are accepting the high privilege of their calling and are becoming missionary preachers and leaders. And our churches under their instruction, are gaining the inspiration and courage to meet the challenge of a God-given opportunity with richer gifts of love and money—not for a mere quota but for a world-wide enterprise. It may be interesting to learn just why we behave like human beings, but it is a more fascinating story to tell why and how we ought to give as Christians."

A proportion of 50 cents to missions for each dollar raised for parish expenses, is the goal toward which the Connecticut churches are striving, according to Mr. Clifton. For 1927 a definite increase of ten per cent in missionary giving, or a total of $424,000, is being sought. The annual every member canvass for funds, both for parish and mission purposes, will be made by most churches beginning the first Sunday in December.

A new high total has also been reached in membership by the Congregational churches of Connecticut, with a net growth of 1,861 last year. The membership now is 81,190.

The past six years, it was reported by Rev. Mr. English, has seen the longest and largest continuous growth of the churches in the history of the state. The total increase for the six years has been 9,455, or an average of over 1,500 each year.

The total Sunday school enrollment for the state, reported by Mr. English, was 53,615, and the membership of the young people's societies was 8,979.

For parish expenses last year was raised $1,521,562. For all missionary and benevolent purposes, special and regular, the contributions were $528,-639, making the total raised for all purposes $2,050,201. An increase of 1,-198,135 in the valuation of church property brought the total valuation to $14,968,635. Forty-four churches received legacies totalling $131,004. The total amount of invested funds now held by the churches is $5,598,-970. The average pastoral salary was reported as $2,090. In addition to salary most churches provide a parsonage.

Following the afternoon session supper was served the visiting delegates at the community house under the direction of the ways and means committee of the Woman's Guild of the United church, Mrs. Albert J. Sinay being the chairman of the ways and means committee. Mrs. Joseph A. French is in general charge of the menus arranged for the conference delegates. Tuesday evening's menu, served by the Philathea class was as follows:

Fruit Cup
Roast Lamb Mashed Potatoes
Gravy Peas
Pickles Rolls Coffee
Butterscotch Shortcake
Ice Cream

Mrs. William H. Dawley was in charge of the kitchen and was assisted by Mrs. Alfred Bliven, Mrs. Clarance A. Spear, Mrs. George Gifford, Mrs. Thomas Smith, Mrs. Everett Maurice, Miss Nina Perry, Mrs. Don Houghton, Mrs. Warren Church, Miss Marion Beebe, Mrs. Albert J. Sinay. The tables were in charge of Mrs. Henry Lyons and Mrs. Howard Peckham and the following young women of the church acted as waitresses:

Evening Session

Following the supper the conference convened about 7:30 o'clock for the evening session. Edwin W. Higgins of the United church was moderator and following the devotional period introduced as the first speaker Hon. Frank J. Harwood, moderator of the National Council of Congregational churches, Mr. Harwood who is a woolen manufacturer of Appleton, Wis. and a prominent layman of the Congregational church, spoke on the topic, What the Layman Expects of His Minister.

We have a wonderful fellowship all over the land, said Mr. Harwood. It is a pleasure to find this spirit of cooperation all along the line. If our laymen would make the church first, there would be no doubt but that we would accomplish what we start out to do.

We expect our minister to be a man called of God. We are getting a leadership from our young men and we have a leadership from our older men that stands out. Our ministers should have a training for practical business. They should know something of practical business. We expect the minister to understand organized life. Ministers make this mistake. They involve all the detailed work. I think many ministers make this mistake. They involve themselves in too much detail work and in a few years are literally burned out.

We expect the minister will be a dreamer of dreams and be able to see visions and put those visions before the congregation. One of the finest things in a community is to find the churches working in close harmony. We expect the minister to sympathize with the young people. We expect the minister will be posted in athletics. He should be able to talk athletics with the boys in the boys' language.

We expect the ministers to be posted on the industrial question. When you post yourself on the industrial question don't take one side of the road. Go to the employer and the employe. Get both sides. We expect our minister to be a man of God and to create an atmosphere that will bring us into touch with the higher life.

Hartford Pastor Speaks

Following the singing of a hymn by the congregation, led by the church choir, Mr. Higgins introduced as the second speaker of the evening, Rev. Rockwell H. Potter, D. D., of Hartford, president of the A. B. C. F. M., who spoke on A Glimpse of the Missions in India.

I had the rare privilege of being a member of the deputation of the American board that visited missions in India and Ceylon last season, said Rev. Dr. Potter. He spoke of the composition of the deputation and explained the purpose of its visit to the far east.

India is the land of majesty, the land of misery and the land of mystery, he said. All climes are there. India is vast in mass of her population, in provincial India, there are 350,000,000 people, three times the population of the United States living on a territory two-thirds the size of the United States. There are great things in nature to see in India, said the speaker and he went on to give a realistic picture of the grandeur of the mountain scenery. The fascinating thing in India is the people themselves, said Rev. Dr. Potter. There is no end to the picturesque pageant of the human drama in the streets of India. The speaker went on to give a vivid description of the Indian peasant and his mode of living in one door, windowless mud huts closely grouped in small villages on the plains of India. Ninety-per cent. of the people of India live on the plains.

There is a new national spirit in India, said Rev. Dr. Potter. It began to express itself before the world war. The world war greatly stimulated it and since the world war it has continued to express itself, probably not so violently but more steadily. The cry is for complete and immediate separation from the British empire.

Rev. Dr. Potter said that the policy of the British government in increasing home rule, has met the demand for political self-control. The administration of justice remains in British hands. They know the danger of entrusting the administration of justice to the Indian people. Despite its mistakes Great Britain has done great things in India, Rev. Dr. Potter said. During the latter part of his talk he touched on the economic problem in India and spoke of the progress of Christianity in that far away country. He said the people of India know of our national life as it is, and have discovered that the missionaries are not a fair sample of the people of this country. They believed that the people of this country were all like the missionaries sent out to India but the American newspapers which reach them in India carrying stories of crime and scandal have caused them to think otherwise.

After the close of the evening session automobile transportation for the delegates being entertained in private homes were provided by the following:

Dr. Lloyd J. Thompson, clinical director of Yale school of medicine, closed his series of four talks upon the general topic of "Mental Hygiene" given under the auspices of the Unified Workers, Tuesday evening at Slater hall annex where he had an audience of about 35 on the rainy evening. He was introduced by Mrs. Edwin W. Higgins and spoke upon the subject of "Parents."

Dr. Thompson pointed out that parents had an immense responsibility towards their children because environment, rather than heredity, is the great formative influence upon childhood and much can be done about environment. So there is the responsibility upon the parents to set a good example for their children who are at the suggestible and imitative stage in life.

Dr. Thompson went on to speak of some of the undesirable trends which parents may exhibit which children will tend to imitate. He spoke first of the neuroses of hysteria, anxiety, and morbidness in which many environment causes can be found, such as finances, health worry, poor business success, failure to reach ideals and inequalities in social standing. These neuroses are very common and have definite results on the children. He spoke also of the romantic-depressive type, which has swings of mood from excessive high spirits to low spirits that approach the borderland of the abnormal. He spoke also of dementia praecox where the individual is withdrawn from reality and builds up a world where he thinks he is some unusual person whom others do not understand. Such a condition arises from some mal-adjustment in early years.

In conclusion Dr. Thompson presented several pointers for parents to consider, viz: Do I cause My Child to be nervous, to disobey, to be dishonest, to have temper tantrums?

JOHN D. NOLAN, NOTED LOCAL RUNNER, DISPUTES CLAIM OF INDIAN RUNNERS

That the recent feat of the two Mexican Indians at Mexico City in running 84 1-2 miles in 9 hours and 37 minutes does not set a record is the claim of John D. Nolan of Taftville, himself a noted long distance runner of the early 90s. The feat of the Indians has been heralded as a record for all time but search of the records reveals the fact that these two were far behind the mark set by Mr. Nolan for the distance.

On March 29, 1890 at South Norwalk Mr. Nolan ran against some of the most noted runners in Connecticut in a 12-hour indurance race for the championship of Connecticut. The race was held under the auspices of Co. D, 4th regiment, Connecticut National Guard, Captain Frost commanding. The race was over a track specially laid out by surveyors for the event. Those to start were John D. Nolan of Norwich, Frank Hampson of Bridgeport, then holder of the state long distance title, John Britt of Winnipauk, William Brown of Norwalk and Albert Geurtig of Norwalk, a former Philadelphia professional runner. Geurtier who had won two previous races was a strong favorite to win and Nolan was not even considered as a possible candidate to finish.

The race started at noon and Geurtier swung into the lead setting a very fast pace, with Nolan dogging the heels of the professional. At the 10-mile mark Nolan wrested the lead from Geurtier having covered the distance in 1 hour and 7 minutes. The race by this time had narrowed down to the professional and Nolan, both running almost side by side as they passed the 20-mile mark after 2 hours and 7 minutes of running. By this time they had far outdistanced the other runners. When 33 miles had been covered Nolan began to draw away from Geurtier who was fast losing ground. When Nolan passed the 30-mile mark in 3 hours and 24 minutes Geurtier was two miles in the rear while Hampson was coming up. The time from the 25 to the 30-mile marks was the fastest ever run up to that time.

As the 43-mile mark was left behind Geurtier, utterly exhausted, quit the race as did Britt at the 44 mile mark. Nolan and Hampson pressed on with Nolan gaining ground all the while. When fifty miles had been covered Nolan's time was just 7 hours and he was going strong. The next seven miles was run in exactly one hour and he continued the same pace for the next seven passing the 64-mile marker when he had been running for exactly nine hours. He went to the 70 mile mark where he stopped as Hampson had dropped out at 63 miles. Nolan's time for the 70 miles was 10 hours and 20 minutes.

Not satisfied and to show his extreme endurance Nolan then ran an exhibition half mile in three minutes. For his feat which was recognized as one of the greatest in running history at that time he received a gold medal awarded by Captain Frost, who later became General Frost. Nolan also received a cash prize of $100. Among the prominent Norwich men who witnessed Nolan's remarkable feat was Dennis P. Hayes.

The last running feat of note of Mr. Nolan's was in 1913 at the New London County Fair when he set a world's record for men of 50 years of age, over a fifth of a mile. Nolan made the 352 yards in 55 seconds flat clipping six seconds off the record held by E. C. Carter a noted runner and holder of numerous records.

Mr. Nolan was always a devotee of the cinder path and in recent years although past the three score mark takes an active interest in running. He has trained numerous local runners including Bill Wickes and others who have shone on the cinder paths.

AGGIE TEAM HOLDS INDOOR PRACTICE SESSION

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 9—Heavy rain and a muddy field prevented outdoor work for the Connecticut Aggies preparing for the Alumni Homecoming Day game with Rhode Island here Saturday. Drilling in Hawley armory, work was confined to a long session of signal drill and dummy scrimmage.

With every first string player in excellent condition, Connecticut will be able to put an eleven of full strength on the field against Rhode Island. Schofield will be back at his regular quarterback berth, Eddy and Knaut at the halves, and Williams at fullback. With this quartet behind a strong Aggie forward wall, the attack is well equipped for a powerful offense, one that by a wide margin shades anything displayed by an Aggie backfield in times past. Connecticut followers are hoping for a dry field Saturday, one that will give Eddy a chance to break away for some long gains.

TUNNEY IS ON WAY TO NEW YORK AGAIN

HAMILTON, Bermuda, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Gene Tunney, heavyweight boxing champion of the world, who has spent the past ten days in Bermuda, today sailed for New York.

The champion made a brief address last night at a benefit performance given for the dependents of those lost in the foundering of H. M. S. sloop Valerian in the recent Caribbean hurricane.

The champion's appearance drew a great crowd.

FAST CARDS OF BOUTS SLATED FOR NEW LONDON

What would be rated as an almost local card is booked for the Lyceum theatre in New London next Tuesday night, the second boxing show put on by Promoter Tracy. The last card put on at New London was a decided success and a squint at the lineup of the bouts for next week indicate that the fans are going to get a card filled with action

For the main attraction Young Al Conly of New London, state lightweight champion, is booked up in a ten-round mill with Tommy Garret of New Haven. The title, however is not at stake. Conly's aggressiveness in his last fight won him the title from Mickey Travers.

The semi-final bout, which rivals the back of Johnny "Sheik" Leonard, state back of Johnny "Sheik" Leonard, state welterweight champion. The Sheik is booked to swap punches with Sailor Schatraw, welterweight champion of the Coast Guard. When we say swap punches that is what is meant for never has the Sheik failed to throw plenty of leather into his opponent's face and mid-riff. Schatraw is also a hard puncher and so this bout should provide an evening's entertainment in itself.

Billy Cross of New London and Babe Slattery of New Haven meet in a six-rounder, while Kid Wagner, the Taftville Flash, trades wallops with Ralph Sombathy of Bridgeport.

Another bout that will hold local interest is the curtain raiser between Young McCarthy of Norwich and Battling Burk of Westerly.

AGGIE ALUMNI PLANS BIG TIME FOR SATURDAY

STORRS, Nov. 9.—Homecoming day for Connecticut Agricultural College alumni and former students is next Saturday according to the announcement of Alumni Secretary Louis A. Alexander, who says preparations are completed for the hundreds of Aggie supporters expected to return to see the varsity elevens of Connecticut and Rhode Island clash on Gardner Dow field here.

The event promises to be a notable one in the history of the state college, and it is expected that a crowd of several thousand will be present when the big game gets under way. Connecticut's eleven has won all but one of six games played this season, and a victory over Rhode Island will greatly enhance the record from an Aggie standpoint.

Following an alumni-student lunch at 12 o'clock there will be a parade of Connecticut rooters to Gardner Dow field, beginning at 1.45 p. m. The kick-off for the varsity contest is scheduled for two o'clock, at which time Randolf Whaples of Newington, will begin a play by play broadcast of the struggle through WCAC, the Connecticut Agricultural College radio station. An alumni-student dinner will be held in the college dining hall after the game, and this will be followed with addresses by President Charles Lewis Beach of the college, Varsity Coach Sumner A. Dole, Prof. George H. Hollister, and other members of the college staff and prominent alumni. Fraternity reunions will follow.

INJURED ACADEMY PLAYERS ARE GETTING INTO SHAPE

Indications at the present time are that the Academy will be enabled to present all injured regulars for the annual clash with Bulkeley at the campus Saturday.

Shea, guard, who has been on the sick list for the past three games, McGlone, a back, who was hurt in the Chapman Tech tiff, Fox, who was injured in the Bridgeport game, Captain Ed Brewer, who suffered a charley horse on Saturday, and Jack Marks, who hurt his shoulder on the first play of Saturday's game, are all expected to be back in harness for the coming important contest.

The locals will hold practice drills every day this week in order to get into the best possible shape for the Whalers on Saturday but no scrimmages will be forthcoming because of the danger of further injuries.

The largest crowd to attend an Academy-Bulkeley game in some time is anticipated on Saturday and preparations toward this end have been made by the local management.

The annual interscholastic cross-country run will also be held on Saturday over the Academy course with the finish scheduled for between the halves of the game on the field.

ARMY-NOTRE GAME HOLDS NATIONAL INTEREST

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Led by Army's unbeaten warriors, 15 formidable football battalions of the east will uniffmber heavy artillery on Saturday.

National interest will center in Army's battle with Notre Dame where two unbeaten elevens have championship aspirations at stake. It will have all the color that has become associated with this intersectional classic but in tradition it yields to the contests renewing such ancient rivalries as those of Princeton and Yale, Harvard and Brown, Colgate and Syracuse, Cornell and Dartmouth, William and Amherst, Washington and Jefferson and Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania and Columbia.

The Army-Notre Dame feud had its inception 13 years ago in defeat of the West Point team by 35 to 13. In the 12 games played, Rockie's teams have carried off the honors in eight, Army has won three, and one ended in a scoreless tie.

The grapple of Princeton and Yale, which may decide the "Big Three" championship, brings together the most ancient foes of the gridiron. With a triumph over Harvard last week, the Tigers today ruled favorites to repeat their 1925 sweep to titular honors.

Ranking next to the Princeton-Yale melee in the scale of tradition stands the Amherst-Williams engagement. Their series, starting in 1884, preceded that of Harvard and Brown by a year.

Pittsburgh and Washington-Jefferson, locking in a game of apparently evenly matched teams, calls the rivals into action to break a series deadlock. Each university has won 13 games since the opening of gridiron warfare between them in 1890.

Dartmouth's defeats by Yale, Harvard and Brown have raised new hope at Ithaca, and even the gloom of Gil Dobie's pessimistic forecasts cannot dispel the confidence that their meeting on Saturday holds for Cornell a golden opportunity to avenge last year's crushing defeat at 62-15.

Football critics, who have seen their forecasts spilled rather freely this season, anticipated stirring battles between Pennsylvania and Columbia and Syracuse and Colgate, with little to choose between the latter teams. The Philadelphia eleven appeared to hold an edge over Columbia, however, on the basis of their season's records.

Georgetown's unexpected victory over Syracuse last week has focused new interest on the Georgetown-Navy engagement, at Annapolis, with the Middies attempting to extend a winning streak which already has reached seven straight.

SNOW STORM DRIVES CONFERENCE TEAMS TO COVER

CHICAGO, Nov. 9.—(AP)—Field houses and gymnasiums on every big ten campus echoed tonight with the shrill barking of football signals as western conference teams, driven indoors by a snowstorm prepared as best they could for Saturday's games.

Northwestern worked with fatalistic frenzy for the Chicago classic, confronted by two jinxes. The Wildcats are dedicating Dyone field, their new stadium, Saturday, and they are entertaining the Maroons on the Evanston gridiron for the first time in almost 20 years.

Wisconsin foresees its first real chance to beat Iowa since the schools resumed relations in 1924.

Michigan drilled confidently for Ohio State and found itself a favorite after the easy win from Wisconsin. Ohio State, equally confident, had the advantage of a week's respite.

Illinois, Minnesota and Purdue did not regret the inability to practice outdoors, for the Illinois meet Wabash, the Gophers play Butler and Purdue engages Franklin in easy contests.

Indiana has a non-conference foe, but a formidable one, in Mississippi A. & M.

Notre Dame, preparing for the Army and its big bid for the national title is without Parisien, reserve quarterback, who brought the scoring punch to the Northwestern game when the regulars had failed.

PUTNAM AND DANIELSON BOYS SHINE ON COLLEGE TEAMS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, Nov. 9.—Some of the college boys from this vicinity are helping to make football history. Jack Cronin of Putnam, half back for Boston College, scored a touchdown against Villanova in Saturday's game and was one of the outstanding players in a 19-7 victory. Chandler Morse of Amherst was given credit for tackling a Union back behind the goal line, thereby scoring two points for Amherst for a safety. Amherst defeated Union at Amherst 25-0. "Pop" Williams of Danielson made three touchdowns for the Connecticut Aggies against Cooper Union at Storrs, which the Aggies won 68-0.

N. Y. COMMISSION TAKES UP SEVERAL IMPORTANT MATTERS AT SESSION

NEW YORK, Nov. 9.—(AP)—The state athletic commission took steps today to untangle the championship affairs in three divisions, tabled the challenges of title aspirants in two others and handed indefinite suspensions to two widely known boxers. Lew Tendler and Harry Persson, for fouling recent opponents. The commission dabbled in everything from flyweights to heavyweights in the course of a four-hour session.

Casting aside its recently announced hands-off policy toward the creation of new champions, the commission recommended an elimination program to decide the successor of Louis (Kid) Kaplan as featherweight title-holder.

The board suggested that Benny Bass of Philadelphia and Red Chapman of Boston be matched to decide which should meet the survivor of the forthcoming elimination test in 126-pound ranks between Chick Suggs, New Bedford, Mass., negro, and "Honey Boy" Finnegan of Boston. This bout is scheduled in Boston next Monday and already has the sanction of the Massachusetts boxing commission as a title test.

The commission tossed a barrier in the way of Tex Rickard's proposal to match Elky Clarke, British flyweight champion, with Fidel Labarba, recognized in this country as the world's champion. Clarke, it was suggested, should first be tested against one or two other opponents of his class before meeting Labarba.

Charley (Phil) Rosenberg, the license committee of the board ruled, must defend his world's bantamweight crown against Bushey Graham of Utica, N. Y., without any "tune-up" contests. Graham's challenge has been on file since last February but Rosenberg has not yet accepted it officially and his license will be withheld until he does. The Rosenberg-Graham match had been tentatively arranged for Jan. 7 at Madison Square Garden.

The challenge of Joe Dundee of Baltimore for a title match with Pete Latzo the welterweight king, and of Mike McTigue for a bout with Jack Delaney, the light heavyweight titleholder, were set aside temporarily. Forfeits of $2,500 each were offered on behalf of both challengers, but the commission will not accept these until the customary six months period of grace has expired. Latzo and Delaney last defended their crowns in July and have until January before they are subject to official challenges.

Indefinite suspensions of Tendler and Persson marked unexpectedly stringent action by the commission. It has been customary to hand 30-day suspensions to boxers losing on fouls in New York rings, but James Farley, chairman of the board, declared this punishment apparently had not proved severe enough. Tendler lost on a foul to Tommy Jordan while Persson was disqualified in a recent bout at Madison Square Garden with Bud Gorman, Wisconsin heavyweight.

UPPER AND LOWER MIDDLERS TIE IN CROSS COUNTRY RUN

The annual Academy interclass cross country run held at the Academy on Tuesday afternoon resulted in a tie score, the Upper Middle team and the Lower Middle team each having six points. The Seniors and Juniors were entirely outclassed and had 18 and 30 points respectively against them.

Francis Sullivan, who finished first last week in the meet with Suffield, led the field in the interclass run although he was given stiff competition by Robertson, a lower middler, who finished second. Greene of the lower middle class finished fourth giving the lower class a tie with the 1928 class. Dynon of the Uppers finished fifth. The third place went to Joe Sadinsky of the junior class.

The meet was one that created not a little interest and brought out a number of promising candidates for the varsity team. Zeiller, Plotnic and Labenski will join the varsity candidates this week. Coach Sheriden being impressed by the showing of these boys in the interclass meet.

DEATH OF MOTHER FORCES KLINE OUT OF GAME

The absence of Kline from the lineup Saturday, will greatly handicap the Bulldog in his first "Big Three" tussle against the Tiger.

Jerry W. Wadsworth of New York was selected to fill the vacancy and practiced this afternoon with the varsity.

A heavy thunderstorm prevented scrimmaging, and the afternoon was spent in signal drill, running back kick-offs, and practice in handling a wet ball.

Jewett City Gridsters Win.

The fast Jewett City football club took Westerly into camp Sunday in a close and interesting game, 6 to 0. Both teams showed up well after a lay off of three weeks, the only score coming in the last period with eight minutes to play, when Murphy, a new star for Jewett City, made a pretty end run for about 25 yards for a touchdown.

The Jewett City club would like to get in touch with any team averaging 165 pounds for a game to be played Sunday, especially the H. and S. of Putnam. Any team desiring a game write William Bakanowsky, Jewett City, or call 17-13, Jewett City.

Temple on Dartmouth Slate.

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 9—(AP)—Dartmouth's 1927 football schedule was completed today with the announcement from the athletic council that Temple University of Philadelphia will oppose the big Green at Hanover on October 15. Other games, previously announced include Norwich, Hobart, Harvard, Yale, Brown and Cornell.

DEATH OF J. D. CRONIN AT HOME IN NEW LONDON

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Jeremiah D. Cronin, about 57, a prominent resident of this city for two generations, died at his home, 12 Nathan Hale street this evening about 7 o'clock very suddenly. He had spent a life of the kind that is worthy of emulation, a life filled with kindness, which followed a course that brought happiness to him and his family and to others beyond the limit of kin. Mrs. Cronin had preceded him several years ago, and their son, Frank Q. Cronin, died a short time before his mother passed away. Mr. Cronin was born in County Kerry, Ireland, but came to this country as a young man.

He had lived for a time in Colchester, later in Norwich. After moving to New London he learned the plumbing business from Smith & Grace. He was an employe of the late Leander Williams, whose shop was located on Main street, above the present store of Edwin Keeney & Co. There he was associated with the late Daniel Newman, with whom Mr. Cronin finally entered into partnership, buying out Leander Williams and continuing the business. They were very successful, accumulating considerable money.

Mr. Cronin was far-sighted enough to see the growing value of real estate on State street, and about 1890 he purchased the City Hotel property from the late Peter Dorsey, the present location of the Kresge company. The building was a delapidated wooden structure with a second story baloony, running its entire length.

A year after his purchase of the hotel building it burned down. Mr. Cronin erected a modern, four-story brick building on the site. The new structure was a model for the city at that time and its cost was in figures astonishing for that generation; but Mr. Cronin had faith in the future of New London and the building has proved one of the best investments in the city.

Mr. Cronin married Miss Annie Quinn, in New London, about 1865. They had three sons, Dr. William D. Cronin and Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Cronin, survive. The son, Attorney Frank Q. Cronin, died about four years ago. Mr. Cronin leaves also a brother, William, in Atlanta, Ga., and a sister, Miss Nellie Cronin, in Colchester. Another brother, Daniel Cronin, died about seven years ago, in Springfield, Mo.

Mr. Cronin owned a beautiful residence on Nathan Hale street, and was one of the original promoters of Neptune Park, occupying during the season a handsome home on the sea wall. He was also owner of the former Rogers residence on Main street, as well as owning other valuable real estate. He had large investments in bonds and other securities.

He was a member of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, was a member of the Holy Name society, St. John's Literary association, Knights of Columbus, and the Ancient Order of Hibernians. For a number of years he served as an alderman of New London on several important committees; he was a member of the city water board for a long term, a director of the Union bank, and had held other offices and received other public honors and evidences of the confidence and esteem of the townspeople.

INCORRECT WORD USED— LEGISLATURE MUST DECIDE

The substitution of one word for another in a proposed amendment to the state constitution by the 1925 session of the legislature will result in the amendment coming before the 1927 session as a matter which originated in 1926. The amendment, the purpose of which is to insure at least one representative in the house for each town, was adopted in 1925, making then that representation of the towns should be according to "law". In 1925 this was changed to read that representation should be according to the "Constitution".

The constitution provides that an amendment must be adopted in the house by a majority vote, after which it is continued to the next legislature, where it must be adopted by a two-thirds vote of both houses, this vote being by roll call. The amendment is then submitted to the towns for ratification.

The proposed amendment is the result of the action of the 1921 general assembly in dividing the town of Orange to create the town of West Haven. In accordance with article eighteen of the amendments to the constitution, West Haven was designated as a voting district of Orange for purposes of representation in the house. The present reading of the eighteenth amendment to the constitution is that a new town does not get a representative in the legislature unless both it and the town from which it was set aside have at least 2,500 inhabitants.

The amendment which will be before the 1927 legislature for adoption by two-thirds of each house reads: "Representation of the several towns in the house of representatives shall be determined as provided by the constitution, provided each town shall have at least one representative."

EPISCOPAL CHURCHES WILL HEAR CAMPAIGN EXPLAINED

Lewis B. Franklin, vice president and treasurer of the national council of the Episcopal church, has accepted an invitation to address a series of conferences in Connecticut Nov. 16-19, inclusive, to discuss with rectors and vestrymen of the churches of the dioceses plans for the promotion of the world-wide program of the Episcopal church. Mr. Franklin will be accompanied on his brief tour of Connecticut by Rev. A. R. McKinstry, corresponding secretary of the field department of the church. The program of their tour follows:

Nov. 16, Bridgeport, St. John's church; Nov. 17, Middletown, Holy Trinity church; Nov. 18, Stamford, St. Andrew's church; Nov. 19, Norwich, Christ church.

The national council of the church has just approved the budget for 1927 which totals $4,812,870 in which are included expenditures for all general church purposes throughout the world, embracing, in addition to home projects in the various dioceses and missionary districts of the United States work under way in the Orient, Africa, Alaska and Latin America. Since the work of the church is conducted strictly on a budget basis, quotas for which are apportioned among the various dioceses, the authorities of which in turn fix the quotas to be raised in each parish—all funds for the prosecution of the program being raised wholly within the church—these meetings have been arranged to permit Mr. Franklin and Mr. McKinstry to outline the picturesque and comprehensive features of the 1927 program to the rectors and vestrymen of the various congregations in advance of the approaching every member canvass in which the membership of the church makes their pledges of support for the ensuing year.

Hidden Flavors

In Lucky Strike cigarettes you get all that can be in any very fine cigarette—also the added pleasure produced by the extra process of toasting.

1. Finer Flavor. Toasting for 45 minutes develops the hidden flavors of the world's finest Turkish and domestic tobaccos.

2. Smoothness. Toasting for 45 minutes removes all "bite" and harshness, hence never any throat irritation.

3. Freshness. Then the tobacco is suddenly chilled. This seals the flavor in and insures constant freshness.

If judged only by comparison of tobaccos, Lucky Strikes would be the best on the market. But the extra process is a final touch, making Luckies far superior.

"It's toasted"

That's Why Luckies Taste So Good

WESTERLY

PATROLMAN SHELDON SHOT AT BY UNKNOWN PERSONS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 9—The peace and tranquility of Pawcatuck was again disturbed on Tuesday morning shortly before 3 a. m. when Pawcatuck Patrolman Agin R Sheldon was subjected to gunfire attack by two men whose identity if not yet known. Not only was Officer Sheldon a target for revolver shot but as a prelude had a two-pound blacksmith's machinist hammer thrown at him and also a chisel. Patrolman Sheldon sounded his police whistle to summon aid from the Westerly side of the Pawcatuck river and returned the revolver fire with shot from his own revolver.

Following the safe-breaking of early Monday morning at the fruit stand of the Greek-American Fruit store on West Broad street, when over $1,000 was taken from the safe, Officer Sheldon as on the alert. He had proceeded down the driveway leading from West Broad street to the grain elevator of the C. W Campbell company grist mill and as he approached the shed on the east side of the grounds across the driveway, used to park autos and hitch horses, the hammer was thrown from the darkness of the shed at him and struck against the side of the grist mill. Sounding his police whistle, was the signal for the taller of two men to fire two shots from a revolver at him. Dropping to the driveway, Officer Sheldon pulled his own gun and emptied his revolver at the men, who then disappeared toward the blacksmith shop of Samuel Bafley. Just before the men disappeared, the officer reported that the taller man called to his companion, "Come on, Jake, there's more of them coming."

Westerly Police Officer Michael Curtin, on duty in Dixon square, called Patrolman Robert M. Kessel into Dixon square and then went into Pawcatuck to Officer Sheldon's aid. James Dowd, a Westerly resident, also went to the scene of the shooting. The grounds of the grist mill, the edge of the Pawcatuck river bank and the railroad embankment were scoured and officers fired into a clump of bushes where it was thought someone might be lurking.

It is thought that the men were interrupted in their attempt to enter the office of the Campbell Grain company, to secure whatever valuables they could find, the plant not having a night watchman since war time. Officer Curtin took the hammer and chisel to Westerly police headquarters where they were turned over into the custody of Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown. Officers Curtin and Kessel visited the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad to see if any suspicious characters were taking their departure from Westerly by any of the early morning express trains, but no trace has been found of the would-be robbers.

Public school children of Westerly are to be protected from the heavy and increasing noontime automobile traffic on the streets of Westerly by the expediency of the establishment of school dismissal hours.

Supt Willard H. Bacon has re-arranged the schedule slightly in order that pupils may be dismissed at 11:45 a. m., 15 minutes earlier than has been customary. The new schedule will take effect tomorrow.

Hereafter the graded schools will open at 8:45 a. m. instead of 9 and will close for the noon period at 11:45 a. m. instead of 12. Studies will be resumed at 1:15 p. m. Grades I to VI will close for the day at 3:30 p. m. and Grades VII and VIII will close at 3:45.

At the October meeting, of the school committee, that body discussed the matter of reducing the hazards encountered by children during the noon period of heavy auto traffic, and a vote was passed authorizing Supt. Bacon to re-arange the schedule in accordance with his own judgment in order that pupils might be dismissed 15 minutes earlier at noon.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

That building in Norwich is falling off as the cold weather approaches is shown in the lack of building permits issued by Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton. During the past week neither applications were received nor permits granted by the fire marshal. There has been but one building permit issued during the past three weeks and the prospects now are that the year 1926 will see a material decrease in the amount of building when compared to the record year of 1925.

Considerable progress has been made on building projects now in hand and with favorable conditions for the next few weeks it is expected that local building operations will be so far along that the extreme weather will not interfere with the progress.

During the past week the work on the new bank building on Broadway has progressed rapidly and the brick work on three sides is practically completed to the second story. The granite trim is being set in place. Contractors Peck, McWilliams Co., are in charge of the work.

The work of taking down the tower on the German Lutheran church on Franklin street is progressing rapidly and the entire building is being reinforced.

The store formerly occupied by Rumford Co., at the corner of Franklin and Main streets is being remodeled. The interior walls are being ripped down to the brick work and a new plaster finish is to be put on. Other alterations to the store are to be made.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were 11 sales of real estate as compared to 10 sales for the corresponding week in 1925. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $51,275 and $85,257.

There were 11 sales of real estate in New London during the past week, a decrease of 4 sales from the number of sales for the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $37,617 and $110,388.

Building Permits in State

Based on the number of building permits issued in the leading building centers there was an increase in the rate of building construction in Connecticut this past week over the like period a year ago. A total of 462 permits were issued during the week against 331 for 1925. The total estimated cost of work started was less this year than last, being $1,780,306 compared with $2,573,593 for the same period last year.

New London

Two more permits for new houses were included in the list of 18 permits issued by the council Monday night. In the list are also included five permits for new garages. With five Mondays in November it is possible that the number of permits issued last month, 64, will be exceeded this month if building continues at the rate of the past few months.

John J. Ryan was awarded the contract for the razing of the tower of Bulkeley high school, which was recently determined to be unsafe. Work has started on the demolishing and when the old stone tower is removed a slate roof will be built over the opening in the building by the Thames Metal Works.

The foundation is completed and work is now progressing on the upper structure of a garage being built for Perry and Stone at 37 Church street. Work is being done from private plans under supervision of the owners.

Work by a New York contracting firm is progressing rapidly on extensive alterations to the store at 88 State street. An architect prepared plans for the alterations, which will include new window fronts and interior improvements and alterations. The store was formerly occupied by a hardware firm and will be occupied soon by a shoe firm.

Plans for the alteration of a large house at 85 Federal street into an apartment house are being prepared for Abraham Rakosky. The house will be remodeled for a six-room apartment and four two-room apartments.

An architect has prepared plans for a new cottage of modern design for Jacob Rosen in Thames street. The plans specify a building 26 by 32 feet of frame construction and with a garage in the rear of the house.

Extensive alterations are nearing completion at the store at 16 State street owned by Messrs. Elfenbein and Hendel. The store was damaged early this year by a fire which started in the basement of the store, then occupied by a candy store. Since the fire the store was repaired and prepared for another opening. It will be occupied in the near future by a restaurant and the new alterations are for the purpose of installing the necessary equipment and for remodeling the front to an attractive design.

Work has been started on a new cottage for James King in Whittlesey street. The structure will be 24 by 28 feet in dimensions of modern design and frame construction and work is being done under supervision of the owner.

Work is progressing on a cement store building at 670 Bank street for Louis Margolis. The new structure will be 14 by 28 feet in dimension when completed and of one story height.

The contract for a new bungalow to be built for Archibald S. MacFarlane at 145 Jefferson avenue was submitted. From private plans the house will be 26 by 36 feet and will be equipped with modern improvements. The dwelling will be of modern design and of frame construction.

With the excavation work complete and the cement foundations set work is now progressing on the construction of the new building of the Southern New England Telephone company in Washington street at an appreciable extent. The heavy steel girder supports have been erected for the first floor and the red brick walls are going up. The structure, which will represent an outlay of about $100,000 on the part of the telephone company will be of two and three stories in height of modern brick construction.

Building Applications

Regina A. Gelina to erect cement block garage 35 feet 4 inches by 20 feet at 31 West street.

Gales Ferry

H. R. Douglas & Son have been awarded the contract for an addition to the Yale crew quarters at Gales Ferry. The completed building will be known as the Sheffield Memorial rooms. Plans for the new addition were prepared by Architect J. Frederick Kelly of New Haven and specify a structure 40 by 15 feet with a stone foundation and a frame upper structure. The new space will be provided with a large fireplace and will fill a long felt want at the Yale training quarters.

Stonington

Plans have been prepared for a new residence in Stonington for John Findlay. The new house will be of Colonial design and will be 31 by 41 feet in dimension. An ell, 24 by 11 feet, will be annexed to provide a sun parlor. The house will contain eight rooms with three tile baths and other modern conveniences and improvements. Bids are being received by the owner, who will supervise the construction.

Mr. McEachern worked in the Palmer shipyard and he was around calling on his old ship carpenter friends, Mr. Fitzpatric, John Ellis, Angus Morrisson and John Robertson. POETRY

Recce

Steeped they in red of an October day,
When the clouds veiling the hot sunset fires—
Wherein the tired Day cast his desires,
Yea, and those swift-born hopes more swift to die
Of all the hearts o' the world—blow high,
Wind-scattered, and the city's towers and spires
Are etched against a glory that aspires
The vision seen at Patmos to outvie.
And from their petals creeps the balm of healing
Of faith past even winged words to say,
That some time—all the hidden light revealing
Behind the murky sunset of a day—
The exultant west wind from the Unknown wheeling,
Will tear the sombre cloud-veils all away.

We Were Boys Together

We were boys together,
And never can forget
The schoolhouse near the heather,
In childhood where we met;
The humble home to memory dear,
Its sorrows and its joys;
Where woke the transient smile or tear,
When you and I were boys.

We were youths together,
And castles built in air,
Your heart was like a feather,
And mine weighed down with care!
To you came wealth with manhood's prime,
To me it brought alloys—
Foreshadowed in the primrose time,
When you and I were boys.

We're old men together;
The friends we loved of yore,
With leaves of autumn weather,
Are gone forevermore.
How blest to age the impose given,
The hope time ne'er destroys,
Which led our thoughts from earth to heaven
When you and I were boys.
—George Pope Morris.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Clerk—Certainly; but you looked pretty sick the day you bought it.—Christiania Korsaren.

"What do you know about the age of Elizabeth?" asked the teacher, taking the history class unawares.

"She'll be 19 next month," answered the boy. Then the class roared.—Cappers Weekly.

She—Before we were married you called me an angel.

He—I know it.

She—But now you don't call me anything.

He—That shows my self-control.—London Opinion.

Why do you say that?

Plugs and tinkers my teeth for 20 years. Now he tells me they must all come out.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Wife—Jack, dear, don't you think it would be nice to grow a fig tree up against the wall?

Husband—Fig tree? Good Lord! Fashions aren't coming to that, are they?—London Opinion.

"Just think of it!" exclaimed Flora the romantic. "A few words mumbled over your head and you're married."

"Yes," agreed Dora the cynical. "And a few words mumbled in your sleep and you're divorced."—Legion Weekly.

A visitor was talking to the little people in a Berkshire Sunday school recently and told them they should not be afraid of the dark. One little lad of 5 interrupted with a remark, "I am not afraid of the dark."

"There's a brave little man," replied the speaker.

The secret of turning tropical grasses and other fibrous substances into clothes to wear is believed to have been solved by Dr. Dinshaw Nanji, of Birmingham University, England. Chemical processes are said to have been perfected for separating the fibers from the raw materials and preparing them for spinning. The fabrics, if commercially successful, may take the place of cotton in the regions where large supplies of grasses are available. It is thought that new and interesting materials may be developed for wearing apparel and for other uses.

Apartment house life is gaining rapidly in popularity among the Argentines. One of the chief attractions is the central heating system, almost unknown in Buenos Aires a few years ago. Argentines say the winters have become increasingly severe in recent years and that this explains why so many detached houses, without any heating facilities, are being deserted for steam-heated apartments. One newspaper has begun a campaign in favor of heating the railway stations, street cars, subways and schools, pointing out that "every year it is becoming colder to the great discomfort of the public."

SELLING DECK OF DOPE TO SAILORS BRINGS FINE OF $50 AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Stanley O'Brien Roberts and his wife, Corinne, both colored, discovered when they were prosecuted in the police court this morning that selling dope is pretty expensive business when they are detected at it. They were charged jointly with selling two decks of the cocaine mixture to Warren S. Nelson and Elmer Ethridge, Coast Guard sailors, on the first day of this month. The testimony was well drawn out and resulted in a fine of $50 being imposed upon the woman. She negotiated the sale and received the pay for the stuff sold. Though Roberts was there and took more or less part in the transaction he could not be connected with the direct sale. The case was presented with a thoroughness that left no loophole for the escape of the seller. She was actually point blank, was identified and every detail of the transaction was laid bare for the court to form its conclusions upon. Corinne was crafty and made the best of a bad predicament, but the result was that she tangled herself and was unmistakably guilty as alleged.

The sailors were out looking for violations of the liquor law, they told the court. Passing along Douglass street they were hailed by a man in his shirt sleeves outside of No. 32. He invited them in. The sailors realized then that what they were looking for had come right to them. The man who greeted them was Roberts, an old-time shipmate of Nelson in the navy. Going in, Nelson and Ethridge asked for liquor. They could not get it there, Roberts said. Mrs. Roberts got into the conversation and proposed that the sailors should take what she called "a deck" of dope, she producing the stuff to demonstrate how to use the dope. The sailors were well supplied with the money they might need, for Nelson had $152, while Ethridge carried $132 in cash. The sailors paid $3 for the cocaine and then went away with it, though Mrs. Roberts sought to have them use the dope while they were in the house. Ed. Graves, also colored, was in the house, coming from the kitchen when there appeared to be a prospect of a sale. He demonstrated how the dope might be used, but he could not persuade the sailors to use the stuff in the house. They were not there for that purpose. They took it away and proceeded to the home of Commander Young, only to find that he was absent from the city. The next day the commander was found and he, after listening to the story of the sailors, directed them to report to the police department. This was done and the arrests followed.

Corrinne told with the same degree of seriousness that Billy Rice, the minstrel, would tell it, that she had seen Graves only two or three times in several months, that being when he called socially to play cards. She declared that it was Graves who produced the dope and said he carried the stuff in a penny matchbox. Roberts told something of the same story, but he contradicted his wife when he related that the money for the cocaine was passed directly to Graves, instead of going to him through the hands of Corinne, as she had told several times that it was passed along. There was no doubt as to whether narcotics had been sold at the Roberts home when the testimony was all heard. Judge Crandall handed out a fine of $50 with the attending cost of nearly as much more, which Corinne paid.

Otto Bentz, a Coast Guard chief petty officer, was fined $25 for failing to stop his auto when a trolley car was discharging and receiving passengers on Bank street this morning. Bentz was astonished when he drew the penalty for he claimed there were no passengers going to or from the car when he drove past.

CAR SOLD IN NORWICH CAUSES MISUNDERSTANDING

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9—Nathan Peck, 261 Williams street, made a complaint to the police this morning that the lock had been removed from the garage which he leases in the rear of his house, and that a Ford automobile, Connecticut registration, N-5885, had been placed in the building. Mr. Peck asked that the owner of the automobile be arrested. When the police instituted an investigation they ascertained that the automobile, which was registered in the name of Allen Williams, Norwich, had been sold Monday to Alexander Slodden, 247 Huntington street, and that he had received permission from the owner of the garage to store the auto there. When the complainant was acquainted with the facts in the case he withdrew his complaint.

The police of Worcester, Mass., today requested the New London police to maintain a lookout for Walter Knight, who ran away from Worcester a few days ago, accompanied by a companion, and who was known to have been in this city a day or two ago. Knight is described as being 16, about five feet, three inches in height, weighs about 125 pounds, medium complexion, dark brown hair, and had a brown sweater and black shoes. Relatives of the runaway received a letter from him Monday in which he stated that he and his companion intended shipping as members of the crew of a cattle ship that was to sail from this port this week. There are no such merchantmen clearing from this port, but the police saw to it that if the youths attempted to ship on any of the other craft clearing from New London or endeavored to enlist in the Coast Guard, they would be detained until an officer arrived at the wharf and took charge of them.

NEW LONDON, Nov. 9.—Earl Baldwin, 30, a resident of Guilford, employed as signalman by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, died at Lawrence-Memorial hospital last night from a fractured skull. Baldwin was struck by a westbound freight train yesterday morning when picking up loose wires beside the tracks at East Lyme. It is believed that he was struck when he heeded the approach of an east-bound train and did not observe the west-bound train approaching. His condition remained critical from the time he was admitted to the hospital.

The boy will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning and officials of the school have been summoned to appear against him.

Mrs. Paul Parakeski, of North Bank street, appeared at the police station at 8 o'clock this evening and in tears made complaint against her husband, charging him with intoxication and breach of the peace. She stated that she was employed daily and that upon her return from work not infrequently she found her husband home and drunk, as was the case this evening. She further stated that it was all she could do to provide for her children, as her husband persisted in using his earnings for drink. Patrolmen Frank Pallopens and Elwood Bailey were instructed to arrest Parcheskie, but when they went to his home his daughter informed the officers that her father had left a few minutes before. She said her father had but 20 cents and that he had probably gone to Montville, where he usually goes whenever he scents trouble.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Capitol Theater, Willimantic

As was expected, the rush for seats, yesterday, for the engagement of Anne Nichols' riot of laughter, Abie's Irish Rose, which comes to the Capitol theater for two nights and a matinee Thursday beginning Wednesday evening, Nov. 17th, fully justified the management believing capacity at each performance would be the order of things, and it is asked that we advise theatergoers and likely patrons, to secure their seats as early as possible, unless they wish to be disappointed.

Abie is one of those magnets of the stage which come but once in a decade or two, but in this particular instance, it happens to be the most phenomenal success in stage history for this delightful comedy of love and tolerance, delivering a much needed lesson beneath one thousand hearty laughs, has added more pages to theatrical history than any play ever produced since the advent of speaking stage and passing of the puppet show, a matter of some 500 years since.

The long runs and financial returns accredited to this wonder play of the age, which are now matters of record, have never before been equalled, and the precedents established, will no doubt remain as a standard for years to come.

There are plenty of good seats for all performances to be had at the box office, but as the demand is large, there is no telling how long they will remain there.

Broadway Theater

Armistice day will be a real celebration for those who visit the Broadway theater. The management has arranged a special five act program of Keith-Albee vaudeville featuring C. B. Maddock's famous comedy act Al's Here.

Al is the genial gentleman who presided over the now extinct domain bounded on the front by swinging doors, and on the side by a long mirror. Al in bygone days was a personage. It required a constitutional amendment to put him out of existence and a most expensive and intricate system to keep him from coming back. Al is that citizen of other days—a bartender.

The title role of Al's Here is played by Harry Bates. Mr. Bates brings long experience to the part but even without it, his performance would entitle him to recognition. Old timers say he is a real thing. Al's Here is in its second season. A vaudeville sketch that endures this long can have no question as to its merit.

College football games are all the rage nowadays. The next best thing to witnessing an actual football contest is to see a picturised version of one such as is shown in The Kick-Off, a feature photoplay on the same program. George Walsh is cast as the leading light. Wesley Ruggles produced and directed the picture.

Breed Theater

This is Sandy's last day in town! If you don't want to miss the picturization of Elenore Meherin's flapper, hurry now to the Breed theater. Sandy, as filmed and presented by William Fox, has pleased hundreds of people during its local presentation. Madge Bellamy is seen in the title role, with a cast including Harrison Ford, Barbara Bard, Leslie Fenton, Gloria Hope and David Torrence. Harry Beaumont directed the production.

The Unknown Soldier was the only war picture named among the ten leading classics of the screen for 1926 by Russell J. Birdwell, nationally known newspaperman and Hollywood representative of more than 700 daily newspapers in all sections of the United States.

"A lasting monument to the spirit of America's soldier dead," The Unknown Soldier is easily one of the outstanding of the forthcoming releases, Birdwell wrote early in 1926 after previewing scores of leading productions.

The Unknown Soldier, which will be shown at the Breed theater Thursday, was created by Renaud Hoffman, and is released by Producers' Distributing corporation. Charles Emmett Mack appears in the title role, with Marguerite De La Motte opposite him as the dramatic war bride. Other featured players include Ethel Wales, Henry B. Dathall, Claire MacDowell, Syd Crossley, George Cooper and Jean Devorska.

Palace.

Music—feasting—drinking. A wild oriental bacchanal. Two lovers about to be buried alive in the same room—amid gay music and sounds of laughter. Slowly a huge stone descends to shut them out forever. The bacchanalia feast continues more riotously. Suddenly the sky is lighted with flaming arrows. Three thousand beggars plunge into the river and swim toward the palace to the rescue—

Sketched in a few words, this scene of dramatic spectacle and thrills finds itself amplified on the screen in Raoul Walsh's new Paramount production, "The Lady of the Harem," at the Palace. This tremendous sequence represents a new record in directorial daring to get unusual and thrilling scenes.

"The Lady of the Harem" is a spectacle production of ancient Persia during the 11th and 12th centuries. It was adapted from James Elroy Flecker's stage play, "Hassan," by James T. O'Donohoe. Featured players include Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Greta Nissen and Louise Fazenda.

If you want to see a beautiful dog in action and at the same time enjoy one of the best melodramatic movie thrillers seen in these parts in some time, go to the Palace theatre where Sandow, described as "the world's greatest dog," is appearing in "Code of the Northwest." Sandow is a remarkable police dog who makes you forget that you are looking at a movie instead of seeing actual events in the lives of a group of men and women in the North Woods.

ARMISTICE DAY PLANS INCLUDE MILLS CLOSING

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 9.—Armistice day coming on Thursday, the stores will be closed in the afternoon as usual. Aspinook Bleachery, Textile Novelty Co., A. R. Burleson & Co. and Ninigret Co. plants will be closed all day. Ashland Cotton Co. closes at noon. Slater library will be open in the morning only. The public schools and St. Mary's parochial school will close at noon. The post office will close at noon. It is probable that the whistles will blow and bells be rung for two minutes at 11 o'clock, when business is to be suspended for that length of time, according to the governor's proclamation.

With the prospects of one of the best trapping seasons evident, as noted in the big Mt. Misery country, off in the little inhabited sections of the southeastern border of Griswold, Old Cluey Watson has returned from a summer visit to his old home in Somerset county, Maine. While the veteran woodsman was over here last Saturday to see about getting some name tags made for his new skunk and mink traps, he had the "misfortune" he says, to see the big airplane roaring over the town. A visit to the field opened the way and set the day, when the old man is booked for the big sensation of his life. Next Sunday he is going up in the air ship. He declared that he expected that all his years of following the trail, with lonely nights, for weeks at a time, passed in his wilderness camps in the great Maine woods, will seem pretty tame when he takes the hop-off for the skies.

Old Cluey admitted that he was a little skittish of the big machine, and didn't really want to go alone. So his friend, Deputy Sheriff John T. Dolan, who was planning to take a ride himself, being anxious that the old trapper should not back out, has agreed to go along as his fellow passenger. Old Cluey will see Attorney Dudkowski Saturday and make his will, leaving his dogs, guns and trapping outfit to Henry Wallace, and before starting will turn over the keys of his Mt. Misery camps to Fred Gilbert, then, "They are off!"

Early in October a letter received by a local hunter related to a worm affection which is proving fatal to the ruffled grouse of this section.

The next day the letter was published in these columns, with the request that any hunter bagging a ruffled grouse send the bird to Alfred O. Gross, Bowdoin college, Brunswick, Me. A few days ago Byron Sweet shot one of these birds off in the northern edge of the town. The young man detected the presence of internal worms. He promptly forwarded the bird to the address found in The Bulletin.

This week a courteous letter came to Mr. Sweet from the Maine professor, telling of receiving the infected grouse O. K. Some valuable information was also sent, with the issuance that this locality will be among those that will benefit by any future attempt to combat the disease.

A local man overboard a rowarking one of the marines that are guarding the mails, now days, if he should "quick 'em up" to a bandit get the drop on him. The marine replied, "That isn't in my orders!"

C. A. Spear, optometrist and optician of Norwich, Conn., will open a branch office in the new Anthony building, 86 Main street, Jewett City, Nov. 12. Office to be open Friday evenings only, from 7 p. m. to 9:30 p. m. and by appointment, for the examination of eyes and fitting of glasses.—adv.

The local Red Cross chapter roll call committee is making plans for this most important annual event. The roll call membership makes possible Red Cross relief work in any great disaster. In times of disaster, money is needed and needed immediately. To get relief work under way at once, the Red Cross appropriates funds from its treasury. The contributors of the people make possible a complete follow up and the permanent rehabilitation of the disaster sufferers. This work is carried on in accordance with one of the express provisions of the congressional charter granted to the organization. The American Red Cross knows neither race nor creed and is non political. Every American should be proud to have part in Red Cross work. In our town our public health nurse is backed by the local chapter, in connection with the Town and Metropolitan Co. The value of her work speaks for itself.

Faith chapter, O. E. S. expects to entertain Sachem chapter of Norwich with special ceremonies and refreshments next week Wednesday evening.

Miss S. K. Adams leaves today (Wednesday) for Worcester to attend the annual and last meeting of the woman's board of foreign missions.

Everett McCluggage expects to come home from Backus hospital Friday.

MARKETS AT A GLANCE

New York

Bonds steady, Japanese 6 1-2s at new high.

Foreign exchanges mixed, Italian lira and French francs react.

Cotton higher, unfavorable weather.

Sugar barely steady, Cuban buying.

Chicago

Wheat steady, better foreign demand.

Corn firm, small country offerings.

Cattle easy.

Hogs weak.

STOCK PRICES RISE

NEW YORK, Nov. 9—(AP)—Resumption of the upward movement in today's stock market encountered stiffer resistance, due to rather heavy profit-taking by traders who had purchased stocks "for a turn" and a renewal of bear selling in several specialties, with the result that final quotations disclosed considerable irregularity. Trading was on a somewhat broader scale, as shown by the fact that more than a score issues were elevated to new high levels for the year.

Bullish sentiment was created by the announcement that the U. S. treasury officials favored a credit of 12 1-2 per cent on 1926 income taxes, by the lowering of call money and commercial paper rates and by reports of unusually heavy inquiries for railroad equipment. The revision of stock exchange member loans, making last month's decrease in excess of $107,000,000 instead of only slightly more than $37,000,000 also was given a bullish construction on the theory that it indicated, as federal reserve figures had done, that stocks had passed from weak to strong hands.

Common stock of the U. S. Steel corporation, which is expected to report a large increase in October unfilled orders tomorrow noon, was again a market feature, touching 149 1-4 and then easing to 148, where it was up 1-2 a point net on the day.

Total transactions in this one issue approximated nearly 200,000 shares, or about one-eighth of the day's entire volume of business. General Motors sold as high as 15 13-4 and then fell back nearly 2 points, also closing fractionally higher on the day. Mack Trucks rallied nearly 5 points to 96 3-8 on urgent short covering which followed the publication of the quarterly report, showing $2.78 a share net earned on the common stock in that period.

Failure of the Chicago & Northwestern directors to raise the regular semi-annual dividend undoubtedly caused some speculative selling of the railroad shares. Chicago & Northwestern fell back over 3 points to 77 and Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Wabash, and several others registered net declines of a point or two. Rock Island 6 per cent. preferred touched a new 1926 high at 95.

National Tea jumped 7 points and Virginia Iron, Coal, Coke common and preferred 5 and 6 points, respectively, the turnover in each case being small. Among the new highs were Kennecott, Safety Cable, Shell Union Oil, Phillip Morris, Dupont (new stock), Eureka Vacuum and the Liggett & Myers issues. Public broke over 5 points to a new low at 36 and heaviness again developed in Warner Pictures A. On the other hand, Famous Players crossed 117 to a new high on the movement in response to reports of large current earnings.

The renewal rate on call money was lowered at 4 1-4 per cent. after holding steady at 4 1-2 for over a month. Funds were freely offered at the lower figure. Time money rates were unchanged, prime commercial paper was quoted on a flat 4 1-2 per cent. basis instead of 4 1-2 to 4 3-4.

Cotton, wheat and sugar prices showed practically no change on the day. Coffee futures sagged 20 to 25 points.

Demand sterling held firm around $4.84 3-8 but weakness developed in several of the continental exchanges. French francs broke over 10 points to around 3.17 1-2 cents, Italian lire dropped 7 points to around 4.15 cents and minor recessions took place in most of the other European rates.

BECKWITH BOY'S FUNERAL AT NIANTIC TUESDAY

NIANTIC, Conn., Nov. 8—Funeral services for Lester W. Beckwith were held this morning at his home on Luce avenue, Rev. Charles F. Eldredge officiating. The body was taken by automobile to Middleboro, Mass., for burial in the family plot.

The boy was accidentally shot about 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon by a 12-gauge gun in the hands of Frederick T. Odgers. The boys, with Michael Perrino, went to the vicinity of the Yale Engineering camp on a hunting trip. The Beckwith boy stood behind a tree and suddenly came out, directly in the path of the shot from the Odgers boy's gun. The Beckwith boy dropped in his tracks and died a few minutes later. At present the Odgers boy is under the doctor's care, being overcome by the tragedy. The Beckwith boy was working in the forenoon in the Roxbury quarry and asked his employer if he could take the afternoon off and go hunting with some companions. Hardly three hours elapsed from the time he quit work until his body was brought home by his companions.

Announcement was made that the bids for the construction of the Samuel Huntington school, Norwich Town, will be opened November 12th, at the superintendent's office.

Miss McCloud is one of the teachers with the longest term of service in the Norwich schools and for some time has been in poor health.

SUPERIOR COURT TRYING AUTOMOBILE SUIT BETWEEN JEWETT CITY MEN

Trial of the $4,500 damage suit of Joseph Sella, a pool room proprietor in Jewett City, against Mrs. Kate Takmon of that place for injuries Sella received when he was struck by the Takmon machine, when it was driven by Steve Takmon, son of the owner, took the day here Tuesday in the superior court before Judge Allyn L. Brown and a jury. The case had not been concluded when court adjourned for the day and it will be continued this (Wednesday) morning.

The jury chosen was as follows:

Harry W. Cardwell, Edmund A. Prentice, Norwich; Frank R. Ayer, Frank A. Krug, Preston; Henry B Park, Colchester; Clark H. Standish, Wilton H. Hoxie, Lebanon; Irving R. Main, North Stonington; Edward A. Bishop, Albert J. Grandy, Bozrah; Daniel Day, Sprague; Birdsey G. Palmer, Voluntown.

The accident happened in this city between 7 and 7:30 on the night of Jan. 6 at the corner of North Main street and Central avenue, north of the car barn, and according to the claims by the two sides and the evidence presented in court one of the questions to be decided by the jury will be whether Sella walked into the Takmon machine or whether he was run into by the car. After the man had been hit, the Takmon machine went across the street to its left and collided with a car driven by John Woodworth, who was proceeding towards his home in Jewett City.

Mr. Woodworth and his wife, who was in the car with him, were the first two witnesses called to the stand by the plaintiff's attorney. They testified that they saw the Takmon car strike Sella and then travel about 130 feet, hitting the Woodworth car which was then on the sidewalk on the southerly side of North Main street. Testimony was given that the speed of the Takmon car was about 40 miles per hour.

Edward Gomes, another occupant of the Woodworth car, also testified. Dr. Boris J. Sohn told of the injuries sustained by Sella and was followed by Steve Farber, who said he was walking with Sella when the man was hit. Farber testified that they were walking on the westerly side of North Main street, having come on that side from as far as the car barn. When they reached near the junction of the two streets, they started to cross from the westerly side of North Main street, to the easterly side where there is a sidewalk. Farber said he looked both ways, but saw nothing coming, and just as they stepped out onto the concrete the Takmon machine appeared, coming from Jewett City. Farber said he made a grab at Sella to pull him out of the way, but the man was hit by the machine and knocked down.

Sella, the plaintiff, told of his injuries and his hospital expenses which amounted to $21.60, besides which he had to engage a man to take care of his pool room as he was confined in the house two weeks by his injuries. Sella denied that he had been in trouble or lost employment because of drinking habits.

When the plaintiff rested, Steve Takmon, the defendant, was first called to the stand. He testified that he was bringing four young men to Norwich from Jewett City to attend the theatre and that he was driving about 20 miles an hour. On the way he passed Deputy Sheriff Dolan in his car and the deputy sheriff kept behind him all the way to Norwich. Takmon, who drives a public service car, said that the first he knew of any one being in the street at the junction of the two roads was by seeing a hand stick out. He pulled his car sharply to the left and felt something strike the handle of the right hand door. His right front tire blew out and he pulled the car back towards the right to keep away from the Woodworth machine but the car swung and the left rear mudguard hit the Woodworth machine.

Deputy Sheriff John T. Dolan of Jewett City testified that he was driving from Jewett City and followed the Takmon car after it passed him. He noted a speed of 27 miles an hour by his speedometer but coming around the Point Saloon corner the rate was 15 to 20 miles. Sheriff Dolan did not see the accident happen as the Takmon car was around a curve from him at the time, but he came up immediately afterwards. He said the Takmon car went 15 to 20 feet when it swung across the street. The deputy sheriff sent for the ambulance and the police said that, in his opinion, Sella had been drinking "white mule."

Frank Johnson testified that he was at the scene of accident immediately afterwars and gave Sella a cigarette which the man smoked sitting on the running board of the police patrol wagon. Johnson testified that Sella said to him, "I'm all right. I'm not hurt. It's my own fault."

William Rail of Jewett City, who was a passenger in the Takmon car, said they drove at a moderate speed, his idea of this being between 25 and 30 miles an hour. He felt the shock when the man was hit.

Officer Patrick S. Murphy of the Norwich police force who drove the police patrol testified that Sella acted as if he had been drinking and he heard the man say "It was my fault." Farber also showed that he had been drinking the witness said.

Sergeant Mathew J. Delaney of the Norwich police was the last on the stand before the court session adjourned. He told of going to the place of the accident in the patrol wagon from the Greeneville station, asked about what he saw in the street, the sergeant said there was a spot of blood about three feet off the concrete, with brake marks running from about that point for about 21 feet, showing that the machine had turned suddenly to the left and then had been turned towards the right. Sergeant Delaney said that Sella told him he walked into the machine. The witness said that Sella's breath smelled strongly of alcohol and he was sure that Sella was under the influence of liquor. Asked about the lights in the street, the sergeant said there was no reason why anyone could not see a man in the road.

JUDGE DIRECTS RECEIVER TO PAY CITY TAX

The receiver for the Uncas Paperboard company, Frank W. Browning, is directed to pay the city tax of $240 of 1926 on $10,000 of personal property assessed against the concern, according to a judgment given by Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court, before whom the matter was argued last week.

In his memorandum of decision, Judge Brown says:

In the argument of this question when counsel for the receiver and for the city were heard, the allegations of the receiver's petition, except paragraph 4, were admitted, as was the city's exhibit A, filed Nov. 6, 1926. The question of whether the $240 tax should be paid, therefore depends upon whether what the city did pursuant to Chapter 16 of the ordinances of the city of Norwich Revision of 1903, created a valid obligation against the receiver. This ordinance was adopted under the power granted the city by paragraph 19 of the charter, revision of 1877, and the steps required by the ordinances were completed with in this case, so that the question comes down to one of the construction and interpretation of the ordinance, and its effect.

Its vital provision in this connection is that, "the town list * * * shall be the rule of apportionment of taxes to individuals liable to be taxed in said city." That the city in this case adopted the town list made up as of Oct. 1, 1925, as to the item in question, and that such had been its unvaried practice in similar cases for many years was undisputed. But counsel for the receiver contended that the words of the ordinance above quoted do not warrant such a course.

"Rule" is defined as "a conclusive way prescribed for performing an operation," and "apportionment" as "the act of assigning a share or part." (Webster's dictionary,) In the light of these definitions the ordinance means that the town list shall be the conclusive way or means of determining the part of its total tax to be paid by each taxpayer, in the city. And so, in this instance, the town list of October 1, 1925, by virtue of the city's proceedings, determines that the receiver should be taxed for the item in question. Nor does the fact that meantime the receiver has sold the property, alter the situation, any more than it would as to a town tax laid on such an item where the property was sold after October 1, 1925, though before the tax was laid. The practical construction put upon the ordinance for many years past supports the conclusion above set forth.

The receiver is accordingly advised to pay this tax in the amount of $240 to the city of Norwich out of the funds of the receivership estate.

While in Norwich Mrs. Lord was the guest of her mother, Mrs. Agnes Smith of Broadway, also at the home of Capt. and Mrs. John E. Blackburn of Central avenue. Mrs. Lord returned home by automobile Monday morning accompanied by her brother Charles Smith, who is en route to Florida to look after his business interests there after passing the summer in Norwich with his mother. Mr. Smith will visit for a few days at his sister's home.

The length of the day has now shortened to ten hours, by contrast with the longest days in June, when the sun shone 15 hours, 19 minutes.

DECISIONS ON MOTIONS TO CITE IN CO-PLAINTIFF

In the suit of Maria Teresa Molinaro vs. Frank Ferry, all of Norwich, which is brought on a note for $3,800, where defendant moved to cite in Fortunato Molinaro as a co-plaintiff, Judge Allyn L. Brown of the superior court has handed down the following memorandum of decision:

"The defendant's motion as worded is denied, but in view of the allegations of the cross complaint, to which the court's attention has been directed upon the argument of this motion, it is apparent that Fortunato Molinaro should be made a party to the action.

"Therefore it is hereby ordered that the defendant proceed forthwith to cause Fortunato Molinaro to be summoned in as a party defendant," which is pursuant to certain statutes.

The same ruling is made in the suit of Maria Teresa Molinaro vs. I. Neiderman on the defendant's motion to cite in Fortunato Molinaro as a co-plaintiff.

In behalf of the members of the parish, Rev. Father Brennan was presented a gift of over $500 by the trustees of Sacred Heart church, John Mulligan, Thomas White and James McNally. Others in the party were P. T. Connell, chairman of the fund, Walter Moran, James Mara, Joseph Pfeiffer, also the officers of the Altar society, the president, Miss Bessie Callahan; vice president, Miss Elizabeth Lynch; secretary, Miss Mary White; treasurer, Miss Mary Burns.

A large delegation of members attended the November meeting of Home Chapter of the King's Daughters, Monday afternoon at the Johnson Home. Following the opening exercises of song, scripture reading and prayer, two new members were received into the chapter. Reports were submitted and approved. Mrs. Joseph Myers read her report of the King's Daughters' state convention held last week in New Haven. Mrs. Myers went in place of Mrs. Alvery Jarvis Baker, the first delegate for Home chapter, appointed at the October meeting by the leader, Mrs. William E. Manning, as Mrs. Baker was unable to attend.

The nominating committee appointed to choose officers for the coming year, comprises Mrs. Thomas Keene, Mrs. Robert Cochrane and Mrs. Edward Briggs. They are to report at the December meeting, at which time there will be a roll call of Home chapter.

The sewing society is to hold its next meeting Thursday, November 18th, at the home of Mrs. Neville Silcq on Rockwell street.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, through the thoughtful arrangement of the leader, Mrs. Manning a harvest festival pageant was put on by several of the member each number being accompanied by an explanatory song, Mrs. Howard Sterry was soloist and Mrs. John Olson, piano accompanist. The opening number was a solo, Just a Cottage Small, by Mrs. Sterry, who also sang as each one entered and marched about the room, passing out into the hallway. Those who took part in the pageant and what they represented were: America, Mrs. Charles Marsh dressed in white, with red, white and blue adornment, accompanying song America the Beautiful; Puritan Maiden, Mrs. Thomas Keene, dressed in homespun, with Puritan cap and kerchief, song, Pilgrims; Pomona, Mrs. Roswell J. P. Brown, dressed in white, with red trimmings and carrying a basket of fruit, song, In the Vineyard of the Lord; Harvest, Mrs. Louis Engler, dressed in white with yellow trimmings and carrying a variety of vegetables, song, Harvester. At this point while Mrs. Olson played a march, the several characters again entered and marched about the room. Next the Sheaf Gatherers, Mrs. Fred Rogers and Mrs. Adelbert Maynard wearing white with decoration of purple garlands and silver crosses, entered the room by separate door-ways and while Mrs. Sterry sang Bringing in the Sheaves, collected the gift socks which were distributed at the January meeting to accumulate money for Home chapter treasury. These when placed on the leaders table yielded $49.28, which with the collection for the day, amounted to about $59.

A rising vote of thanks was given Mrs. Sterry for her part in the entertaining programme. The meeting was brought to a close with the chapter motto.

It is pleasing to the many friends of Home chapter leader, Mrs. Manning that she received the honor of being elected county president of the Kings Daughters and Sons, at the recent convention in New Haven.

MILITARY HONORS TODAY FOR THE WORLD WAR DEAD

Preparations Completed For Armistice Day Observance at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery—At All Military Stations in the Country Living Brothers Will Pay Tribute to Comrades Who Lost Their Lives in Defense of Their Country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—While President Coolidge rode swiftly westward tonight to speak for all his countrymen their share in the high pride with which Missouri will honor the valor of her own World war dead tomorrow, preparations were completed in Washington for the Armistice day observance at the tomb of the unknown soldier in Arlington National cemetery.

It is the first time since the interment of the unknown in 1921 that the president has not gone in person to lay a wreath upon the tomb that gives the day its new significance in American hearts. No engagement but one of honor to the dead of the great war would have been permitted to interfere with the annual patriotic pilgrimage. And in the absence of the president and Mrs. Coolidge, a wreath from the White house still will be among those that will cover the simple resting place of this lonely warrior. It will be placed there for the president by Captain Leven C. Allen, aid smilitary aide.

Aside from the military honors to be paid the war dead by living comrades at all army posts or stations, there is no set formula for observance of the day. At Arlington, those who will may come to lay their tributes at the unknown's tomb and pause a moment to look over the rolling hills where white, gleaming new headstones of his known comrades who fell in France, march their orderly lines in this last parade of honorous dead. A half score of patriotic organizations have reserved time for such ceremonies at the tomb tomorrow, and a throng of other visitors will pass by during the day, any of whom will drop single flowers on the white stone that covers the unknown.

Across the way at Fort Meyer, the garrison ceremonies common to all army posts will be observed. From sunup to retreat the garrison flag will fly at half mast. Just at 11 o'clock, troopers and gunners who make up the command will be paraded at attention for a single minute of absolute, motionless silence in salute. Then the guns will crash out in solemn tribute to the hour eight years ago, when they were hushed for the first time in more than four years of warfare.

Across the width of the Potomac and the city of Washington beyond, another simple service of remembrance will be enacted at the tomb of Woodrow Wilson in the great cathedral looming slowly into being on the western heights. A group of those who style themselves just friends of the war president will gather to pay him honor.

At the capitol a new touch will be given when the colors rise at sunup over the chambers of the senate and the house. For the first time there will be companion flags on each staff, rippling just below Old Glory. They will be service flags of the World war, bearing the blue stars for all those who served and the gold stars of those who died for the flag in France.

FRENCH DECORTED GRAVES OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—French men and women decorated graves of American soldiers in France while Americans spent the French equivalent of America's decoration day at race tracks, Major General William M. Johnston, commander of the 31st division during the war, said today on his return from France aboard the liner Paris.

"On Nov. 1," General Johnston said, "about 3,000 French people went to the cemetery at Suresne, where there are 600 American soldiers buried, and placed flowers upon French and American graves. There were not more than 13 Americans in the crowd. I heard similar reports from other places in France where Americans are buried. It seems that most of the Americans were attending the races."

"When American graves are found decorated, nine out of ten times a Frenchman or Frenchwoman placed flowers on them. There never was a meaner slander than that which said the French mistreated the graves of American dead."

After nine months of inspecting cemeteries in France and Belgium, Major General Johnston said he could report them in splendid condition.

KANSAS CITY TO DEDICATE LIBERTY MEMORIAL TODAY

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 10.—(AP)—A giant limestone shaft, thrusting heavenward a huge bowl of perpetual fire, will be the gathering place of a mighty throng tomorrow, when the Liberty Memorial is dedicated to the memory of the city's heroic veterans—dead and living—of the World war.

A tribute from the humble and ...ric his the ode in stone that will be dedicated by President Calvin Coolidge, who, with Mrs. Coolidge and party, will arrive from the national capital on a special train tomorrow morning.

More than $7,000 persons contributed more than two million dollars to the construction of the memorial.

Atop Memorial Hill, opposite Union station, the shaft pierces the skies and commands a vista of the city and a portion of the Missouri valley. The buildings that flank the shaft will be used for a war museum, and a memorial hall for the American Legion.

A battery of French 75s, Missouri National Guard, will bark out a salute of 21 guns as the president and party emerge from the Union station on their arrival. It will be the second day in the history of the memorial that President Coolidge has had a part, for on Nov. 1, 1921, he was present as vice president when the site was dedicated.

The presidential party will be taken over a parade route through decorated streets to the Muehlebach hotel, where the president will rest until the dedication program begins at 10:30 a. m.

An address at the memorial by R. A. Long, president of the Liberty Memorial association, will precede that by Mr. Coolidge. The Armistice hour of 11 o'clock will be tolled by a bell that will be heard over the country, for its vibrant tones will be picked up by radio station WDAF, of the Kansas City Star, and broadcast. Joseph Dam-too, a disabled veteran, will toll the bell to usher in a moment of silent tribute.

The president's address will follow, also to be radio cast, and is expected to take a half hour. The ceremonies will close at noon.

GREETINGS FOR PRESIDENT EN ROUTE TO KANSAS CITY

ON BOARD PRESIDENT COOLIDGE'S SPECIAL TRAIN EN ROUTE TO KANSAS CITY, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The middle west gave the President and Mrs. Coolidge a friendly greeting today as they passed on their special train bound for Kansas City, Mo., where the president will deliver an Armistice day address.

Only occasional operating stops were made by the train but in each case groups of railroad men and citizens gathered about the observation car to extend a welcome. Although the route of the train had not been announced, many of the smaller stations had their crowds on hand to wave a greeting, while at different points along the way, school children were present with flags to shout a shrill greeting as the chief executive and first lady of the land passed.

The train, which left Washington late last night, ran almost immediately into cold weather and, this morning, found snow falling lightly. Apparently unmindful of the weather, however, Mr. Coolidge appeared without his overcoat with Mrs. Coolidge on the platform to acknowledge the greetings early today at Pittsburgh. Then in this forenoon during a brief stop at Dennison, Ohio, and again this afternoon at Columbus, Ohio. At Newark, Ohio, the train slowed down for another crowd.

RAZOR PRODUCED IN THE HALL-MILLS MURDER TRIAL

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 10.—(AP)—Patriotism of a Somerset county jury today decreed a recess in the Hall-Mills case until Friday after half a dozen witnesses had testified. There will be no session of the court tomorrow, Armistice day, the jury itself voting the holiday, and winning commendation from the court by its action.

The day also developed incidents not originating on the witness stand. A razor was unexpectedly projected into the court room picture by Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson and although it officially remained something of a mystery, it was understood on the state may set up a claim, that with this weapon, the throat of Mrs. Mills was cut after she had been shot to death.

Dr. Edward L. Smith, who was on the stand, when the razor found its way into record, although not in evidence, said that he thought the slashing Mrs. Mills' throat could have been done with a razor as a defense counsel held two pencils to represent "an old fashioned razor."

Prosecutor Simpson then handed the witness a razor and asked him to show how it could have been done. The razor was marked for identification, but was not offered in evidence. It was understood that it reached the prosecutor's hands from a detective who said he had been advised it was the razor with which Mrs. Mills' throat was cut.

TO CONTEST DISPOSITION OF GARDNER'S POINT

HARTFORD, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Two utilitarian projects for the disposition of Gardner's Point, jutting into Long Island sound, west of Groton Long Point, will come before the 1927 legislature, it was said today. A bill will be introduced to make the point a state park, rivalling it is hoped, the one at Hammonasset, while another bill will ask the state to make the place an aviation field.

New London people who expect further development of aerial transportation would like to see the point transformed into an aviation field, believing such an establishment would bring more air trade to their city than the present emergency landing field at the military camp ground at Niantic.

The property is entailed, which has prevented its sale to real estate promoters, and it would be necessary for the state to condemn it in order to carry out either project, it is said.

WINTERS MAINTAINS HIS INNOCENCE OF MURDER

WINDSOR, Vt., Nov. 10.—(AP)—John Winters, former convict, still stoutly maintained his innocence of the murder of Miss Cecilia Gullivan early Sunday morning after a grilling by state detectives and other officials for several hours this afternoon.

He was charged only with assault on Miss Bessie Pandjarvis who identified him yesterday as the man who entered her room at about the same time as the murder was committed. While some officials were questioning Winters, others were directing the search by 100 Boy Scouts who searched the grounds about the house Miss Gullivan occupied alone in an effort to find the weapon with which the woman was clubbed to death. The Scouts turned two iron window weights over to the authorities for further examination but otherwise their search was in vain.

J., for protection in liquor smuggling. The government seeks to return Kinder to New York to face charges of conspiracy to violate the prohibition law.

Ritz further testified that Kinder ha dtried to bribe him and other officials and that arrangements were being made to trap Kinder in bribery but Kinder found out Ritz was a customs man and refused to do business with customs agents.

The hearing was continued to November 17 and at its adjournment Kinder was arrested on another warrant charging violation of the prohibition laws here. His bonds of $10,000 in the New York state case were allowed to stand for the second charge also and he was released.

Ritz said that the evidence he offered today also had been presented to the federal grand jury in New York which indicted Kinder, whose boat "Eker" is alleged to have figured in Rum Row activities at various times.

60TH ANNUAL SESSION OF THE NATIONAL GRANGE

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 10.—(AP)—"Nullification and violation of constitutional amendments are akin to treason," Louis J. Taber of Columbus, Ohio, national master, declared in his address at the opening today of the 60th annual session of the National grange in city hall auditorium.

With reference to farm relief, National Master Taber said:

"Agricultural depression is a condition and not a theory. It will remain a burning question in American farm life until the causes which have created it are in part removed. We have seen labor enjoy five years of good wages. Transportation, finance, manufacturing and all major commercial activities have had five satisfactory years. The past year has seen public utilities and railroad stocks and bonds sold at prices almost never before reached.

"During this period agriculture taken as a whole has continued to languish. Farm population has decreased, in its relation to our total population. Mortgage indebtedness has increased, the number of farms sold at sheriff's sale has increased, and the purchasing power of the farmer's dollar during all this period has been fluctuating between 70 and 90 cents as compared with the dollar of the rest of the nation's population.

In July, 1925, a jury brought in a verdict of $1,314,241 for the plaintiff. The defendant failed to obtain a new trial and took exception to the supreme court.

Church Marriage of ...opold and Astrid

Several Persons Were Injured in Crush About the Cathedral in Brussels.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Princess Astrid of Sweden and Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium, united in marriage by a Roman Catholic ceremony in the Cathedral of St. Gudule this morning, tonight left on their honeymoon for a destination which has been kept strictly secret.

The heir to the Belgian throne and the daughter of the Vikings," whose love had found a way to overcome difficulties of political, religious and financial character, were the center of the greatest demonstration in Brussels since the Armistice day, eight years ago tomorrow.

Fully 200,000 persons lined the magnificent streets and avenues of Brussels and gathered in so great a crush about the cathedral that many women and children were injured. Several scores were taken to hospitals or treated for their injuries in nearby drug stores.

All Belgium has given its heart to the young princess, whose destiny but a few months ago appeared far removed from her entrance into one of the reigning houses of Europe. The fact the match was one of love and not for political reasons, had struck a responsive note in the hearts of the people and their enthusiasm could not be restrained. Although Astrid is a protestant, while Prince Leopold is a Roman Catholic, and although her family is not wealthy as royal fortunes go, the young Belgian prince had still insisted upon marrying the woman of his choice and his people today were eager to display enthusiasm at the love match.

The entire church ceremony, which began at 11:25 lasted forty minutes. When the archbishop asked "Do you take Leopold of Brabant for your husband" Princess Astrid answered clearly "yes" while Leopold in response to the similar questioned answer in a more husky fashion.

The entourage which drove in open carriages to and from the cathedral was made up on representatives of every royal family in Europe as well as the entire diplomatic body in Brussels. Ambassadors from all countries were garbed in gorgeous uniforms. Although it was a morning hour American Ambassador William Phillips was dressed in regulation evening clothes.

During the afternoon the newly wed couple were the center of an elaborate reception which lasted from three o'clock until five o'clock. The young princess, who is just 20, still smiled bravely, but her sigh of relief was very nearly audible as the reception came to an end.

DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH ASKS POPE NULLIFY HIS MARRIAGE

LONDON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The Westminster Gazette understands the duke of Marlborough has asked the pope to nullify his 1895 marriage with Consuel Vanderbilt, which ended in a divorce after 25 years and the birth of two children, so that he can embrace the Roman Catholic faith.

The duke's present wife, the former Gladys Marie Deacon, is the daughter of Edward Parker Deacon of Boston. He married her in Paris in 1921, a Presbyterian minister officiating and reading the church of England service, from which the word "obey" was omitted.

The Westminister quotes an unidentified Roman Catholic authority "who is in possession of the whole details," as saying:

"Our church does not want the duke unless there is really just cause. The whole matter for the present is held up. If the marriage with the duke is to be regularized it will be done privately by a priest. Before the duke can be received into the church the stain of his divorce will have to be wiped out and he will have to undergo a period of informal preparation and instruction. Nothing more can be done for a duke than for a tramp."

For some time past the duke of Marlborough has attended St. Aloysius' Roman Catholic church at Oxford.

LA PLATA, Md., Nov. 10.—(AP)—This little town, emerged slowly today from the numbness of grief which stunned it yesterday when without warning, a freakish wind, rain and hail storm, demolished its schoolhouse, killing or fatally injuring 16 children and injuring at least 23 others.

The death list stood tonight at 16, when Theresa Estelle Bean died in Washington. Scarcely a family among the 500 residents of the town was left untouched in the toll of casualties and no coherent story of the disaster had yet emerged from the dazed accounts of survivors.

Last Hope Gone For "Carbarn Bandits"

Will Be Electrocuted For Murder of Aged Watchman at Waltham.

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The last hope of the so-called "Carbarn Bandits" of escaping their sentences of electrocution for the murder of James H. Farneau during the Waltham carbarn holdup was blasted today by a double barrelled decision from the full bench of the supreme court. The court found there was no error in the denial of a new trial and that the executive council of the governor could not be forced to take action on a petition for respite of sentences.

John J. Devereaux, John J. McLaughlin and Edward J. Heinein, who were convicted of murdering the aged watchman after robbing the carbarn of $2,300, are under sentence of death on January 4, next. Originally sentenced to die in the week of August 8, they had been granted three respites that the courts might consider the motions of defense counsel.

ACCOUNTING BY NATIONAL FOREIGN TRADE COUNCIL

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The world has fallen short by more than $210,000,000 of the total of merchandise exports it would have added to international trade if it had not been for the World war, according to estimates contained in an "Armistice day accounting" issued by the National Foreign Trade council.

Due to the "economic dislocation" caused by the war, says the accounting, which is based on the foreign trade of 70 nations which do more than 90 per cent of the world's export trade, the world only succeeded last year in getting back to a 1913 basis, for the first time since the war.

To meet the setback caused by the war, it was said, world trade has now accelerated its pace and for the past three years the advance has been more than 10 per cent annually. Even at this rate, however, it will take 30 years to make up for what has been lost.

Even this country, which has gained a most 32 per cent in real exports since 1913, and has made the greatest gain of all nations in volume of trade acquired, is still more than $2,000,000,000 behind the export trade it would have had if the pre-war gain had been uninterrupted.

Europe now holds but 49 per cent of the world's export trade as against a pre-war 62 per cent. English speaking North America has risen by 40 per cent. Latin North America and the West Indies by 52 per cent and South America by five per cent.

Asia's increase is greatest of all, 53 1-2 per cent, Australia has expanded its exports by 45 1-2 per cent and Africa by 16 per cent.

RECOUNT OF VOTES IN PHILADELPHIA COMPLETED

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The canvass of the vote cast at the general election last week in Philadelphia was completed today and the totals for the city will be announced tomorrow.

Up to the time the count was finished no allegations of fraud were filed with the court which conducted the official canvass.

In the entire count of the 1,500 election divisions only two ballot boxes were opened, both at the original instance of the court when it was not satisfied with the figures on the return sheets.

One box was opened yesterday when it was found all democratic candidates had been given scores and all republican candidates an identical total.

The secon box was opened today when the total vote recorded exceeded the total of registered voters. A recount took off a few votes from the total of W. S. Vare, republican, candidate for United States senator, but did not change the total of William B. Wilson, his democratic opponent. The court after looking over the revised count said it was satisfied the new figures indicated nothing more than mistakes.

DECISION REVERSED IN KIP RHINELANDER SUIT

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Decision of an appeal for a new trial in the Leonard Kip Rhinelander suit for annulment of his marriage to Mrs. Alice Jones Rhinelander was reversed today by the appellate division of the state supreme court.

The decision will cover not only the appeal against Justice Morschauser's denial of a new trial, but will consider arguments for and against the payment by Rhinelander of $22,000 additional counsel fees asked for appeal services by counsel for his wife.

Isaac N. Mills, counsel for Rhinelander, today renewed his attack on the "exorbitance" of the fees demanded, but did not attack the $800 month-[illegible] granted.

ARMISTICE DAY

"Cease firing!" Over all the world
The swords were sheathed, the banners furled.
"The War is dead!" the nation sang;
Ten thousand thousand joy-bells rang!
Hosannas rose from every shore,
"Peace, peace is ours forevermore!"

Before the joyous shouting died
Dark war-clouds gathered far and wide.
Men could not swiftly sweep away
War's desolating tempest-sway;
That down the ancient wrathful years
Had held them captive to their fears.

In minds too young for enmity
There lies the way to make men free.
When children's friendships are world-wide
New ages will be glorified.
Let child love child, and wars will cease;
Disarm the hearts, for that is Peace.

—Ethel Blair Jordan.

Americans in Paris Are Disturbed Over Project of Having to Declare and Pay Income Tax on All Their Property in France and in the United States—Paris Branches of American Banks Are Subject to Taxes—All Americans Having Apartments in France Also Come Under the New Law.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—(AP)—American residents in Paris are in somewhat of a flutter over the prospect of having to declare and pay income tax on all their property not only in France but in the United States.

The managers of the Paris branches of American banks, of which five are of first importance, are subject to taxes as also the representatives of great companies such as agricultural machinery, radiators, electricity, petroleum and lubricating oils.

Many Americans of great wealth have houses or chateaux in France. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, James Hazen Hyde, Eugene Higgins, George Blumenthal, former Ambassador Wallace, Frederick Allen, Ogden Mills, Ralph Strassburger, Edward Tuck, A. Kingsley Macomber, are some of the most prominent.

L. G. JULIAN AGAIN DROPS OUT OF SIGHT

INIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 10.—(AP)—L. G. Julian of Evansville, whose appearances and disappearances have been somewhat mystifying the officials directing the grand jury investigation of charges that corrupt practices have been going on in Indiana politics, dropped out of sight again today. On this occasion, however, court officials were said to be with him and he was understood to be aiding in a search for evidence that will support the allegations of corruption.

Julian was examined by the grand jury this morning. This afternoon he left the city for an unknown destination. William H. Sheaffer and John Niblack, both deputy prosecutors, also departed, presumably with Julian. Further presumption was that the trio had gone out in seach of two safety deposit boxes concerning which Julian has admitted having knowledge. Documentary evidence of the allegedly corrupt deals is said to repose in the boxes.

Julian and D. C. Stephenson, former grand dragon of the Ku Klux Klan who is serving a life sentence for the murder of Madge Oberholtzer of Indianapolis, were formerly business partners.

In St. Albans, Vt., far to the north and on the edge of Lake Champlain, the mercury slid down 15 degrees during the forenoon.

PLEAS OF NOT GUILTY BY FALL AND DOHENY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Albert B. Fall, rancher-one-time senator and but recently secretary of the interior, came before the bar of justice today, and, with his old friend, Edward L. Doheny, California oil man, pleaded not guilty to a charge of having conspired to defraud the government in connection with Elk Hills, California, Naval oil reserve leases.

The proceedings, which lasted but a few minutes, were the initial steps in the criminal prosecution of a case, which had its inception in the sensational disclosures before the senate committee which in 1924 inquired into execution of Naval oil leases by Fall, as secretary in the interior, to Doheny and Harry F. Sinclair.

After the charge was read and both Fall and Doheny pleaded, counsel for the defense and government announced they were prepared to begin the trail November 22, the date previously set.

Carroll, host to her majesty. Business engagements in New York require her presence there, she explained, and so said good by to the queen during the morning.

With her went Miss May Birkhead, a press agent, and Miss Gabrielle Bloch, a secretary. The women were given a special car to take them to New York as guests of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, of which Colonel Carroll is general manager.

The Fuller party, which joined the entourage at Spokane on the westward journey as guests of Samuel Hill, whose Maryhill Museum was dedicated by Marie, became identified with the quarrel between Hill and Major Stanley Washburn, special aide to the queen.

MANILA, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Fillipino leaders were attempting tonight to find a method of counteracting Governor General Leonard Wood's order of today abolishing the Philippine board of control, but its unexpected announcement found them unprepared.

FIGHT RENEWED OVER NEWSPAPER POSTAL RATES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The proposal of Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, to modify the postal old flight over newspaper postal rates was renewed today before a special congressional committee with Postmaster General New endorsing the law, without revising the whole postal structure.

Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, served notice he would lead a fight at the approaching short session of congress to have the rates of newspapers and periodicals reduced to the 1920 scale.

Good business practice requires the lowering of rates, he argued, because the government has not obtained as much revenue as it would obtain with lower rates.

Postmaster General New did not agree with McKellar's contention, telling the committee that postal revenues for the last fiscal year had shown an increase of $40,228,325, over last year.

ANOTHER PICTURE TO HANG AT POLICE STATION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 10—Not to be outdone by the decline of the old-fashioned rogue's gallery, pictures of famous personages continue to be hung in the police headquarters corridor, only this time the pictures are of the venerable members of the police department of the days gone by. The latest acquisition to group pictures is Charles Brown, Fred Clark and Dwight Shurtleff, who were members of the Willimantic borough police department in 1893. Shurtleff is the only survivor of the trio. He now resides on a farm. The late George M. Harrington took as his chief aim upon being elected warden of the borough to create an efficient police department. After the officers had received uniforms he equipped them with night clubs which were more the size of an ash shillalah than the trim curb-knockers of today. To be so nicely equipped please the officers so much that they had their pictures taken and presented them in one frame to Warden Harrington. The picture came into the possession of Homer M. Harrington, one of Mr. Harrington who recently presented the picture to Chief of Police Thomas F. Grady. Mr. Harrington was elected the first mayor of the city of Willimantic in 1893. Another group picture of twelve photographs presented by Ex-Mayor Oscar J. Tanner in 1908 and arranged by John T. Collins adorns the lobby wall but two of the twelve in the group are still in active duty, Chief Grady and Lieutenant Edward P. Leahy. The others are, Henry W. Chamberlain, retired; Joseph Cartier, retired; John J. Manley, deceased; C. Victor Enander, deceased; Chief Edgar E. Richmond, retired; Chief Daniel J. Kilbourey, retired; Louis F. Paulhus, retired; Patrick Hurley, deceased and Hilary P. Weeks, retired.

WESTERLY TO OBSERVE ARMISTICE DAY WITH PARADE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Nov. 10.—For the observance of Armistice day in Westerly this year, manufacturing plants will close at noon and retail stores at 1 p. m. At 2 p. m. the usual street parade will be held, at which time it is expected that Capt. Charles Raymond Blake will pilot a Curtis aeroplane in stunt flight above with its owner, a Bristol, R. I., young man as passenger. Following the street parade, Rev. J. F. Cassigne, assistant pastor of the Immaculate Conception church, will deliver the address from the band stand in Wilcox park.

The street parade will start at 2 o'clock sharp from the corner of Elm and Broad streets. The line of march will be over Broad and West Broad streets to Moss street, then back over West Broad street to Dixon square, up High street and into Wilcox park through the High street entrance.

This year it is the turn of the Veterans of Foreign Wars to name the marshal of the day and to head the other ex-service men's organizations in the parade. Assisting Marshal John H. Farnsworth of the V. F. W. and his aides is a joint Armistice day committee consisting of three representatives from each of the three organizations which have World war veterans in their ranks.

The joint committee is made up of the following: Elvin B. Byers, James A. Keane and George W. Andrews, representing the Veterans of Foreign Wars; Edward W. Smith, Franklin C. Smith and James L. Ross, named by the American Legion, and William M. Clachrie, Henry Long and Clarence Bagshaw, representing the British and Colonial Great War Veterans' association.

A new flagpole, the gift of Mrs. Eva Casey, a member of the corps, will be dedicated to America's soldier dead, and a new flag will be flown to the breeze. The flag has been donated by Mrs. Sophia Church of Budlong. W. R. C. in memory of her niece, Elmira Elizabeth Bliven. Rev. Alton J. Verrill of East Providence will deliver a 15-minute address.

The fire bell of the Westerly fire department went on a rampage on Wednesday morning about 5:30 o'clock, when in close succession 25 strokes were sounded on the fire bell at a faster "tempo" than the alarm is usually sounded. Following disturbances in Pawcatuck, when a safe was cracked on Monday morning and more than a thousand dollars taken, and Pawcatuck Police Patrolman Adin R. Sheldon reported as fired upon by early Tuesday morning prowlers in the yard of the C. W. Campbell Grist mill, to the more timorous citizen came visions of a riot call. The 25 strokes were then followed by random numbers when Fire Chief Egger and Westerly firemen reported at the fire station to be ready for any emergency.

Numerous telephone calls were made to ascertain the cause and reports were received that no fires or other untoward happenings had taken place. Chief Egger stated that the fire bell had undoubtedly been sounded by crossed wires.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy Josephine Vevia, widow of Felix Vevia, was held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the home of her sister, Miss Mary Wilkinson, near Wyassup lake, North Stonington. Rev. E. Hoxie, hostess, at her home, 41 Elm street, when Hugh Porter, organist, was heard for the third time in Westerly by the Music club in recital on the large pipe organ. His rendition of varied program met with as pleasing a reception by the many Westerly music lovers present as on his previous appearances.

With about thirty members of immediate families present, Mrs. Minnie Burdick Smith of Pawcatuck was united in marriage last Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock with Edward Robbins Allen of Derby, Conn., at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Noyes, 63 High street, East Haven. The house was pleasingly decorated with oak leaves and chrysanthemums. Rev. Niles W. Heermans, rector of the Episcopal church, performed the ceremony, the couple being unattended. A reception and luncheon followed the wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen left New Haven on Saturday afternoon and arrived in Pawcatuck on Saturday evening, where a completely furnished home awaited them at 16 Lester avenue, and where they will be at home to their friends after Dec. 1. In Pawcatuck on Saturday night a wedding supper was served at which some fifteen relatives and friends gathered.

LESLIE B. BLISS ABLE TO COME FROM SCHENECTADY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, Nov. 10—Leslie B. Bliss and Mrs. Bliss are at the home of the former's parents on the East Main street highlands. The trip from their home in Schenectady, N. Y., was made by automobile. Miss Doris Bliss, their daughter, driving all the way. Mr. Bliss, a managing accountant for the F. T. Ley Co., has been very ill for weeks in a New York hospital. For a long time information given his family by the physicians held out no hope of his recovery. During a season's visit here at his father's home a few years ago he made many friends, as did his wife.

Telephone calls from all over this section at 9:30 Wednesday morning brought attention to the brilliant rainbow showing in the west, with a span of a quarter of the horizon. The weather in the borough at that hour was clear.

Chicken pie supper, Lisbon town hall, Fri. 6 p. m. 75.—Adv.

Telephone calls from all over this section ports an unusual occurrence which the Mass. Ornithological section of agricultural department has printed in its monthly bulletin. An observer has a relative who goes to a brook near his house and rings a bell to call the trout up, when he feeds them with bread crumbs. The trout have learned to come at the sound of the bell. Last summer a song sparrow which had a nest in a bush near the brook came regularly when the bell was rung and picked up crumbs that were thrown on the ground for her.

The November meeting of the Baptist Missionary society was held at the home of Mrs. Emma Raney, Tuesday afternoon. Considering the rainy weather, the attendance was good. Mrs. A. M. Brown presided. It was decided to ask the members to bring small gifts to the next meeting for Christmas distribution in the south. Mrs. Brown gave a financial report of the Mother and Daughter banquet, held in October. The program a continuation of the subject, "Moslem Women", was in charge of Mrs. John Harris. At the conclusing of the program, tea and wafers were served by Mrs. Raney.

Today, Armistice day, Jewett City can at least hang out its flags, and be thankful and thoughtful enough to cease all operations at eleven o'clock for two minutes, when the whistles will blow and bells will ring. Business will be suspended all day in some places, and half a day in others. Both banks are to be closed all day. It may be notice that the Textile Novelty Co. whistle will not blow, but the reason is because the plant closed down Wednesday night, and not enough steam is up to blow the whistle.

Fred Bryant who was stricken with a shock while at work in Aspinook Bleachery Tuesday, was in a serious condition Wednesday night.

Mrs. Earl S. Hiscox took a trip Sunday to her girlhood home, near Bailey's Ravine and picked in a place she used to know, a good sized bouquet of fringed gentians in handsome bloom, the record for Nov. 7th.

Judging from what the observant citizen heard about town Wednesday, all roads will lead to Norwich today (Thursday).

Hawks are reported numerous in the outlying districts this fall, and right on to their job. One farmer said the turkeys that have escaped them until now, could perch upon a pretty short roost. Now and then Mr. Hawk gets his, as will be seen on trips into the surrounding farming districts. Here and there hanging to a wood shed door, or suspended from a handy tree limb near the chicken coop, is to be seen one of the wary marauders, that got more buck shot than he could carry away. In Griswold, the Coopers, Red-tailed, sharp shinned and ben hawk, are most common. All these are generally locally classed as hen-hawks, and the only good one is a dead one. Any effort to secure their eggs at nesting time, generally goes by default, as their nests are invariably built in some inaccessible crag or at the tip top of the tallest half-dead tree, where lineman's climbers are the only means by which the long smooth pole can be shinned. Once, a Jewett City boy, who died in Montville a few years ago, was lowered down the perpendicular face of the great ledge in Benjamin's woods, across the Quinebaug from the present Aspinook, so that, by bracing against the overhang, he could reach the nest of a pair of red-tailed hawks, built in the top of a thick hemlock, that grew straight up 85 feet from the level of the swamp on the northern boundary of the ledge. The parent birds made it lively for the climber, although pelted with sticks and small stones by the two boys above. "Walt," got four beautiful eggs from the nest, dull white, streaked with cinnamon brown.

That fall, W. C. Bliven, a then local hubite, and a crack shot, dropped the male bird as he passed that way looking for gray squirrels. The bird was in full feather and handsome indeed. He was mounted and presented the local Agassiz society.

ARMISTICE DAY, 1926

November 11, 1918, was a day of clamor — a day of boisterous rejoicing for the finish of the struggle in Europe. Each succeeding anniversary has brought a quieter celebration. The same thankfulness for a world at peace prevails, but there is no clamor, instead a truer, deeper reverence for the courage displayed by our young men — those who died and those who came back finer citizens.

DANIELSON

FORMER DANIELSON BOY IN CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 10.—Myron O. Witter, owner and publisher of the Brawley, Cal., News, and son of Mr. and Mrs. David A. Witter of this place, has been elected a member of the California legislature from the 78th district of that state—a district that is made up of towns and cities in the Imperial valley, down near the Mexican border. This is pleasant news to all the people who knew Mr. Witter in his youthful days here in Danielson, the community in which he learned the rudiments of the printer's trade, an occupation that eventually led, years ago, to his becoming the owner and publisher of a newspaper of his own.

Mr. Witter has prospered in California and is now one of the best known and most substantial citizens of the Imperial valley. He did not seek the office to which he has just been elected, rather the office sought him. He is a republican. An outstanding feature of his campaign, which had the generous support of various publications of cities and towns of the region, had to do with development of irrigation facilities for the Imperial valley, which must have plenty of water, brought in from long distances, to assure its prosperity and its future.

At present a canal that brings water from the Luna district swings down into Mexico and then back into the United States. Mr. Witter advocates a new system of delivery over a route entirely within the United States and will work to that end during his period of legislative service.

Killingly's night school is to open at the high school this evening. This announcement was made Wednesday by Supt. William E. Parker of Killingly's schools. There will be classes for all grades below high school, but it has been decided that this year there will be no classes taught in the commercial branches, sewing or cooking.

The subjects taught will be reading and writing of English, speaking of English, duties of citizenship, spelling and arithmetic.

The school will be continued for 75 nights and sessions will be held four nights a week—Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The sessions are to be from 7:30 to 9:30. Notice to this effect has been distributed in various manufacturing plants in town.

On Friday of this week the annual Red Cross roll call will be undertaken in Danielson. This involves the seeking of the renewal of membership and the obtaining of new and additional names for the roll. Representatives of Danielson chapter will canvass the business section and make house to house calls in carrying out the work to be done here. An effort will be made to reach everyone, but if for any reason a person is overlooked who would like to be enrolled, this may be accomplished by visiting the treasurer of the chapter, Cashier F. E. Storer at the Windham County National bank.

Half of all the funds accruing from the roll call will be retained in Danielson to meet necessary needs such as claim the attention of the Red Cross. The other half will go to Red Cross headquarters in Washington and be available, with other money from all parts of the country in relieving distress in great emergencies, such as the one that recently wrought such ruin in Miami and other Florida cities. Since the World war Danielson has expressed its gratitude for the work of the Red Cross everywhere by registering in the annual roll call. The effort this year is to have a greater enrolment than ever in this community.

In the schools of Killingly today—Armistice day—the end of fighting overseas will be ceremoniously observed. At the direction of Supt. W. E. Parker, who has addressed a communication to the various schools of the town all work in the schools will cease at two minutes before 11 o'clock this morning and there will be perfect quiet until the hour of eleven strikes. The significance of the occasion will have previously been explained to the pupils by the teachers.

During the last period of today's school hours a suitable observance of Armistice day will be carried out, the programs planned by the teachers and carried out by the pupils.

The union religious services being conducted by Dr. Milton G. Rees, D. D., of Rochester, N. Y., continue to attract the attention of many of the people of Danielson. Dr. Rees is a cultured, forceful speaker with an appeal to the young and old.

The musical part of these services includes a large chorus choir and a fine orchestra. These are both conducted by Mrs. Rees, who is very well liked by the young people who are in the choir.

This week an organization meeting was held when representatives of various churches formed themselves into groups to carry on the numerous phases of these union services, which will continue for three weeks. In this campaign of prayer an effort is being made to get large numbers of people to pray at least 15 minutes each day.

In an address on Conquest, Dr. Rees said that the will to conquer and the help of Jesus Christ were absolutely essential to the virtuous life of Christian character.

At the Nazerene church an afternoon this week Dr. Rees conducted a Bible reading class, this class endeavoring to discover some of the gems of Scripture which have been forgotten in the rush of modern life.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock, Dr. Rees will speak to a special meeting for women and on Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock at a special meeting for children. Both these meetings are to be held in the Nazerene church.

A suggestion heard from Legion men Wednesday afternoon was that Danielson might register something of its interest in Armistice day if whistles on manufacturing plants and bells on churches and elsewhere were sounded at 11 a. m. today. It would in some measure recall the perfect turmoil of noise that attended the original Armistice day celebration on Nov. 11, 1918.

Wednesday afternoon the body of Mrs. Mary Anna Shumway, 86, who died Monday in Chicago, was buried in Westfield cemetery, Rev. Leonard Richards of St. Alban's church conducting the committal service. Mrs. Shumway was the widow of Dr. Thomas D. Shumway, a dentist who for many years was located in Plymouth, Mass. He was a brother of the late Judge Milton A. Shumway, who for a number of years was a supreme court justice of the state of Connecticut, and practically all of his life a resident of Danielson. Mrs. Shumway leaves one daughter, Mrs. A. B. Lord of Chicago. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements here.

Mrs. Abby Maria Bartlett, widow of Leonard Bartlett, died during Tuesday night at her home in East Killingly after a long illness and at the age of 83, having passed her last birthday on Tuesday of this week. Mrs. Bartlett, the widow of Leonard Bartlett, was born in Preston, Conn., Nov. 9, 1843, a daughter of Russell and Josephine Phinn Fitch. She had been a resident of East Killingly for many years. She leaves a step-daughter, Mrs. Mary Bartlett and a grandson, Leonard Bartlett, both of East Killingly. There also is a niece, resident in Tiverton, R. I.

Stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while at her work in the mill of Davis and Brown at East Killingly Wednesday afternoon, Mrs. Jennie B. Darling was assisted to her home nearby and died within half an hour. Dr. George M. Burroughs, medical examiner, viewed the body and determined the cause of death. Mrs. Darling's sudden death was a particular shock to her relatives and friends because of the fact that her husband, William A. Darling, died only a week ago last Saturday.

Mrs. Darling was a native of Putnam, a daughter of Joseph and Ellen Allen Munyon and was born on Christmas day, 64 years ago. She had lived in East Killingly for many years. Mrs. Darling leaves her daughter, Mrs. Lily Moran, a grand-daughter, Miss Ada Moran and a sister, Mrs. Louise Kaspen, all of East Killingly.

Mrs. William Henry Shippee, resident on Westfield avenue, was struck and knocked down by a motorcycle ridden by Lyman Alden Geer of Killingly Center, but now staying in Danielson, at about 5:30 Wednesday evening and suffered a fracture of the left wrist. The impact of the collision threw Mrs. Shippee, a woman of advanced years, to the pavement. She was assisted into the home of her daughter, Mrs. Meddie Harold nearby, given attention by Dr. George M. Burroughs and later taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam. Apparently Mrs. Shippee suffered no other serious injury than that to her wrist. Mrs. Shippee was endeavoring to get out of the way of an approaching automobile when she was struck by the motorcycle.

Manager F. J. Sheridan announced that the dance pavilion at Wildwood park has been closed for the season.

Mrs. Theodore Fulton remains critically ill at her home on Academy street.

Killingly grange is to elect its officers when a meeting of the organization is held next Monday evening.

Chief A. P. Woodward of the fire department announces that a new fire alarm box is installed—No. 12—at the corner of Williams and Maple street and in working order.

Possibly as many as a score of Danielson people will see the Brown-Harvard football game at Cambridge on Saturday. They have the precious tickets.

Today, Armistice day, the postoffice will close at 12:30 for the day. There will be but one delivery by city carriers. The rural route will be covered as usual. Mails will be despatched as on any ordinary day.

A very general display of flags is anticipated in Danielson today, as a tribute to those who served in the World war.

Work on the overhead highway across the tracks of the New Haven road in the town of Plainfield is nearing completion and the new route will be ready for use in the near future.

More than an inch of rain fell in the driving storm that lashed this territory from early Tuesday afternoon to the small hours of Wednesday morning. It is one of the heavy downpours of the year.

A bi-monthly meeting of the Goodyear Woman's club was held with Mrs. Jesse B. Child.

Release from business at noon today will permit of a large number of Danielson people motoring to Norwich to view the Armistice day parade.

Wednesday the body of William H. Williams, who died Sunday in Westminister, was taken from that place to Norwich for services and burial. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Rev. Charles A. Downs' subject at the Goodyear church service last Sunday morning was Christian Transformation, the text chosen being II Cor. 3: 18. As a special number the choir sang Sometime We'll Understand, Miss May Longbottom, the organist, was assisted by Miss Irene Cobb, violinist, and Joseph Greene, trombone.

LADIES!

Don't wave your hair daily—or even every week. Here's a way to keep it wavy for days at a time. BEFORE you use your iron, or curlers, DAMPEN the hair with DANDERINE. Just a few DROPS on comb or towel. Your locks will then behave for a MONTH! Of course, you know what Danderine does to dandruff; dissolves every speck, within five minutes of rubbing into the scalp. But as a wave-preserver on the hair itself, Danderine is a JOY. The best dressing in the world because it doesn't show. Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

HOLY FAMILY PUPILS HEAR AUTHORITY ON THE DRAMA

The pupils of Holy Family Academy, Baltic, were given an intellectual and most informing treat Saturday evening when Edward Brown, a graduate of Holy Cross college, Worcester, lectured on the Drama. Mr. Brown, who is a former instructor of Latin and French in Weaver high school, Hartford, clearly illustrated the history of the drama, from its incipient stage among the ancients up to the contrast with present conditions. Portraying elemental instincts in dramatic expression, he proceeded through broad outlines to bring his hearers to Medieval Times. The work of the Catholic church in preserving drama, art, and sculpture during the so-called "Dark Ages" was stressed and convincingly featured. How the drama expresses life was developed in an interesting manner. False ideas too concerning the dance, drawn from its present status, were corrected and his hearers were given an adequate knowledge of its beauty from its origin in worship.

Delicacy of touch, balanced by a sense of humor characterizes Mr. Brown's scholarly lecture. The young ladies and the faculty look forward with pleasure to Mr. Brown's next visit and address.

PUTNAM

TEAMS NAMED FOR RED CROSS DRIVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 10—The annual Roll Call for the Putnam chapter of the Red Cross, which means a canvass of the city for the collection of funds for one of the most meritorious of public charities will begin on Friday of the week.

The advantage and desirability, and a necessity of having a Red Cross Nurse located in Putnam needs no argument. Mrs. Torrey, who has filled this position for the past year, has demonstrated her fitness for the place. In order to continue the Red Cross service, it is necessary to have funds. The collection of money and the securing of pledges will be in charge of the following committees:

Ward One—Mrs. Ernest C. Morse, captain and Mrs. George Baker, Mrs. Leonard Mellor, Mrs. Hattie Bowen, Mrs. George Rawley, Mrs. Howard Bradford, Mrs. Michael Keefe, Miss Marjorie Strahan, Miss Marjory Bradford and Miss Waaniakie.

Ward Two—Miss Jennie Willis, captain, and Mrs. Edward Scott Duffey, Mrs. Leslie Steere, Mrs. Byron Howard, Mrs. Frank Tourtelotte, Miss Gertrude Ferry, Mrs. George Laird and Mrs. George Breaunseau.

East Putnam and Sawyer District—Mrs. Pitkin.

Putnam Heights—Mrs. Sachor.

The Red Cross receives no financial support from the government. It is a membership organization open to all. This is the opportunity extended to you to maintain through this organization the great humanitarian services which no other society can perform so efficiently. Putnam chapter conducts an active public health program which includes bedside nursing, prenatal instruction, maternity nursing and home hygiene classes. There is a loan department which supplies sick room equipment to families unable to buy the necessary articles.

At the November meeting of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R. state regent, Mrs. Charles H. Bissell of Southington and Vice Regent Miss Katherine A. Nettleton of Derby were the guests of honor. The regent made an address on the "Permanent Value of the D. A. R. Work." She stressed the securing and preserving of permanent historical records, Americanization of the foreign born and extention of education to the newer states. Miss Nettleton reported for the constitution hall committee and suggested that each chapter one chair at an expense of $150 for the proposed $2,000,000 building that is to be erected at Washington.

The opening exercises of the meeting took the form of a memorial to the late Sarah Bosworth Bradway, real daughter of the American Revolution and honorary member of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, who died at Eastford, October 29, in her 109th year. Mrs. Charles F. Franklin read a biography of Mrs. Bradway. Mrs. Charles M. Letters sang a solo. Mrs. J. Otis Fox read a chapter from the Bible. Mrs. Elvira A. Barber, regent of the local chapter read an appropriate message and Mrs. C. Dwight Sharpe offered prayer.

Despite the inclement weather of last night there was a large attendance at the meeting of the Parent-Teachers association which was held at the high school auditorium. The speaker of the evening, Senator Alice Patterson Merritt of Hartford was introduced by Miss Katherine Byrne. Mrs. Merritt has an unusually fine stage presence and made an interesting and forceful talk on her subject, "The Modern Sacrifice." The musical program for the evening was furnished by Miss Alice Stevens who sang several soprano solos and Miss Eleanor Irving, a young violinist.

The Putnam retail stores will not close on Armistice day. Willis E. Carroll, chairman of the Merchants committee of the chamber of commerce, after a canvas of the merchants, authorized the statement that the prevailing sentiment was in favor of keeping the stores open, that all of the banks and the postoffice will be open and that there has been no celebration of the day planned here.

A year ago on Armistice day the Memorial bridge was dedicated with elaborate exercises and thousands of visitors were in the city and all of the stores were closed all day.

Gustave T. Bochman, secretary of the Connecticut Temperance union will speak in the chapel of the Second Congregational church in this city on Friday, November 12, at 2:30 p. m. Mr Bochman is an interesting speaker, and is well worth hearing. The Thompson W. C. T. U members have been invited to attend in a body.

In spite of the stormy night, there was a large crowd at the whist and dance given under the auspices of the Putnam Lodge of Eagles in their hall on Providence. At whist, Miss Lillian Marion and Bill Rell won the first prizes and Mrs. Lydia Trahan and Armand Livernoche were awarded the consolation prizes.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Gallant have been entertaining their two daughters, Miss Lorena Gallant, nurse at the Willimantic Thread company and Miss Elsie Gallant, a student at the Hartford Law school.

F. W. Hinrichs has closed his summer home at Woodstock and has gone to his home in Brooklyn, N. Y.

Mrs. Halford Letters and little son, who have been visiting relatives at Kaiser, West Virginia have returned to their home here.

A man unable to identify himself was found wandering along the river bank and was taken into custody by Officer Paige, who took him to Dr. John J. Russell for examination. Dr. Russell ordered the man taken to the Norwich State hospital for observation. The man is about thirty years of age, five feet eight inches tall and weighs 140 pounds. At the hospital it has been reported that the man is mentally deficient. He is registered as Alfred Olson, but his identity is still in doubt.

The many friends of Edward P. Whittemore of Willimantic will be interested in knowing that he was not so badly hurt in an automobile accident near Willimantic as was at first thought. He will soon be able to leave St. Joseph's hospital where he was taken after the accident. Mr. Whittemore was formerly a resident of Putnam.

In the Putnam city court with Assistant Judge Archibald Macdonald, Jr., on the bench, Kenneth Light, age 17, was fined $2 and costs of $5 for driving a motorcycle without a license and also without a drivers license. Joseph Cordier and Luke Champagne, both charged with being intoxicated were sent to Brooklyn jail for thirty days.

William Aldrich and Emil Bronik, the two Putnam boys who were badly injured in an automobile accident at Bloomington, Ill., several weeks ago were discharged from the hospital at that place yesterday. These two young men left Putnam on Labor day in a second hand Ford car, bound for California, by easy stages, when they were near Bloomington, the car turned turtle and both boys were hurt and at first it was feared that young Aldrich suffered a fractured skull. The boys will visit some friends near Bloomington until they are a little stronger and will then continue on their way to Ocean Beach, San Diego, Cal., where they hope to find steady employment.

COVENTRY

Wednesday morning, Mrs. Maud Hill saw smoke coming from under their automobile which was standing in a shed near the house. On investigation she found the battery on fire, also the underside of the floor boards. The fire had not gained much headway and was soon put out. The insulation had worn off on the cable leading to the battery, causing a short circuit. Not only the car, but the shed and house, which are connected, might have been destroyed, had the fire not been discovered as it was.

At the annual meeting at the grange Thursday evening, Charles Christensen was elected master. Mrs. Glennn Miller lecturer, and Mrs. Grace Reed, secretary. Most of the other officers were re-elected.

The body of Mrs. Ella Clark, wife of Charles H. Clark who died at the home of her daughter in Bridgeport, was brought here Saturday. The funeral was held in the chapel and burial was in the North cemetery. Mrs. Clark is survived by her husband and four children.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth DeWolf was held Wednesday at 1:30 o'clock at her home near Vernon Center. Mrs. DeWolf was a sister of the late John N. Walbridge and lived in this town for a number of years before moving to Vernon. She is survived by her husband, Edward DeWolf and by two sisters.

At the Sunday morning service Charles Christensen united with the Congregational church by letter from the South Methodist church, South Manchester.

F. W. Chase and Mrs. Walter S. Haven were chosen delegates to the state conference of Congregational churches at Norwich.

Mr. Little has moved his saw mill from the George Dunn lot to the Maud Hill lot. The mill is all set up and ready for work as soon as the weather permits.

REGULATING THE PRIMARY

Many in the states of Pennsylvania and Illinois probably voted for the senators-elect in the respective states regardless of the fact that they did not approve of the huge expenditure of money in the primaries where the nominations were obtained. Because there is a system which tolerates and encourages just what was done to get a nomination didn't warrant them in supporting someone else who could have under proper provocation done the same thing.

Nevertheless it is a question what will be done in the senate about seating these men, Vare and Smith, for though there appears to be nothing seriously wrong with the election there is plenty of feeling against the primary, and because of that some senators feel called upon to act.

Hitherto it has been maintained that the judgment of the senate is to be exercised concerning the manner of election and not the manner of being nominated, but it is claimed by Senator Borah that the senate has the right to act under the 17th amendment to the Constitution dealing with the popular election of senators.

Whether the stand of the Idaho senator will result in efforts to get new legislation dealing with primary expenditures can be expected to be disclosed at the coming session of congress. At this short session there are matters which ought not to be sidetracked by efforts which may stir up much controversy and get nowhere.

Just now when the belief has been held that congress could not deal with primary elections, there are those who think otherwise. The confidence of Senator Borah may be such that it will result in providing another law for the supreme court to wrestle with. That is one way of finding out whether he is right in his contention or whether the supreme court decision in the Newberry case still holds good concerning these cases. The primary, for which so much was claimed, has developed trouble from unexpected directions.

A NEEDLESS COLLISION

While efforts are being made for greater safety in the highways, because of the increase in the traffic and the increase in the size and speed of vehicles, no little attention is bound to center upon that fatal collision in Providence between a motor bus and a trolley car.

This affair will be carefully sifted for the purpose of determining where the responsibility lies. There are those who maintain that the bus was traveling too fast, that it was running on the trolley tracks when it had a clear road on the right hand side of the street and that effort was not made quickly enough to avoid what was seen to be impending. The bus driver is even credited with saying that he waited too long before swinging his bus to the right.

With a clear road except for these two vehicles the car track being in the center with plenty of room at each side it would seem that there was no excuse for the occupancy of the trolley track by the bus. It was certain to the bus driver where the car could be expected to be, but for the motorman it was a decidedly different proposition. While the car could not be turned to one side it could be slowed down or stopped. While safe driving would not of necessity required if the motorman is reported to have done what he could in this direction and then had time to step back so that he would not receive fatal injuries.

With the bus holding to the trolley track and refraining from yielding at the right time, the driver was not giving due regard to the safety of those lives which were entrusted to him. If it was one of those cases of trying to hug the road, when the position of a trolley car is always clearly fixed, it is an illustration of that chance taking which contributes too often to serious accidents.

Had the highway been clogged by a wagon or a car on the right, which made the position of the bus driver more difficult, the situation would have been different, even though not necessarily justified, but witnesses claim such was not the case. The inquiries will determine where the trouble lies and action to follow should have its good effects in preventing other affairs of that kind.

BETTER APPEARANCES

Over in England much help in keeping the streets free from rubbish is gained from the school children, and excellent work of prevention is done through the same channels. The school children are not only taught that they should not scatter unsightly articles in the street, but when it is found that they do the school authorities suggest to the teacher what should be done in the way of punishment and the pupils of the school are given a talk concerning the things they should not do and the responsibilities they should bear.

There's no getting away from the fact that there's much that can be done through such school training, for many children are given to the habit of throwing anything they are through with, sticks, stones, papers, boxes and tins into the street, or gutter. With too many, it is the place where they are generally discarded regardless of appearances. There is no need of it and the school children can do much not only to prevent it as school children but by getting the idea so firmly planted in their minds that they will continue to respect it as they grow older.

But not all the street litter can be attributed to the children. They, may do their part but they are in many instances doing only what they see their elders do. They are quick to copy and many times it seems as if there is a leaning toward the bad habits rather than the good.

The street, or the gutter, is the quickest place at hand for disposing of various bits of rubbish. Having no further use for it the practice with too many is to toss it aside, no matter what it is or where it goes, and the accumulations of a day or a week are many.

There's much that the individual can do to end such unsightliness by refraining from contributing to it and by setting an example to the children that will cause them to do likewise. Dirty streets are bad advertisements, to say nothing of the expense which is involved in cleaning up the litter which many in the course of 24 hours make.

ARMISTICE DAY

Eight years ago today a halt was called in that terrible conflict which had been underway in Europe. An armistice became effective through an agreement of opposing sides and the war was over.

That step in behalf of the establishment of peace was hailed with great delight in all countries which had representatives among the allied forces. It terminated a war that never should have occurred and it meant the end of that great waste of human life which accompanied it.

Armistice day is bound to be one of the memorial days for those who gave up their lives in that great struggle, whether it was at the battlefront or from sickness, whether it was through accident or a chance shot during those perilous days. Each anniversary should recall the sacrifices that were made to crush those who disturbed the peace of the world.

Not long previous to the great war there was the firm belief that nothing of the kind could ever occur. That belief was quickly pushed to one side and yet as the result of the experiences and the losses there developed an even stronger demand for world wide peace. Peace hasn't prevailed everywhere since then and it doesn't today. There are certain internal and international differences which have broken out in far lesser degree, but the lessons of the World war are still sufficiently clear in mind to operate against anything that would lead to a return of war days.

Norwich today celebrates Armistice day. As the result of the excellent arrangements which have been made the celebration should be a pronounced success. Norwich will welcome its many visitors and it should turn out generously to participate or to furnish the audience.

PETITIONING FOR PARDON

Less than six years ago a New York manufacturer killed a New York detective. There isn't any attempt to deny the fact, and the manufacturer is now doing 10 to 20 years in prison, but a petition has been circulated for the purpose of bringing about the freedom of the man through the exercise of clemency on the part of the governor.

Much more sympathy might be displayed in connection with such an effort were the circumstances different. The claim is put forth that the man was insane when he committed the deed and the sentence was too severe. No attention seems to be given to the fact that another man's life was snuffed out or the fact that two alienists maintain now that the man is insane, that it would be an outrage to free him and that the lawyer interested in the petition maintains that he will always have his eccentricities and must be careful.

If the man was eccentric when he took another's life, is still eccentric and will never be, any better not much consideration is being shown for the protection of the public in endeavoring to obtain his liberty. There's no telling when such eccentricity, or insanity, will be the cause of other deaths. Even when it has been believed that there will be no recurrence of insanity, it has been the sad development that the freeing of such persons has simply provided the opportunity for exercising certain tendencies and more untimely deaths have followed.

Perhaps the governor of New York is ready to act upon such a petition, but from past experience there are too many cases which demonstrate the need for weighty consideration before signing such a petition just because it is presented. It is impossible to forget entirely that he has already taken life and that he is regarded as a dangerous man.

PARTED FOREVER

They glared at one another. For an instant Geraldine forgot that she had a lovely face and that reflected emotions left inexorable marks and one should ever smile—and Tom Nichols remembered nothing except that she deserved to be glared at.

At precisely 11:15 the night before they had told one another exactly what they thought of each other and had parted enthusiastically forever. At breakfast the next morning, the last day of the spring house party up at the lake, Tom had glowered through the meal and announced that business required his departure on the early 9 o'clock train instead of the 11 o'clock carrying the remainder of the guests. He had been sent to the station by his host in the touring car.

Upstairs over her breakfast tray Geraldine was explaining to her hostess that she simply had to get back on account of the dentist and could they get her down for the 9 o'clock train? She was regretfully dismissed via the flivver used for marketing, the driver taking the second road to the station in order to pick up some ordered eggs. And here in the parlor car they met face to face in opposite chairs. It was intolerable and it was for two hours.

As proof of the high esteem in which they formerly had regarded each other neither of the two mentally accused the other of having tagged. It was merely brutal bad luck.

"Tickets!" reminded the conductor over Geraldine's shoulder. Swinging about she saw that Tom was carefully putting back his billfold holding his own tickets. In the swift glance she noted again the firm straight line of his mouth.

"Stubborn!" she reminded herself scornfully and with a sudden move her bead bag careened to the floor, across the narrow aisle and against Tom's shoe. The conductor proceeded blandly with his clipping and punching and after an instant Tom retrieved the bag, handing it across without looking at her.

"I thank you," said Geraldine to the window shade and swung back.

Tom's chair remained as it was, facing the aisle and the top of Geraldine's head over the back of her chair. He could not, he told himself, spend the remainder of his life attempting to turn his back upon Geraldine. There was no reason why he should now that she meant absolutely nothing to him! He was surprised that Geraldine herself about dauncumb to such a juvenile method of expressing disdain. Glory! She had fully expressed it last night verbally!

She had removed her tight little hat and the light through her hair brought out the gold hidden beneath the brown. Tom frowned at the reflection and swung back to his window. It was pleasant scenery, and he should not miss it.

One cannot read facing the light and, picking up a magazine, Geraldine turned her chair sideways. Why should a man across the aisle who meant nothing to her hamper her movements if she chose to move? The range of the human eye is a large arc and out of one corner as she steadily read the same page she could see part of Tom's profile. A fine profile in a man meant so much. How was it possible that he could have turned out to be so unreasonable and jealous? He should have known had he trusted her in the slightest degree that she had meant nothing at all talking to long with Ted Brool. She was glad she had steadily refused to explain. Life was a cinch like that would be intolerable.

Her magazine dropped to her lap. There would be no life with Tom in that ducky new house they had tentatively picked out. He would buy neckties without asking her advice and would of course rush some other girl.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

More than 40 years of continuous service in the public utility field—dating back to the advent of electric light and power and the telephone—has been the experience of Samuel Insull of Chicago, who is 67 years old today. Mr. Insull, who heads practically all of the great utility corporations in Chicago and who has attained an international reputation in the electrical field, was born a poor boy. As an office boy, he began work for a London firm at five shilling a week. In 1880 he came to America and began his climb to fortune as private secretary to Thomas A. Edison. In 1892 he located in Chicago and a few years later organized a great corporation which today controls electric, gas and other utilities in nearly 600 communities, from New England on the east to Nebraska on the west, and Oklahoma and Texas on the south.

Stories That Recall Others

She Sends to Fight

A ten year-old girl went to the library the other day to get a book for her big sister. For a minute she studied for the name of the book she desired. Then a triumphant smile came to her face.

"It's 'She Bends to Fight,'" she announced with confidence.

The librarian had to tell the child that she did not have a book by that name. She suggested she call up her home and check up on the name of the book. This she did and came back with the information that she wanted "She Stoops to Conquer."

"It Does Me Good"

He stopped a friend on the street while in a happy mood. He had just witnessed a performance which he declared was becoming altogether too frequent of a taxi driver crowding in ahead of a string of cars waiting for the Shannon corner signal, but on this particular instance the line refused to give and the taxi failed to get by. "He had run up all the way from the square," said the fellow who had watched the performance, "and planned to nose out those who were ahead of him and waiting, made five cars abreast in Main street, at one point, but it didn't work. It does me good to see such fellows kept in their place. They are creating confusion and heading for an accident. It is a surprise to me the policeman on the corner doesn't put a stop to such action," and he went on down the street quite as happy as if he had won an election bet.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

Happy Jack Proves His Thrift

The headless are content to drift;
They never know the joy of thrift.
—Happy Jack.

Peter Rabbit had told Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel to follow him. Of course Happy Jack didn't need to be told not to let the others know what he was doing, so he was very sly and clever about it. He waited until Rusty the Fox Squirrel and Chatterer the Red Squirrel were so busy quarreling that they had no thought of anything else, and when Striped Chipmunk was so busy watching them in the hope that they would knock down another fat hickory nut for him, that he had eyes for nothing else. It was then that Happy Jack stole away. He found Peter waiting for him not far off. Away went Peter at once, lippety-lippety-lip, his funny little white tail bobbing up and down. Happy Jack kept his eyes on that white tail. As long as he could keep that in sight he would have no trouble in following him.

"Now," said Peter, stopping at last, "what do you think of this?"

"Now," said Peter, stopping at last, "what do you think of this?"

Happy Jack came hurrying up quite out of breath. There was a hickory tree quite loaded with nuts and on the ground were many that had already fallen. There were more than Happy Jack had seen anywhere that fall. "Peter!" he cried. "You're the best friend a fellow ever had. I'll never, never forget this. But don't tell anybody else about it," Peter grinned. "I've a great mind to get your Cousin Chatterer," said he.

"Don't, Peter, please don't," pleaded Happy Jack, and Peter was sure he saw tears in Happy Jack's eyes.

"I was only fooling," said Peter. "I wish that I could help you store these nuts, but I can't; so I guess you'll have to do it yourself."

"Aren't you going to take them down to your regular storehouse?" asked Peter.

"No," replied Happy Jack, "that is too far away. I'll move them over there later, but just now the thing is to get them while I can. If I have them picked up and hidden before any one else finds this tree, no one will ever know anything about them. So the first thing to do is to find a place in which to hide them." Happy Jack ran this way and ran that way, while Peter watched. At last he came back with a satisfied look on his face. Then he went to work.

My goodness, how he did work! Just as fast as he could run, back and forth, back and forth, Happy Jack scampered. It was surprising how fast he picked up those nuts. But it was some time before Peter found out what he was doing with them. He would disappear in an old hollow tree trunk on the ground. Peter watched him go in it and he thought right away that of course that was where Happy Jack was storing away the hickory nuts. But while Happy Jack was away, he got the surprise of his life. Not a single nut was there. No, sir, Happy Jack hadn't stored away a single nut there. Peter was sorely puzzled.

He kept out of sight behind a tree, where he could watch the entrance to that hollow tree trunk. Pretty soon back came Happy Jack with a great big hickory nut in his teeth. He disappeared in that hollow tree trunk. Presently he reappeared. He no longer had the hickory nut. As soon as he was out of sight, Peter went to look for that nut. He didn't find it. It was a great mystery! Peter didn't know what to make of it.

YOUR HEALTH

KEEP YOUR NOSE, THROAT AND EARS HEALTHY

Frank Albert Burton, M. D., San Diego, Cal.

Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

Your nose, throat and ears are among the most important organs of your body.

Through statistics of reliable clinics, it has been determined that over 80 per cent of the points of chronic infection of the whole body are in the head. Even headache, toxemia and stomach symptoms are often caused by some head infection. This shows the importance of keeping these organs in a healthy condition.

The nose prepares the air for its passage to the lungs; is necessary to the senses of smell, and taste; a cavity of drainage for the bone pockets (sinuses), and the tears, provides ventilation and drainage of the middle ears; is useful in swallowing and important in voice resonance; is defensive against harmful gases and vapors.

In the nose there is special provision for purifying, moistening and warming the inhaled air. Germs of tuberculosis are frequently found trapped in the front part of the nose.

To protect the ears when swimming, or from nose or throat infection, do not close either nostril in blowing the nose. To use handkerchief, simply hold in contact with the nose. A child, until wrongly taught by some adult, always blows its nose correctly.

Pain in the ear should have prompt, expert attention. Delay is dangerous. Chronic running ears, even in the absence of pain, should not be neglected.

Disease from the nose often extends to the ears. Stuffiness of the nostrils is bad for the ears. Both nostrils of the nose should be free and open. Deafness in most cases is preventable. Nose bleed is most often from an ulcer and is frequently due to careless picking of the nose.

Infection of the sinuses, as well as diseased tonsils, sometimes cause rheumatism, heart disease, and other serious diseases.

Serious conditions of the eye are often from infection of the bone pockets that drain into the nose. A mouth breather suffers from dryness, irritation, and often inflammation of the respiratory tract.

In diseases of the nose and sinuses the most common symptom is a feeling of fullness, or stuffiness in the nose. Disease of these sinuses is the cause of a large per cent of all headaches, often the cause of "dropping in the throat," and tendency to head colds.

Sinuses as well as tonsils sometimes contain the germs of diptheria or meningitis. In such a case the individual is known as a carrier. A carrier may spread disease yet be immune to it himself.

In the interest of your general health, and efficiency, remember that your nose, throat, and ear are among the most important organs of your body, and as such, are entitled to your serious consideration, protection and care.

Make the Most of Books

By James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D

Greatest Source of Refined Pleasure

To read good books in a proper manner adds to life a charm whose infinite variety age cannot wither nor custom stale. It was Huxley, the man of science, who said, "literature is the greatest of all sources of refined pleasure and one of the great uses of a liberal education is to enable us to enjoy that pleasure." The gain is immense when we have learned to like the things that are improving rather than those that merely entertain. The remark of Samuel Royce that whenever intellectual pleasures are in the ascendant civilization progresses, and whenever sensual pleasures predominate civilization is on the wane is as true of the individual as of the race. The nations which have made an impression on history have done so by intellectual vigor and not by brute force. It is ideas not arms that determine destinies and books are the vehicle of ideas.

When the City Union of the King's Daughters held its meeting Tuesday evening in the parlors of Trinity Methodist church, Mrs. Luther D. Packer, the leader, presiding, all but one of the eight circles in the union answered the roll call. Upwards of 60 attended the meeting, although the night was so stormy.

In the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. Harlow Graham, the devotional exercises were led by Rev. Albert E. Whitten, of Norwich Town M. E. church. The roll was called by the secretary, Mrs. Arthur E. Blackledge. The feature of the business session was the report of the annual convention at New Haven, given by the delegate, Mrs. Arad Manning. Mrs. Manning spoke particularly of the account of the international conventions at Los Angeles which was given at the state meeting by the state president, Miss Mary Woodruff of New Haven, whose circle entertained the state meeting.

During the evening there were several very pleasing songs by Mrs. Mabel C. Buckingham, with piano accompaniment by the church organist, Mrs. Olive R. Roberts. In the closing social hour cake and coffee were served by a committee in charge of Mrs. Alvin D. Lewis.

CONGRESSMAN FREEMAN WAS SPEAKER BEFORE ROTARIANS

Congressman Richard P. Freeman of New London was the guest of honor at a very largely attended meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. Congressman Freeman after the business session addressed the meeting principally on the appropriation for the deepening of the Thames river channel and what it meant to Norwich and Eastern Connecticut.

Congressman Freeman said in part: I wish to congratulate both the republican and democratic town committees of Norwich upon the splendid total of the votes cast. If we could only have grown up with the country and have actually known the whole cost of this experiment in democracy, we would better realize the privilege of "equal participation of all citizens of a state in the periodical selection of its officials." It is a privilege that men have laid down their lives to win. Yet this privilege is apparently esteemed so lightly in many parts of our country that almost half of the electorate are so careless and indifferent that they failed to vote on election day. Norwich was a notable exception, and I again congratulate the citizens of both parties in this enterprising community.

Speaking of means of transportation between Norwich and New London, which have been so much enlarged the past few years, Congressman Freeman went on to say that in one respect only have the means of communication been curtailed, and that is along the river path. Many of us can remember when Norwich was the starting point, or the the final destination of all shipping from or to these parts. New London was but a port of call. The New York boat left Norwich at 10 p. m., stopping at New London for additional freight and passengers before finally clearing for New York. This line was well known as "The Norwich Line." Later on Allyn's point was the starting place, and today New London has—because of its position at the mouth of the river—supplanted it. Now why has New London's position become the more favorable for shipping? Not because the channel has become of any less depth than it always has been. It is today the same as when in days gone by. It was amply adequate for the largest ships. But in the economy of the shipping trade, there is little demand for small freighters these days, and none is now being built and boats requiring fourteen feet or less are fast disappearing from the high seas. But with a deeper channel Norwich can hope to regain the shipping trade she formerly enjoyed. Norwich is awake to the real situation and when it was first called to my attention I secured an authorization for a survey of the channel from Allyn's point to Norwich. The United States district engineer reported favorably on the proposed project for the deepening of the river channel. The division engineer, Colonel Newcomber, reported adversely and then your committee headed by former Congressman Higgins and State Attorney Arthur M. Brown, in the hearings before the board of engineers at Washington, fully convinced the board of economical necessity of deepening the channel to Norwich to eighteen feet. I then, of course, had little trouble in convincing the committee on rivers and harbors of the economical desirability of appropriating three hundred and fifty thousand dollars for deepening the channel of our river to eighteen feet from Allyn's point to Norwich. This appropriation passed the house last May and comes up for final action in the senate on the 14th day of next December. You may be assured that I will do everything in my power to promote its passage, and who have the welfare of this fine old city at heart will be ever with me.

At the business session President E. A. Harris presided and Joseph Whelan was the song-leader. There were a number of musical features including a solo by Henry J. LaFontaine with James E. Roantree, Henry Shannon and Ben Palmer assisting in the chorus.

The plans for participation in the Armistice day parade were discussed. The club will have its own band and will march about 50 strong. The members will meet at the Norwich Paper Box Co. plant at 1:30 this (Thursday) afternoon.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

WOOD LOTS ON FARM CAN BE PROFITABLE

Almost every New London county farm has a crop which in many cases could yield much better profits if a little attention was given it. This crop is the farm wood lot which has always been with us as a true friend although much abused by ruthless treatment. The farm wood lot can be placed on the same production basis as the rest of the farm. By cutting only the poorer trees in your woods you will speed the rate of growth and increase the quality of growth, but at the same time use cordwood that would eventually rot, said County Agent Walter T. Clark Wednesday.

The following summaries taken from the 1925 farm census for New London county, show the basis on which succeeding data were drawn:

Number of farms, 3,884; total acreage in farms, 367,199; pastured woodland, acres, 41,858; total woodland acreage, 110,805. The figures may be translated into averages for a single farm: Acres per farm, 94; improved land per farm, 43; pastured woodland, 24; unpastured woodland, 16; total wooded area, 39; other land, 7.5.

Growth studies have shown that one-third of a cord per acre per year is a conservative estimate of what the average acre of woodland in this county is capable of producing; thus 39 acres will produce 13 cords of wood per farm yearly. At $9 a cord, approximate value of cord wood, delivered, the gross income would be $117.

By planting up the 7.5 acres of wasteland, and by improving the productivity of the wood lot by proper management through thinnings and the like, the output of the 46.5 acres of woodland should be from one-half to two-thirds of a cord per acre per year, a total of 23 2-10 cords which at $9 per cord would yield $208.80.

After a wood lot has been placed under management for some years the value of the growth is increased because the product is better fitted for lumber than for cordwood alone. The production of 250 board feet per acre per year should be expected of a managed wood lot in New London county. With local values of approximately $30 per thousand, a conservative price especially for the future, the results would be as follows: 46.5 acres multiplied by 250 board feet per acre and year would yield 11,600 board feet for the average farm; 11,600 valued at $30 per thousand gives a possible gross income of $339.

If the cordwood values were replaced by lumber values the annual growth would be worth $325,500. By replanting the idle acres of land now on farms the total could be brought up to $980,000 per year when the plantations became producing age.

The farm bureau with the aid of the state extension forester is now in a position to assist with wood lot problems.

A demonstration has been arranged to be held on the property owned by Ripley Parks, North Stonington, on Wednesday, Nov. 17, at 2 o'clock. The property is located on the Old Mystic road just out of North Stonington.

BELLS ARE TO RING FOR TRIBUTE PERIOD

There will be a cessation of all activities for two minutes at 11 o'clock this (Thursday) morning as a tribute to those who died during the World war. The church and school bells of Norwich will toll for those two minutes. Two strokes on the fire alarm will be rung by Chief Howard L. Stanton which will be the signal for the bells to toll.

The schools in all districts will close at noon and the Academy will be dismissed at the long recess at 11:45.

It will be a general afternoon holiday for the stores and banks and several manufacturing concerns will close for the afternoon.

APPLY PROJECT PLAN IN CONGREGATIONAL MISSIONS

A force of over fifty in foreign countries and more than one hundred in this country, will be marshalled by the Connecticut Congregational churches in 1927 under the new "project" plan of missionary work.

This plan, proposed by the national Congregational Commission on Missions, was approved Wednesday morning by the general conference of the Congregational churches of Connecticut, in 59th annual session at the United church.

All contributions under the new plan will apply to definite "projects" such as the salary of a particular missionary or native helper, or the upkeep of a school or hospital.

A list of "projects" for Connecticut was received here by Rev. Samuel T. Clifton of Winsted, chairman of the state committee on missions. The assembling of the "projects" is being done for all the states by a committee the chairman of which is Rev. Charles Emerson Burton, D. D., of New York, secretary of the National Congregational council.

Every church, Mr. Clifton said on Wednesday, is asked to take either whole or partial responsibility for a project. Some churches, it is expected, will take several "projects;" other churches whose contributions total less, will take a partial share in several "projects" rather than just one whole "project", so as to have a diversity of contacts and interests. "Projects" will also be assigned upon request to associations of churches and to individual givers.

The total cost of the projects which the church of Connecticut are asked to assume during 1927, is $424,709. This sum represents a ten per cent increase over last year's missionary giving which was $386,098. Churches which in the past have been supporting their own special representatives abroad or in this country, will continue to do so. The every member canvass for funds for 1927 will be taken by most churches beginning the first Sunday in December.

The projects in foreign countries, assigned to Connecticut, include missionaries or work at Johannesburg Inanda and Adams in South Africa; at Mt. Silinde, Rhodesia; at Uduvil in Ceylon; at Bombay, Madura, Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Satara, Sirur, Poona, Wai, Psaumalai and Dindigul in India; at Foochow, Tientsin, Tehsein, Paotingfu, Wenshan and Dionglch in China; at Tokyo, Osaka, Kyoto, Matsuyama and Doshisha university in Japan; at Kusiae in Micronesia; at Cagayan and Augur in the Philippine Islands; at Constantinople, Scutari, Aleppo, Mersifoun, Adana, Aintab and Talas in Turkey; at Athens and Salonica in Greece; at Beirut and Smyrna in Syria; at Sofia and Samakov in Bulgaria; at Prague in Czecho-Slovakia; at Madrid in Spain; at Guadalajara in Mexico.

The "projects" in this country include home missionaries in western and southern states and in eastern cities; schools for under-privileged groups; young and struggling colleges and students who need aid; the promotion of religious education in Sunday schools and colleges.

The conference came to a close Wednesday afternoon after holding morning and afternoon sessions and passing resolutions of appreciation of the entertainment that had been given them by the local church.

Wherever paraders today see the Breed theatre cameraman pointing at them, they can be sure they will be in the picture that will appear on the screen later. The Breed theatre management is sparing no expense to see that the finest pictures ever taken of a parade will be made on Armistice afternoon. J. F. Reed of New Haven has been employed to produce this picture and has been given instructions to photograph every organization that marches in the parade, also to photograph fully the ceremonies held at Chelsea parade. Sparks Set Excelsior on Fire

A telephone call at 6.45 Wednesday evening brought the squad wagon from the central fire station to 175 North Main street, the building occupied by the Mack service station and owned by Charles Blackburn. Burning soot from a long stove pipe had sent out sparks that landed in a box of excelsior on the outside of the building, making a blaze that threatened adjoining property.

The firemen used a can of chemical in quenching the fire in the box and the stove pipe.

HENS START STRONGLY IN EGG LAYING CONTEST

The laying contest at Storrs that opened on November 1 is off to the finest start in the history of laying competitions in Connecticut. There is a full entry of 140 pens of ten birds each, or a total of 1,400 pullets, all especially selected, and many especially bred for the particular business of laying eggs. Vigor and vitality have been big factors in picking these pullets that are expected to do their stuff through the long swing from November 1, 1926, to October 31, 1927, a period of 51 weeks.

During the first week of the contest, Massachusetts breeders as a whole got away to the best start. Globus Poultry Farm's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Attleboro, Mass., headed up the list with the splendid score of 50 eggs. Wallieston Farm's pen of the same breed from Westford, Mass., and White Leghorns entered by Ruehle's Sunnyside Farm from Pleasant Valley, New York, tied for second place with 49 eggs each. Two other pens of Leghorns owned by Mount Hope Farm from Cornwallis, Oregon, tied for third position with 48 eggs each. Harold G. Colt's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Hartford, Conn., and two pens of White Leghorns owned by Hall Brothers of Wallingford, Conn., and Charles Zefers of Erie, Pa., were all close fourths with tallies of 47 eggs each for the first week.

The total production for all pens was 2,410 eggs, or a yield of nearly 86 per cent. This sets up a new record for the opening week at Storrs. The best previous mark in the preceding fifteen years was in November, 1924, when the birds started off at a 81 per cent pace. Only one little incident served to mar the success of the opening week. One pullet, a Rhode Island Red by name, was so out of step as to spend her time brooding instead of laying. Reports on the progress of the Storrs contest will be broadcasted regularly each Monday at 8:10 p. m., Eastern Standard Time from Station WCAC.

BOY OF SEVEN GETS GRAY FOX WHILE OUT WITH HIS DOG

A few days ago Master Robert Sterry, Jr., aged seven, with his toy air rifle, accompanied by his pet collie, Daisy, and a little playmate, Robert Barber, started out to explore the woods at the rear of his home on Otrobando avenue. It was not long before the dog became excited over something and when the boy went to see what the disturbance was he found that the dog had scented a fox hole and had secured a good sized grey fox. After Daisy had given Renard a good shaking to death, Master Robert picked up the fox and carried it home. A member of the family took the head to Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook and received the five dollar bounty for the young sportsman.

Rev. Charles W. Brennan celebrated the daily parish mass, Wednesday morning at the Sacred Heart church, this being his last official duty as pastor of this church. About noon Rev. Father Brennan left by automobile for Waterbury where Bishop Nilan has appointed him pastor of the Blessed Sacrament church.

Norwich Town friends learned with sorrow of the death of James W. Stott, for the past 15 years a resident of Clinton, Mass. Mr. Stott was the youngest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Stott (Lavina Singleton) for many years esteemed residents of Norwich Town, the home situated on West Town street. He was born in Norwich Town, October 30, 1855. A number of years ago he was united in marriage with Alice Lillibridge, who passed away in March of the present year. Of their children two survive, Harry Stott of Carolina, R. I., and Miss Marjory Stott Barber, of Norwich. Besides several grandchildren, a brother, William Stott, of Norwich Town, and a sister, Mrs. Edward G. Rawson (Annie Stott) of Hartford, formerly of Norwich Town, also survive. Mr. Stott who had been absent from Norwich for many years, was supervisor of a large stable in Clinton. He was taken seriously ill and was removed to a Clinton hospital, Wednesday, November 3. His death from double pneumonia occurred the following Sunday, the 7th. The preceding Friday, his daughter, brother and sister, also a nephew, Ward Stott, visited him at the hospital. When a young man Mr. Stott worked in the finishing room at the Clinton Mills, now the Saxton mills, Norwich Town. He was kind-hearted, and of a cheery personality. He leaves a large circle of friends in Clinton, this being evidenced by the very large attendance at his funeral Wednesday afternoon, in the chapel at Woodlawn cemetery, Clinton, where burial took place. Relatives attending included Mr. and Mrs. William Stott and son, Edward, of Norwich Town, and Mrs. Edward G. Rawson, of Hartford.

Mrs. James Mara entertained at whist Tuesday evening at her home on Tanner avenue, the proceeds to go toward the Bazaar of Nations for the benefit of the Backus hospital. Although three tables were planned for, only eight players who had arranged to attend were present, because of the severe rain storm. Mrs. Elmer Flynn won first prize, a pair of bud vases. The second prize, a hand embroidered guest towel, was won by Mrs. William A. Murphy. Dainty fruit baskets were the favors. At the close of play, Mrs. Mara served sandwiches, cake, coffee and candy. Later those present listened in on the radio, concluding a most enjoyable evening.

Theodore Sterry, violinist, who is located in Middletown, where he is filling an engagement in a theatre orchestra was a recent visitor at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Sterry, of Otrobando avenue.

Miss Annie Dee, who has made many friends while the efficient housekeeper at the rectory for Rev. Charles W. Brennan, is to be housekeeper in Father Brennan's new parish at Waterbury.

Connecticut College

The convocation hour at Connecticut college passed very delightfully Tuesday afternoon in a lecture recital given by Miss Margaret Deneke, choirmaster of Lady Margaret Hall, Oxford, England. In spite of rain and wind outside a large audience of people from the college and the city was gathered in the college gymnasium at four o'clock to hear Miss Deneke's discussion of "Dance Forms," with its well chosen and beautifully executed pianoforte illustrations.

Miss Deneke has left her duties at Lady Margaret Hall, the oldest women's college in Oxford university to come this year to the United States in order that she may add to the endowment of that institution by the lecture recitals that she gives. She is a pianist of ability, trained by Eugenie Schumann, youngest daughter of the great composer Robert Schumann, and to her technical skill she adds a wide and sympathetic understanding of the field of music.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Appealing to the republicans of Maine to go to the polls Nov. 8, Senator Curtis of Kansas, republican floor leader, declared in a statement today that the election of a senator from Maine to succeed the late Bert M. Fernald might decide the control of the senate in the new congress.

"Legislation of national importance in this congress also will depend upon the result," Senator Curtis said. "There never has been a time in recent years when it meant so much to the country as a whole that Maine should send another republican senator to Washington."

Colds—whether in the head or any part of the body—are quickly overcome by urging the liver to action and keeping the bowels free of poison. Take Cascarets to-night and you will wake up with a clear head and no doubt you will wonder what became of your cold. Cascarets work while you sleep; they cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the constipated waste matter and poison from the bowels.

Remember the quickest way to get rid of colds is one or two Cascarets at night to cleanse the system. Get a 10-cent box at any drug store. Don't forget the children. They relish this Candy Cathartic and it is often all that is needed to drive a cold from their little systems.

ENDURED AGONY FROM BRUISES AND STRAIN

Hurt in bad fall, young woman makes quick recovery

A young woman at Bushnell's Basin, Monroe County, New York, fell and was badly bruised and strained.

"I suffered agony," she writes, "but I used Sloan's Liniment and it relieved the pain right away. Now I don't feel it at all."

What is the secret of the almost magical powers of this remarkable remedy?

Simply the fact that Sloan's doesn't merely deaden the nerves so that you don't feel the pain. It really drives out the pain by helping the conditions that are causing it.

"BEAT BULKELEY," SLOGAN OF STUDENTS AT ACADEMY BEFORE ANNUAL CLASSIC

With the climax of the Academy football season coming on Saturday, the annual clash with Bulkeley, the undergraduate body as well as the team is keyed to a high pitch with but one definite goal in sight. This goal is to beat Bulkeley and every student at the institution is heart and soul with the team. To stimulate and inspire their gridiron warriors to supreme efforts each member of the student body is wearing a conspicuous badge on which appears the words "Beat Bulkeley" and attached is a miniature football. Rallies are being held and the cheering section is expected to be in full voice for the game.

The stands for the game have been moved and arrangements are being made to handle one of the largest crowds in the football history of the school.

Coach Brigham is tapering his team off in fine shape and yesterday afternoon the team looked well in practice. The afternoon was spent in running back punts and perfecting the aerial attack and also considerable time was spent on defensive plays. Bulkeley is expected to make much use of the aerial game and a defense has been worked out that should be able to cope with anything that Bulkeley has to offer. The backfield used in practice Wednesday was Williams, Vitilina, Brewer and Labonski and on the ends Hussey and Green. Schwartz was at center with Fidell and Golomb in the guard positions and Kahn and Fox as tackles. The injured players are fast rounding into shape and it will be possible to use every man in Saturday's game. Just what lineup Coach Brigham will use to star the game with is uncertain. His two sets of backs are functioning well and showed good speed in the early practice Wednesday.

Today there will be only a short practice and on Friday the work will consist mostly of signal practice and dummy scrimmage.

A survey of the records of Academy-Bulkeley scores during the past 21 years in games played since 1904 with two exceptions, namely 1906 and 1918 shows that out of 35 games played during that time 14 have been victories for the Academy, 18 for Bulkeley and 3 have ended in tie scores.

The Academy held the upper hand for a considerable period from 1904 to 1910, when Bulkeley lost ten games in succession, the first six of which were shutouts in succession and in the first eight Bulkeley scored but 3 points, those in the first game between the schools in 1908, while the locals rolled up the imposing total of 183 points in the same eight contests. Bulkeley ended the string of defeats by winning 6 to 0 in the first game of 1910.

The 1911 games were exciting, both resulting in tie scores. In the first game of the season Bulkeley, to all intents had been declared the winner by an 11 to 5 score but Norwich protested because of a decision with the result that weeks later, the news came that a letter, asking his opinion, had been forwarded to the late Walter Camp, who was the leading football authority at that time, and he sustained the Norwich protest so that the score of the game was officially declared as 11 to 11. The second game of the year was a scoreless tie.

The Whaling City representatives took the upper hand in 1911 and held it until 1915, when the Academy took both games. The teams then went along fairly even, first one team winning and then the other until 1921 when the Academy won the last time from Bulkeley by a 7 to 0 score in the second game between the rivals played at the local campus. The teams had battled furiously through three quarters and most of the fourth of this game, and neither had scored and a scoreless tie seemed the ultimate result when all of a sudden things happened in swift fashion. The ball had been in midfield throughout the majority of this last quarter with both sides exchanging possession. The Academy had been forced to kick from their own 30 yard line and Brown's punt came sailing down the field and in some way Lyons, Bulkeley quarterback, slipped in the rather muddy footing and the ball fell from his hands and rolled to the goal line where Bill Semple, Academy left end fell on it on Bulkeley's three yard line. Capt. Reed then took it over and Brown kicked the goal making the final score 7 to 0.

Try as they might, the Academy has been forced to submit to some rather humiliating defeats and since that time to the present Norwich has never registered a gridiron victory over their ancient rivals, Bulkeley. Last year's game was close 13 to 12.

Local supporters feel that the time is ripe to break this 6 year record and nothing less than a victory will satisfy the followers of the Academy.

CONVICT HERO WAS FORMER NORWICH BALL PLAYER

C. W. "Tex" Latimer, a "lifer" at the Ohio state penitentiary, who has figured prominently in press reports as the hero of the prison breaking episode in Columbus, O., was a catcher for the Norwich team in the old Connecticut league back in 1905. Latimer by his heroic defense of the daughter of Warden Thomas while the prisoners were on a rampage, may have won himself a pardon.

Latimer came to the Norwich team from Newark in the spring of 1905 and played out the season here. He was at one time a catcher for the Baltimore American league team and later for the Brooklyn Nationals. He was familiarly known to Norwich baseball fans as "Cliff" or "Slats" Latimer.

HORNSBY DENIES HE WILL GO TO GIANTS

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Denying rumors that he would be traded to the New York Giants because of friction known to have existed between him and President Sam Breadon of the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals, Manager Rogers Hornsby said today he would rather play in St. Louis than any other city.

"The question of Breadon and me conferring on our terms for next year is our private business," he said, "I can only say that I would rather play in St. Louis than in any other city in the country.

"There are certain things about the ball club that I want to discuss with Breadon. I have invested heavily in the club. I am the second largest stockholder. Breadon is the only man who owns more stock in the Cardinals than I do. Naturally, being interested financially to such an extent, I am interested in protecting my investment."

Hornsby has never signed a manager's contract. His player's contract expired this year. Although he has made no public statement, it is known that he will ask Breadon for a free hand in managing the Cardinals without interference from Branch Rickey, former manager and now vice president of the club, whose activities among the players Hornsby is known to have resented.

Breadon, who is in Bradentown, Fla., said over the telephone today that he would confer with Hornsby when he returned to St. Louis early in December and he was confident "everything will be ironed out."

YALE HAS LAST HARD PRACTICE FOR PRINCETON

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The next to the last practice for the Yale varsity, before leaving for Princeton to engage the Tiger Saturday in the first of Yale's "big three" contests, was given over entirely to signal drill. The team lined up with Scott and Fishwick at the ends; Richards and Benton at tackles; Sturhahn and Webster, guards; Harvey, center; Bunnell, quarterback; and Holabird, Falling and Wadsworth, backs. Goodwine and Cox were also in the back field for a time, while Ryan, who has been on the injured list, got into the line.

The second team, scrimmaging against the scrubs, was unable to make a touchdown, being held for downs a yard from the goal line. The seconds lined up with Collins and Coleman, ends; Quarrier and Flaherty, tackles; Hickok and Wortham, guards; Charlesworth, center; Swift, quarterback; Garvey, Foote and Brown, backs. During the scrimmage Decker and Brandenburg also were used in the backfield and Kell at guard.

The final home workout for the varsity before the Princeton game will be witnessed tomorrow afternoon by the assembled undergraduates. The team will go to Princeton Friday morning and practice that afternoon in the Palmer stadium.

AL KEANE TO HEAD ROLLER POLO LEAGUE

HARTFORD, Nov. 10.—(AP)—The American Roller Polo league, was formally organized at a meeting in this city tonight with five clubs as members. Meriden, New Haven, Waterbury, Westfield, and Holyoke, are the members. The league season will open November 24 and will continue for 20 weeks. Albert W. Keane, of this city, was elected president.

The Waterbury franchise was awarded to Jack Grinold, an experienced roller polo promoter, who has secured the old armory on Phoenix avenue in the Brass city as his home floor. The New Haven franchise is held by William C. Marooney, with games to be played in the Arena. The Holyoke arena company holds and will operate the Holyoke club, R. C. Ives, a Meriden business man, will operate in that city while the Westfield club, owned by Harry Starkie and Hugh J. Rorty, of this city, will play in the Community building at that city.

STRANDED PLAYERS TO SUE LEAGUE FOR SALARY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Claiming they have been stranded here by failure of the team's backers to pay them for two weeks, gridiron stars recruited from southern universities to represent Newark in the American Professional Football league today announced they had retained Dudley Field Malone as attorney to sue the league for salary and expenses.

The players, including Doug Wycoff, former backfield ace of the Georgia Tech team, insist that a clause in their contracts stipulates that return expenses to their homes be paid in the event of disbandment.

Newark withdrew from the league a few days ago as a result of poor attendance at three successive games.

INTEREST IN YALE-HARVARD GAME IS DIMINISHING

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 10.—(AP)—A diminishing interest in the annual football classic between Harvard and Yale was seen today in the announcement by the Harvard Athletic association that it had been able to fill all applications so far from Harvard men and that it expected to have 1500 tickets available next week for like distribution.

An announcement which will be mailed with tickets at the end of the week waives the "personal occupancy" rule, except for tickets in the cheering section, for this year only. While permitting ticket holders to transfer the pasteboards, it warns against violation of the rule against speculation.

EIGHTY GAMES IN PRO HOCKEY LEAGUE

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—An 80-game schedule opening here Thanksgiving night with a game between the Boston Tigers and the Springfield club was announced tonight by President Charles C. Clapp of the Canadian-American Professional Hockey league. The league includes Boston, Providence, New Haven, Springfield and Quebec.

The schedule runs to March 18 and calls for 16 home matches for each club. The league champions will play a title series with the Canadian Professional league titleholders and both leagues will stage playoffs with the western and prairie leagues.

Tommy Hueston, New York, defeated Pasquale Nanalle, Baltimore, in the other afternoon match, 125 to 99.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

(By the Associated Press)

The mystic number "13" figures prominently in the coming Army-Notre Dame clash. The 13th meeting of the potential national champions will be held on Nov. 13th with Charlie Born, crack Cadet end, sporting the figure 13 on the back of his jersey. In three of the annual games to date, 13 has represented one team's score.

NEW YORK, November 10—

Knute Rockne, rival of Gil Dobie as an apostle of gloom, simply can't see where his Notre Dame flock has a chance against Army. "Listen," Knute said to Biff Jones, Army coach, last Saturday, "keep your eye on me during the game. When I believe you have scored enough touchdowns, I'll hold up my hand. We can't afford to spoil this series!"

A $50,000 pitcher from the sandlots is the acquisition Wilbert Robinson of the Brooklyn Nationals believes he obtained today in Norman Plitt, formerly of Kenosha, Wis. Plitt, on the suspended list for jumping a former Robin contract, has been reinstated by Baseball Commissioner Landis.

Returning from a brief vacation in Bermuda today, Gene will swing into action next week. But his title will be safe. Gene is merely going to toss off a few gentle jabs, behind the footlights in the inevitable theatrical tour that awaits each newly crowned hero of the resined battlefield.

Harold "Red" Grange just can't seem to keep free from reports of entangling alliances. Today he rises to deny that he is engaged to Mary McAllister, the movie actress who starred with him in the movies. Grange said: "I get engaged to somebody every once in a while without having anything to say about it. I know Miss McAllister very well but as far as getting engaged is concerned I haven't even a prospect."

"Lighthouse" Harry Wilson, ace of the Army backfield, and Mike Wilson, Lafayette's gallopiag sophomore, who are making a family affair of the race for high point scoring honors in the east with Harry six points in the lead so far, are due to stack individual talents against each other next season. As an added feature of the slated meeting of Lafayette and Army in 1927, Cadet Wilson probably will be captain of his team and Lafayette may have the prestige of a 1926 season without defeat.

SEVERING OF RELATIONS BY HARVARD AND PRINCETON BREAKS UP "BIG THREE"

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 10.—(AP)—All athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard universities were broken off today, Dr. Charles W. Kennedy, chairman of the board of athletic control, announced.

Princeton was willing, Dr. Kennedy said, to finish such events that were on the present schedule, but he deemed it "inadvisable."

The action was taken this afternoon at a meeting of the board at which was present President John Grier Hibben in the capacity of ex-officio member. Dr. Hibben announced the severance, with his approval.

Dr. Kennedy intimated that the climax was capped by the receipt this morning of a copy of resolutions adopted by the Harvard board.

The last paragraph of a letter to William J. Bingham, chairman of the board of athletic control of Harvard read as follows:

"I may also add that Princeton, so far as she is concerned, would never accept the implications of the athletic policy recently adopted by the Harvard committee on regulation of athletic sports as set forth in their resolutions of October 14, which I receive this morning."

Dr. Kennedy declined to make known the provisions of the resolutions.

Trouble between the universities began brewing last spring, when Harvard suggested cutting Princeton from the football schedule in favor of Michigan.

Ill feeling in existence since then was brought to a head Saturday, when throngs which attended the Harvard-Princeton game in Cambridge were greeted with a special issue of the Lampoon, Harvard undergraduate publication. The edition was devoted to jeers and insults at Princeton.

"At a meeting of the Princeton board of athletic control, held this afternoon, the board voted unanimously to sever athletic relations with Harvard in all sports. We have been forced to the conviction that it is at present impossible to expect in athletic competition with Harvard that spirit of cordial good will, between the undergraduate bodies of the two universities, which should characterize college sports. Unless athletic contests between colleges grow out of and reproduce a feeling of friendly rivalry and mutual respect, there can be no valid reason for their continuance. Competition carried on in atmosphere of suspicion and ill will of necessity falls short of all desirable objectives of intercollegiate sports.

"Under these circumstances we prefer to discontinue competition with Harvard altogether. Should you wish, we will, of course, complete such engagements as may have been scheduled between us for the present academic year. We should regard these contests as inadvisable. But we will be glad to discuss the matter with you should you so desire."

YALE REGRETS PRINCETON'S BREAK WITH HARVARD

Harold F. Woodcock, general manager of the Yale Athletic association, said that the rupture was most regrettable from Yale's standpoint, because it upset the triple agreement executed several years ago. He had thought, he said, the differences between the two universities had been patched up last month when Harvard agreed to play Princeton again next year on the gridiron.

"Yale will regret deeply any interruption of the athletic relations that have been habitual under the triple agreement," was the comment of George H. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the Yale Athletic association.

"Yale's own immediate athletic relations, both Harvard and with Princeton, have never been closer or more cordial than at present," he added, "and no change in these relations has at any time been considered by the Yale board of athletic control."

Bonds between Yale and Princeton were strengthened last month by an agreement between Tad Jones and Bill Roper, head coaches at the two universities respectively, which put an end to "scouting" by members of the coaching staffs before the Yale-Princeton game. Harvard was not included in the agreement and at the time it was unofficially stated at Cambridge that the Crimson would not be a party to such an agreement.

The accord, reached at a meeting here October 6, by the chairmen of athletics at Yale, Harvard and Princeton, at which time Harvard's proposal to substitute the University of Michigan for Princeton on its football schedule for 1927 was abandoned, was looked upon as a distinct move in binding the "Big Three" more closely together. At that time it was understood that Princeton and Harvard were near the breaking point and that Yale acted as peacemaker in order to continue the "Big Three."

It was pointed out here that this agreement constituted the first official recognition of Princeton by Harvard officials where it had been maintained that the Yale game was the only fixed contest on the Crimson football schedule. Harvard players had been awarded no insignia for playing against Princeton and in some games with the Tigers, Harvard players have refused to wear numbers on their backs, contending that Yale alone merited that distinction.

BINGHAM HAS RECEIVED NO OFFICIAL NOTICE

BOSTON, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Announcement from Princeton that all athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard have been broken by Princeton authorities came as a complete surprise to William J. Bingham, director of athletics at Harvard.

"I have received no word of any such break from Princeton," he told the Associated Press over the telephone from his home in Wellesley tonight, "and of course until I receive definite word from Dr. Kennedy that he has made such an announcement I can say nothing beyond repeating the assertion that this is the first news to me of the matter."

THE "BIG THREE" IS A THING OF HISTORY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—"The Big Three"—Harvard, Princeton and Yale—for four decades dominant in historic athletic rivalry in the country, is shattered by Princeton's decisive action today.

Not only in football, but in baseball, track and minor sports have the annual competitions of the classic triumvirate out-rivalled that of all institutions—at least in the eastern half of the country—in color, interest and background created by years of interschool rivalry. The grouping had its inception in some of the earliest athletic contests ever played between American colleges.

In football the action of Princeton in breaking off all athletic relations with Harvard today brought to a close a series that began in 1895.

For almost a dozen years previous to that date Harvard had met Yale on the gridiron in the smashing conflicts of brute strength that preceded the development of the modern game in which all three institutions played such a prominent part. After two games, both of which were won by the Tigers, relations were suspended until 1911. From that date on, with the exception of two war-years, the Crimson has met the Orange and Black of Princeton in an annual eastern grid classic. With the exception of 1895 and 1896, the Yale-Princeton football series had been unbroken but for the war interlude.

As illustrating the pre-eminence of Harvard, Yale and Princeton in the early growth of football, the late Walter Camp, known as the father of football, for many years picked his All-American elevens exclusively from the ranks of the "Big Three".

While competition with "outside" teams has ever been spiced with the same tense rivalry that marked the big three warfare, these games never gained recognition on their merits as deciding the success of the season. Casual defeat in early season games has been considered of small import to "Big Three" students and graduates and the sole test of the season's success has been victory in the yearly struggles. For several years the demand of alumni and undergraduates for tickets to the games has prevented any sizable portion of the general public from viewing the meetings but public interest in the championship has remained at increasingly high level.

Since the resumption of the "Big Three" football meetings in 1919 following the war, Princeton has been victorious over Harvard in five of the eight games played. Harvard has won but one contest, that of 1923, by a score of 5 to 0. The games of 1919 and 1920 resulted in ties. The Tiger Cats have swamped Harvard for the past three years without allowing the Crimson a single point.

In 1924 Princeton doiled up a total of 34 points, in 1925, 16 points and in the game of last Saturday scored a 12 to 0 victory over a Harvard aggregation that was judged a favorite on early season development. Princeton won "Big Three" championships in 1923 and 1925, while Yale swept the series in 1923. Harvard has not a clear title to the crown since the post-war games began.

The "Big Three" smash-up marks the second break in the athletic relations of major institutions this season. Army and Syracuse mutually decided to suspend future sport contact "for the time being" as a result of the rough contest between their rival football elevens on Oct. 16 when five players were seriously injured. A Syracuse player later resigned from his squad after assaulting an official during the game.

FOOTBALL EXPERTS CAN ONLY GUESS AT OUTCOME OF SATURDAY'S BIG GAMES

NEW YORK, Nov. 10.—(AP)—Football prophets of the east went to their weekly forecasting task today in a midst of uncertainty.

Before them loomed a maze of stunning form reversals, reorganization of line-ups and a strong spirit of traditional rivalry which held possibility of flouting opinion based purely on team records. For the first time this year, they saw defeat on Saturday for virtually every leading team in the Atlantic coast sector.

Predictions were not to be made lightly, either, for into the crucible of conflict this week-end will be poured the aspirations of four leaders in the fight for gridiron supremacy—Army-Notre Dame, Navy, and Brown—records of three other unbeaten teams, N. Y. U., Boston College and Haskell Indians, and the "big three" championship.

Dull and faltering pencils, their output gleaned largely from the season's performances, nevertheless checked off Princeton as having the call over Yale, Army over Notre Dame, Navy over Georgetown, Pennsylvania over Columbia, Brown over Harvard and New York University over Davis-Elkins.

At least four other games appear as toss-ups. They were Cornell and Dartmouth, Colgate and Syracuse, Boston College and Haskell Indians, Pittsburgh and Washington-Jefferson.

Critics base their confidence in Army on the Cadets' decisive victory over Rockne's eleven in 1925, pointing to the fact that the soldier team will have virtually the same stars, with additional seasoning, that won so easily a year ago.

Trapnell, Best Army ball carrier injured in the Syracuse game, will be back in the line-up. Furthermore, the team is considered to have been strengthened by the addition of Gagle and Murrell to the backfield.

Anticipated loss of Kline, veteran Yale back, as a result of the death of his mother, would weaken the Blue's hope of stopping Princeton's march to its second "big three" title, observers believe, but they pointed out that the Tigers will be called upon to face a better Eli eleven than was beaten by Army, for Coach Ted Jones has spared his regulars for vitrorous play the last two weeks in order to send his most formidable array against Slagle and company.

Navy's impressive string of victories over Purdue, Drake, Princeton, Colgate and Michigan is accepted as justifying prediction of another triumph Saturday, against Georgetown, but critics see a serious threat to the Middies' record in the Hilltoppers' unexpected triumph last week over Syracuse. Enthusiasm and confidence has fanned the flame at Georgetown, and Navy will be called upon to stand off one of its stiffest invasions of the year, critics anticipate.

Records of the two teams give Brown a distinct edge over Harvard, but indication of a determined Crimson attempt to overthrow the undefeated Providence "Iron Men" is seen in Coach Arnold Horween's warning that he will start his "best available team." There is, likewise, a strong feeling at Columbia University that Coach Crowley's husky band, braced by its conquest of Cornell, will direct against Pennsylvania one of the most powerful assaults the Philadelphians have faced this season.

SPORTING NOTES

Snow-shoeing as an American sport may be said to date back to the organization of the Montreal Snow-Shoe club in 1840.

In the early part of the last century a shooting match was a regular feature of the Thanksgiving day observances in New England.

Detroit's new boxing arena, which will have a seating capacity of 16,000, will bear the name of Madison Square Garden.

The racing season in the Chicago district this year was the longest since 1904. Two new race-tracks were opened and the meetings drew an average daily attendance of 5,000.

A most remarkable athlete was "Swede" George Dahlgren, who at 33 years of age was a star football player at Beloit college a decade ago. Dahlgren also held the Wisconsin state records for the discus and the hammer throw.

Miss Violet Cordery, 23-year-old driver of racing cars, has been awarded the Dewar trophy for the most meritorious performance of the year. Miss Cordery's feat in covering 5,000 miles on the Montlhery track, near Paris, at an average speed of over 70 miles an hour has earned her the trophy.

Tod Morgan, of Seattle, junior light weight champion of the world, arrived in New York yesterday for a ten-day training period in preparation for his title clash with Carl Duane, of New York, in Madison square garden, Nov. 19. Morgan whipped Joe Glick of New York in his last appearance there and more recently too the measure of the veteran Johnny Dundee in the west.

While Gene Tunney was training at Stroudsburg, Pa., for the battle with Jack Dempsey that brought him the heavyweight championship of the world, the popular ex-marine promised the townspeople he would return for a visit after the fight, win or lose. Gene, back from his Bermuda vacation Thursday, will keep that promise this coming week-end as the guest of Mayor C. E. Eddinger. A banquet will be held in his honor on Friday.

FOOTBALL NOTES

During three successive years—1923, 1924 and 1925—the Minnesota-Wisconsin football games resulted in tie

The advent of two teams of the Western Conference teams will help to make the Harvard football schedule for next year one of the most interesting and the hardest the Crimson has had in some years.

University of Pennsylvania has scheduled an unusually formidable list of opponents for next year. Among them will be Brown, Annapolis, Cornell, Chicago, Lehigh, Columbia, Swarthmore and Franklin and Marshall.

Gaelic football, which has been a popular sport in Ireland for centuries, calls for a team of 15 players, distributed as follows: 1 goal keeper, 2 fullbacks, 2 halfbacks, 3 centers, 2 wing centers, 2 forwards, 2 wing forwards, and 1 full forward. In point of action and excitement the sport is declared to be fully equal to any other form of football.

NEW JERSEY MAN IN NEAR-HOLDUP- REPORTS TO NEW LONDON POLICE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10.—J. A. Dickmans of Paterson, N. J., reported to the police this morning that an attempt had been made to hold him up at East Lyme, but that he frustrated the attempt by speeding away. Dickmann said that he was on his way to New London about 3:45 o'clock and when on the outskirts of the village three men entered the middle of the highway and endeavored to cause him to stop. He guided the automobile around them and speeded away. The report was turned over to the state police, Groton barracks, but officers sent to East Lyme failed to find the alleged holdup men.

WORKHOUSE FOR BUMMERS WHO ANNOY THE PUBLIC

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10.—This city is said to have more than its proportion of bummers, men who get a living without earning it, and who prey on the liberal and the gullible. Three of this sort were put away this morning, two of them being sent to the workhouse and a third was ordered to get out of town before sundown. Joseph Ryan, a fellow with a court record as long as a man's arm, was fined $5 for intoxication and was committed to the workhouse for 30 days and a vagrant, James McCarthy, was given the same penalty. John Sloan was allowed to leave the city or take the same punishment that had been dealt out to his companions. The men had been about the city half drunk and holding up pedestrians, till complaint was made to Officer Clyde Murphy. He put a stop to their activities by arresting them. Ryan attempted to claim that he had been at work at Fishers Island, but that story has been worn threadbare and he was committed. McCarthy was drunk enough to say that he was drunk and to admit that he had probably begged in the highways of the city.

New London will be represented by a large number of people at Norwich Thursday, when the anniversary of the armistice declaring the end of the World war will be celebrated. Autos, trolleys and trains will convey the visitors and the busses will carry a considerable number. Next year it is understood that Norwich will forego the observance of Armistice day in a general way and that New London will have a public celebration of the event.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Hoeckel today ordered the drivers' licenses of Joseph B. Dean, U. S. S. Shaw, United States coast guard, state pier, and Alfred B. Small, U. S. S. Cummings, United States coast guard, state pier, suspended.

Patrolmen Augustus Ray and William Graham hurried to the Metzermacher residence and upon arriving there found Metzermacher in need of medical treatment and had a physician summoned. Metzermacher was ill and suffering from chills. He was also apparently delirious.

The bearers were Cornelius Kelley, John Sullivan, Joseph Brady, Eugene Sullivan, Morris O'Donnell and Robert Sullivan. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

TURNER C. HAYNES DIES— DOORKEEPER IN LEGISLATURE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10—Turner C. Haynes, 73, died this morning at his home, in Niantic, after an illness of more than two years. He is survived by several relatives. Mr. Haynes suffered a shock over two years ago and afterwards suffered two additional strokes. The final shock caused him to be almost completely helpless and he was confined to his home the past nine months. His condition became grave a few days ago and resulted in his death about 11 o'clock this morning. Mr. Haynes was a republican in politics and for several years was doorkeeper in the house at Hartford. Later he was employed as keeper at the Rope Ferry bridge, Niantic.

BOY WHO PLAYS TRUANT GETS FATHER IN TROUBLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10—Herbert Hutchins, 261 Broad street, a carpenter, employed by the New London Ship & Engine company, is being sought by the New London police. Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Holandersky today issued a warrant for Hutchins' arrest on a charge of contributing to the neglect of his minor son, John, 14.

The boy was arrested late yesterday afternoon by Patrolmen John Foley and Elwood Bailey on complaint of the school authorities, who alleged that the boy, a pupil at the grammar school, was guilty of truancy, as he constantly remained away from his studies. When the boy was brought to the police station and after he had been detained an hour or more, his father put in an appearance and stated that he had interviewed Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield and that the officer had stated that the boy would be turned over to the custody of the father. Acting Lieutenant James Gaffney allowed the boy to go to his home with his father, but instructed Hutchins to be in the police court this morning and to bring the boy with him. When court convened at 9:30 o'clock school officials were on hand to testify to the frequent absence of the boy from school, but neither Hutchins nor his son was present. After court, a warrant for Hutchins' arrest was issued and given to Sergeant Nelson Smith to serve. The officer went to the Hutchins home, to find that the house was locked and the family not at home, although all of the furnishings were intact. It was later learned that Hutchins and his wife had taken the boy away and that it was understood that he had been taken to the home of a relative out of the city as the father and mother had the idea that it was the intention of the court to cause the boy to be committed to a school for incorrigibles. Inquiry at the New London Ship & Engine company plant brought the information that Hutchins did not report for work today, but that he had not been discharged and it was presumed that he would return to his employment Thursday.

Carol Dunbar, 6, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dunbar, died this morning at the residence of her parents, 48 Evergreen avenue. The cause of the child's death was pneumonia, with which she had been ill less than a week.

The solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Raymond J. O'Callahan, Rev. William J. Fox, of Groton, being deacon and Rev. Michael Reagan sub-deacon. The bearers were Jeremiah Sullivan, Frederick Pflauger, Bernard Lyons, Thomas Martin, William McManus and Thomas Somers, the last named of New Haven. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

NEW LONDON, Nov. 10—Mrs. Goodrich, wife of a chief petty officer stationed at the submarine base, was committed to Norwich State hospital, this afternoon. The woman, who is about 27, had been receiving treatment at a private hospital on Vauxhall street, but within a day or two her condition became such that her commitment was deemed advisable and it was ordered this afternoon. The police automobile was used in transferring Mrs. Goodrich to the hospital and while enroute to the institution, the woman became somewhat violent. Earlier in the day she partially destroyed a necklace and threw jewelry from the window of the private hospital.

John F. Fahey, Willetts avenue extension, employed by the F. H. & A. H. Chappell Coal company, suffered the loss of a toe on his right foot yesterday afternoon. Fahey was manipulating a buzz saw and in transferring it from one location to another, the saw fell upon the foot. The toe was so badly lacerated that it was removed close to the foot.

John L. White, address unknown, engaged in a heated debate with Patrolman Augustus Ray this afternoon and the verbal combat was ended when White struck the officer a stinging blow on the face. White was then arrested and charged with breach of the peace. He was not a prisoner at police headquarters long for Nicholas Muscarella Bayonet street merchant, became surety on White's bond of $50 for his presentation in the police court tomorrow morning.

Five drivers of automobiles are scheduled for presentation in the police court tomorrow morning charged with violation of the city's parking laws.

Joseph Dodo, about 12, residing at 12 Tenth street, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, having been admitted there this evening for undetermined injuries, suffered when he fell from an automobile truck. An X-ray picture of the boy's foot was taken, but it is not known whether any of the bones were fractured. Dodo was riding on the truck, driven by Renato Orasio, 224 Shaw street. When the truck was on the New London approach of the Thames river highway bridge, the boy alighted to go to his home nearby but fell so that his right foot was run over by the rear wheels of the heavy vehicle. Orasio placed the boy on the truck and conveyed him to the hospital.

Pedestrians and automobile drivers were greatly inconvenienced tonight because of the absence of all illumination on Ocean avenue, between Willetts avenue and Neptune avenue. About 8 o'clock a mishap at the power house of the Connecticut Power company resulted in all the street lights being extinguished and the nature of the mishap was such that the lights failed to illuminate for the remainder of the night.

Edward J. McEnaney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. McEnaney, of Watertown, N. Y., and Miss Gladys F. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick G. Michael Reagan. Raymond Sampson was best man and Miss Eldon Pottie, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid.

Announcement is made by Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Gracey, 47 Granite street, of the engagement of their daughter, Miss Alta L. Gracey, to Everett T. McLoughlin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. McLoughlin, 32 Holman street. The wedding date is Dec. 31.

Patrick Feeley, a well known resident of Waterford, underwent a serious operation at a Hartford hospital Sunday. Reports from the hospital are to the effect that Mr. Feeley is making steady recovery.

Russell Bailey, 17, of 4 High street, Lynn, Mass., and Kendrick Nicholas, 17, of 63 Ingalls street, Lynn, were arrested this afternoon charged with being runaways. Sergeant Nelson Smith was passing through Jay street and the action of the boys attracted his attention. When the officer questioned them, the boys admitted that they had run away from home. The police of Lynn were communicated with and later Chief of Police Thomas M. Burckes informed the New London police that the parents of the boys had been notified of their arrest here and that it was requested that the boys be detained as their fathers were coming to New London by automobile to take charge of their erring sons.

The condition of Mrs. Margaret McGuire, who has been critically ill at her home on Wall street, corner of Spring street, with pneumonia, is reported as being considerably improved. Mrs. McGuire is the mother of Attorney Frank L. McGuire.

Dominick Ganagitle, 48 Church street, Westfield, Mass., has communicated with the New London police requesting their assistance in locating his daughter, who disappeared from home about a week ago. Ganagitle is positive that his daughter is in Connecticut and this afternoon he informed the New London police that he had ascertained that the girl is not in the state of Massachusetts, so his belief is all the stronger that she is in Connecticut. Ganagitle is of the opinion that his daughter is residing in this city.

A Ford coupe, owned by Harold Underhill, 307 Huntington street, was stolen here this afternoon. It is of 1924 model and carried Connecticut registration, N-6537. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Lucrezia Bori

The concert by Lucrezia Bori, the Metropolitan Opera House soprano at the New London state armory Tuesday November 16, will be the 32nd major concert presented in New London by Connecticut college and will prove one of the most important events of the season musical or social. There are many concert artists today, but Bori stands incomparable among them, for she possesses not only a voice of unusual beauty, but has beauty, charm and an overwhelming personality. She is as chameleon as the land from which she comes—Spain—and as brilliant as its sun. Those who have been fortunate enough to hear the sterling artist know this full well, and those who have not, and the good fortune, now have the opportunity brought to their very homes at a scale of prices which almost any one can afford to pay.

Growth of the Canning Industry

The stomach has its limits. Everyone knows it, even the small boy who insists on being convinced by experience. The food needs of the world's population have their limits, but the fact is often forgotten in discussions of food consumption and trade. A change from one food to another creates what appears to be a new trade but which is in reality only a substitution, says a writer in the September issue of the Annals, published by the American Academy of Political and Social Science.

Americans eat more canned foods than any other people, more both in quantity and variety. In the United States, canned foods, far from being a luxury, are an everyday food of all classes of people, used because they are at once convenient and economical and because they add variety and needed food values to the diet. This condition results from the fact that the American people as a whole are not only able to buy all they want and need, but also to choose the variety that their taste or their knowledge of food values suggests.

Foreign countries with lower standards of living than those in the United States cannot be expected to consume as many canned food products as Americans. They will consume certain articles of American production which they themselves do not produce, and certain other articles which appeal especially to their taste. But the outlet for American goods in foreign countries will not equal the proportions it has gained in the United States until economic conditions in other countries more nearly approach those of our own country.

The development of industry and the increase of urban population in the United States have raised the question of the adequacy of our domestic food supply in coming years. Has the time come, or is it soon to come, when the United States must look to other countries for much of its food supply now furnished by domestic production?

An example is found in the canning industry itself, where record-breaking packs of corn, peas and tomatoes in 1925 resulted in prices which were unprofitable to the canners, but which caused a greater consumption of these products than in earlier years. With the canners, as with the farmer, the question is not one of producing enough to meet market demands, but of adjusting production so as to prevent a surplus, or of finding additional outlets for the surplus.

YOUR SICK CHILD IS CONSTIPATED! LOOK AT TONGUE

Give "California Fig Syrup" if cross, bilious or feverish

If your little one is out-of-sorts, half-sick, isn't resting, eating and acting naturally—look, Mother! see if tongue is coated. This is a sure sign that the little stomach, liver and bowels are clogged with waste. When cross, irritable, feverish, stomach sour, breath bad or has stomach-ache, diarrhoea, sore throat, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup," and in a few hours all the constipated poison, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

Mothers can rest easy after giving this harmless, "fruity" laxative" because it never fails to cleanse the little one's liver and bowels and sweeten the stomach, and they dearly love its pleasant taste. Full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups printed on each bottle.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup;" then see that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company."

Badly Inflamed Varicose Veins

Olive-Tablets bring no griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after 30 years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Explorer to Lecture Tonight

L. O. Armstrong, the noted lecturer, who has been exploring Canada and the United States for over forty years, will give a free illustrated lecture under the auspices of the Norwich Fish & Game association this (Thursday) evening at 7:30 at the Community house on Church street.

Mr. Armstrong is lecturing under the auspices of the Norwich club and the bureau of commercial economics of Washington, which is a philanthropic educational institution with alliances with over twenty-five of the governments of the world. Its work is to disclose by lectures and motion pictures the scenery, the industries, the natural resources and the customs of the peoples of one nation to those of another, thus promoting trade and friendship. Its films are shown in all parts of the world free. Mr. Armstrong has been lecturing for the bureau for five years and has spoken before all the important clubs, business organizations and universities of this country.

Palace Theater

Never before have so many stars appeared in any one picture! Ernest Torrence, William Collier, Jr., Greta Nissen and Louise Fazenda are featured. Chester Conklin, Snits Edwards, Andre de Beranger, Sojin, Brandon Hurst, and some eight thousand other players all have definite roles to play.

Loads of superlative adjectives could be used to good effect—but—why gild the lily? The Lady of the Harem comes as Raoul Walsh's third successful spectacle. You know, he's the man who directed The Wanderer and The Thief of Bagdad.

A Hero of the Big Snows, the new Rin-Tin-Tin picture directed by Herman Raymaker, will open on Friday at the Palace theater, Rinty's mate, Nanette, makes her appearance in this new Warner production, and the cast of humans includes Alice Calhoun, Don Alavarado, Leo Willis and Mary Jane Milliken.

This is said to be the most exciting as well as most beautiful of Rin-Tin-Tin's pictures, and those who saw him in Below the Line, The Clash of the Wolves and The Night Cry, his recent Warner productions, will realize that he has a high standard of entertainment to surpass.

Broadway Theater

The day of days is here! Armistice day—a day for real rejoicing on the street with the big parade and then a show, such as is being offered by the Broadway theater.

The management has secured five special Keith-Albee acts for this special occasion, that will be remembered as long as this eventful day is remembered.

The feature attraction is presented by C. B. Maddock, who is offering a scene of bygone days in Al's Here, described as being the funniest act in vaudeville. Harry Bates and a cast of five people appear in it.

The other four acts are also notable for their entertaining qualities.

The Kick-Off, which is the screen feature, is extremely in the mode of the season. It is a bang-up play of college life, crowded with the doings that make up an undergraduate's work and fun during his final years of schooling. The romance, the jollity, the hard work as well as the social pursuits are all pictured, all of them forming a background for the real light of the picture—the great Varsity football game. George Walsh as the star and as the great quarterback gives a performance that beats the world for action.

POETRY

The Gardener's Son

Look where it hides almost unseen,
And peeps the sheltering vines between,
Like a white flower out of a bush of green.

Cosey as nest of a bird inside,
Here is no room for show or pride,
And the open door swings free and wide.

Across the well-worn stepping stone,
With sweet ground-ivy half overgrown,
You may pass, as if the house were your own . . .

Bordered by roses, early and late,
A narrow gravelled walk leads straight
Up to the door from the rustic gate . . .

A little off to the right, one sees
Some black and sturdy walnut trees,
And locusts, whose white flowers scent the breeze.

And the Dovecote Mill stands just beyond
With its dull red walls, and the droning sound
Of a slow wheel, turning round and round.

—Phoebe Cary.

"Great Nature Is An Army Gay"

Great nature is an army gay,
Resistless marching on its way;
I hear the bugles clear and sweet,
I hear the tread of million feet.
Across the plain I see it pour;
It tramples down the waving grass;
Within the echoing mountain pass
I hear a thousand cannon roar.

It swarms within my garden gate;
My deepest well it drinketh dry.
It doth not rest; it doth not wait;
By night and day it sweepeth by;
Ceaseless it marcheth by my door;
It heeds me not, though I implore.

I know not whence it comes, nor where
It goes. For me it doth not care—
Whether I starve, or eat, or sleep,
Or live, or

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(AP)—Reactionary tendencies in today's stock market reflected speculative disappointment over the relatively small increase in the October unfilled orders of the United States Steel corporation and the failure of the directors of the Rock Island railroad to declare a dividend on the common stock at today's meeting. Profit-taking was rather general and energetic bear selling took place in spots with the result that many issues closed 1 to 3 1-2 points lower on the day.

The steel corporation, which was expected in many quarters to show a gain of 150,000 to 200,000 tons in orders, actually reported an increase of only 90,152 tons. Steel common closed 1 1-2 points lower at 146 1-2 after having fluctuated between 148 1-8 to 146 1-8. Rock Island common sold as low as 65 1-4, but intimations by directors that dividend action would be taken in December sent the stock up to 66 3-4, where it was off only 1-4 on the day.

In view of the recent sharp advance in many issues and the reported reduction of the short interest, today's selling was regarded in some quarters as a natural correction of a temporarily weakened technical condition. Pools in several issues continued to mark up their favorites on the theory that the bullish possibilities of lower money rates and reduced income taxes, coupled with prospects of special developments in those issues, had not been exhausted.

General Motors, dividend action on which is due after the close tomorrow, showed a net loss of 1 3-8 at 148 1-2 after fluctuating erratically between 147 3-4 and 151 1-8. Among the many other popular industrial issues to sell off a point or more were Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Baldwin, Consolidated Gas, Famous Players, Fox Film, International Harvester, Postum Cereal, Standard Oil of New Jersey and Western Union. Gimbel Bros. and Pathe broke to new lows.

Rubbers were strong despite reports from Akron of an early cut in tire prices. U. S. Rubber showed an extreme gain of over 5 points by touching 64 1-2, closing near the top. New 1926 highs were registered by Inspiration, Utah and Green Cananea Coppers, Montana Power, Commercial Solvents B, Safety Cable, Virginia Iron, Coal and Coke and Purity Baking.

Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent. and held steady at that figure all day, with plenty of funds available. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Active cotton futures dropped 8 to 1 1-2 cents a bushel on reports of improved crop prospects in Argentina. Cotton closed slightly lower. Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee prices recovered yesterday's losses.

A sharp rally in French francs, much of which was lost, featured the dull trading in the foreign exchanges, the demand rate on Paris closing just above 4.00 cents. Demand sterling was slightly easier around $4.84 5-16 and other European rates showed only nominal changes.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(AP)—The underlying ease of money conditions held the bond market firm today but trading was devoid of any particular feature. Funds continued to seek investment, with medium-priced issues favored over the bonds of the highest grade.

Railroad liens made the best showing, as new buying was attracted by the recent series of developments indicating that the carriers were now more prosperous than at any time since the war. Baltimore & Ohio 5s, Florida East Coast 5s, New York Central 4s, Norfolk & Western convertible 6s, Lehigh Valley 5s, Frisco "Katy" and New Haven issues changed hands at prices ranging from fractions to more than 3 points higher.

Wide fluctuations in Granby Consolidated Mining 7s continued to attract attention. After soaring more than 10 points yesterday to a record high price, the bonds ran into the inevitable wave of profit-taking today, slumping 8 points to 126.

Except for the establishment of a 1926 high price by French 8s, there were few developments of importance in the foreign division. Belgian obligations were firm but failed to reach their recent peaks and South American city bonds were active.

Liquid Carbonic 6s, Western Union 5s, American Writing Paper and Superior Oil 7s were the most popular issues in the industrial section.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, Nov. 10—(AP)—With the world's stock of wheat showing material enlargement, wheat values took a downward swing today whereas the corn market tended upgrade. The government crop report issued after the close was construed as bearish, however, as to corn, the official estimate of the 1926 yield of corn being 14,000,000 bushels in excess of the forecast a month ago.

Wheat closed unsteady, 1c to 1 5-8c net lower, corn unchanged to 1-4c up, oats at a shade to 1-4c off, and provisions the same as yesterday's finish to 30c down.

According to announcement made today, the world's available supply of wheat increased 11,626,000 bushels during the last week, and is now 218,922,000 bushels compared with 170,175,000 bushels a year ago.

New official figures on corn yield turned out to be practically the same as the average of recent private estimates. Oats largely followed corn.

Provisions were easier in line with hog values.

CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 10—(AP)—Conflicting cross currents of prices again ran through the curb market today, giving it a spotty appearance. Trading showed a further falling off in volume, and was confined largely to professional operators.

The report of another increase of more than 15,000 barrels in crude oil production last week was off-set, in part, by an advance in certain grades of spindletop crude prices. Active issues in both the standard and miscellaneous groups moved within narrow and irregular limits.

In the industrial group, new 1926 peak prices were attained by American Seating, Bancitaly Corporation, Continental Tobacco, Estey Welte, Home Insurance and International Projector, while Central Leather preferred (when issued) and Ford of Canada broke to new low prices, the latter slumping 11 points to 350 as against a high of 653 earlier in the year.

Warner Pictures B rallied over 2 points at the expense of an overcrowded short interest, and good buying was noted in American Cynamid, Chicago Nipple and Todd Shipping, but United Biscuit, National Casket and Atlas Portland Cement were heavy.

Public utilities pointed upward with the strength of American Light & Traction and Electric Bond & Share as the outstanding features.

NOANK

When the World war ended, Armistice day eight years ago on the 11th of November, the people of the village will never forget the day. The shipyard and mill quit work, the shipyard band was out and the whole village had a parade. Bells rang and whistles were blowing, women were crying, so glad were they that the great day had came. Noank sent 75 boys to war and near the town hall is an honor roll with their names inscribed on it.

Today (Thursday) some of the stores will close and the post office will close for a half day. The school children will give a short programme in the morning; they will have a flag drill and songs. In the afternoon the children will be at liberty. At 11 o'clock, two minutes will be devoted to prayer. A large crowd from here is planning to go to Norwich to witness the big parade which will be the biggest turnout in the state.

The rain Tuesday evening was the heaviest the village has seen this fall. Pearl street was like a young river; the water was about two inches deep. Leaves clogged the gutters so the water could not run off. The fishing boats put out extra lines on account of the wind. It thundered and lightened, which is a sign of a cold wave coming. Tuesday afternoon a rainbow was seen.

Elmer Hewitt, one of the best shots in town, went with his dog, Swift, for a week's hunting in the woods at Old Lyme. Tuesday, a young man from here was with Hewitt and he said the dog, Swift, was chasing a flock of partridges. The dog caught one quick as a flash as the birds went by him. The bird was a prisoner and before the day was over his master got two partridges and a woodcock.

Coast guard boat No. 126 was hauled out on the South ways at the shipyard and will receive several days of repair work and painting. Boat No. 125 which was on the north ways for a few days was launched, after getting turned up for the sea again. The boat will leave the shipyard and go to New London and then to Rum Row, off Block Island.

AMERICAN LEGION ADJUTANT SHOWS WHAT IT DOES

The American Legion, what it represents, its aims and what it has accomplished are explained in a statement issued by Joseph Bellefleur, adjutant of Fletcher post, No. 4, A. L., of this city. Mr. Bellefleur says:

Armistice day, in 1926, the American Legion and the citizens of Norwich and our neighboring towns in general are gathering in our city for the celebration of the eighth anniversary of the birth of our great country, which brought to a close the greatest war of all time and also to celebrate the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary fo the birth of our great country. At this time the Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, wishes to bring to the attention of our people just what the American Legion represents, what it has accomplished and what its aims and purposes are. During the World war the nation heard much of service, service on the battlefields, service in the camps, service at sea, service in the home and in every phase of the nation's life. We served by saving sugar and meat and rubber and tinfoil and in a thousand ways at home as well as at gripe with the foe. It is not to be wondered at that this ideal of service and sacrifice left a deep impress on the veterans of the war. They had heard it and talked it and lived it so long that it was only natural that when they returned from ship and camp and formed the American Legion, they should have sought to embody in that organization that ideal of service which they had lived by and for and with through the years of battle. So the Legion, at the very moment of its formal organization, announced to the world a purpose of service. It declared that its members sought to serve their country in time of peace as well as they had served in time of war.

That purpose of service was set forth in the preamble of the constitution which the Legion adopted at the First Annual National Convention held at Minneapolis on November, 16th to 20th, 1919. That document was a noble one which deserves for its fineness of spirit and beauty of its language to take its place with the Declaration of Independence and the constitution of the United States and other great charters of our nation. In its avowed purpose, surely, the Legion has met the test and challenge of service. The real test of service is not to talk it but to give it, carry it through to accomplishment. Unless an organization is giving real service to its community, state and nation it cannot justify its existence.

What has the Legion done to give service. The Legions first care has been ever since its existence the care of the disabled veterans, the men and women who came back from their service mere wrecks of what they were and who pay in pain and anguish to this day for their sacrifices for the nation. The Legion exposed the inefficiency, waste and confusion under the old plan of three separate government agencies to care for the disabled. It led the fight which resulted in the creation of the United States Veterans Bureau to handle all problems affecting veterans as veterans in their relations with the government.

The Legion has insisted constantly that the best in care and cure possible to modern medical science be given to these men. It was responsible for a great government hospital building program to provide modern hospitals for the disabled at a cost of more than $75,000,000.

This veterans organization was responsible for the passage of the Reed-Johnson bill in July, 1924, which made it easier for the disabled to get the government service to which they were entitled. In the first year that this law was in operation, its benefits totaled $16,429,866 to 15,433 disabled among them shell shocked, tuberculous, blind and totally deaf veterans.

During the past year the Legion, by its National Rehabilitation committee alone, to say nothing of the work done by other agencies of the Legion in the states and in local communities, got awards for disabled men which totaled the sum of $2,028,575.05. This work is being carried on constantly. In carrying on its activities for the disabled, the Legion came in contact with many cases of veterans families who have been in need. As an example of this sort of work, the Legion auxiliary, made up of mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of members, spent during the year nearly half a million in family relief for the disabled and their families. Many cases of children in need have been discovered. And a thorough survey of veterans children and their needs is now being made by the Legion all over the country.

An organization reaching from national headquarters of the Legion at Indianapolis through state committees and district and local committees down to the children in every community is being perfected now to carry on this work for the orphaned and dependent children of veterans. Aid is given, where it is possible, to enable mother or other relatives to maintain the child in its own home, as the best possible plan to be followed. If this plan cannot be followed the child is taken for temporary care to one of the Legions children's billets. These are operated on the "cottage plan" with a "home mother" in charge of each cottage, and with a group of children living together as nearly as may be under the conditions of a normal American family, with love for them and about them.

Two billets are now in operation, one at Otter Lake, Michigan and Clarksboro, New Jersey, a third is nearly ready for occupancy at Legionville, near Independence, Kansas and land has been given for another in Tennessee and still another is underway in California. Children are also placed in foster homes as the third phase of the Legion's program, which involves also, as already outlined home aid and temporary billet care in emergency. A child is placed in a home only after a most rigid sort of investigation to determine whether the home is suited to the child and the child to the home. It is left there for a trial period. If everything is satisfactory on both sides, the child is then adopted. It is kept under Legion supervision until it is old enough to look out for itself.

Children are also returned to their own homes after a temporary family crisis has passed and the family is again able to care for them. Forty eight children have been so rehabilitated with their families. The guardianship service of the veterans bureau is co-operating with the Legion in investigating the conduct of every guardian of a child or a mentally incompetent veteran who is receiving money as award of the government. Hundreds of cases of personal mistreatment and gross misappropriation of funds have been discovered. Special plans are now being worked out by the Legion to see that the interests of these unfortunates are properly protected.

TAFTVILLE

A masquerade dance, which was the second carnival night in a series of four autumn social affairs given by auxiliary societies of the Sacred Heart Parish, was held Tuesday evening at Parish hall. The affair was in charge of the English speaking women's societies of the parish. In spite of the inclement weather, a crowd of over 300 attended, although the big street parade of maskers which had been planned had to be abandoned.

The hall was most attractively decorated with strings of Japanese lanterns and pumpkin-moon-shines, with rows of colored lights and red, white and blue streamers. Pep's Melody Boys in carnival costumes furnished the music for the dancing, and Caikowsky prompted for the square dances.

The affair opened with a grand march of all the maskers before the judges' stand. The costumes were many and varied and the judges, Archie Molleur, Michael Murphy, Mrs. Arthur Allard and Mrs. Gabriel Paquette, had a difficult task trying to pick the winners. Finally the ladies prizes went to Miss Agnes Murphy as an old fashioned girl and to the Misses Greenwood, who were dressed to represent Little Red Riding Hood and her Grandmother. Emile Raymond as a pirate and Armand Heroux as the Battle Cap Man were awarded the gentlemen's prizes. The evening was then given over to dancing and the booths had a large patronage. The proceeds are for the benefit of the Sacred Heart church.

The general committee, of which Rev. John Malley was chairman, included James Troland, Andrew Brchmader, Miss Agnes Dougherty, Miss Annie Dailey, Miss Sadie Hasler, Miss Catherine Hasler and Miss Nora Murphy. In charge of home made cake and ice cream were Miss Catherine Malone, Mrs. William Malone, Miss Mary Hanlon and Miss Mary Murphy. Edward Benoit and Peter Praniski had charge of the soda, and Lawrence Benoit and August Dugas were in the coat room. The tickets and door were in charge of William J. Malone and James Nolan.

The members of the Polish Workers Sick Mutual Aid association gave a largely attended dance at the Naturalization club Wednesday evening. The White Eagles orchestra furnished the music. The proceeds are for the benefit of the club.

Mrs. Raymond A. Pingree and daughter Lois of Sayleville, R. I., are at the home of Mrs. Pingree's father Axel L. Aberg and family of North Third avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Haskell of Maennerchor avenue, Taftville, entertained at a game dinner, Tuesday evening. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Max Bauer of Taftville, Mr. and Mrs E. D. Chesebro of Stonington, and Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Briggs of Westerly.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubes. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

POQUETANUCK GUILD DID SEWING FOR ITS SALE

The Woman's Guild of St. James' church, Poquetanuck, held an all day meeting at the home of Mrs. Mary Harris Tuesday. The bad weather did not seriously affect the attendance, forty being present, including the members of the Guild and guests from Norwich, Preston City and Ledyard. A very pleasant and busy day was spent sewing for the Guild's Christmas sale. A vote was taken to buy a new curtain for the stage at the parish house.

An appetising dinner was served at noon with the following menu: Beef loaf, mashed potatoes, pickles, creamed turnips, rolls, sweet potatoes, cake, coffee.

On the committee appointed to help Mrs. Harris were Mrs. Alanson Fuller, Mrs. Arthur Smith and Mrs. Henry Hart.

FINES ARE GIVEN IN CRIMINAL COMMON PLEAS

With 23 new cases and 16 continued cases on its docket, the criminal term of the court of common pleas came in at the court house in New London Wednesday morning before Judge Charles E. Waller, Prosecuting Attorney Charles H. Whittlesey presented a number of cases, and most of the defendants who had appealed from the decision of the lower courts, pleaded guilty. The court adjourned at noon until Tuesday morning.

Judge Waller meted out a fine of $50 and costs and a suspended jail sentence of 30 days to Melino Patricia, of the Submarine Base, charged specifically with having a pair of brass knuckles in his possession on August 2, during a brawl in New London. Mr. Whittlesey stated that so far as he could ascertain, the sailor did not use the brass knuckles in the fight which resulted in his arrest but when he ran, he evidently remembered that the knuckles were in his pocket and threw them into the street.

The case of Joseph Connor, of New London charged with breach of peace wherein he was alleged to have resisted an officer, was continued at the suggestion of Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey, who stated that he bore good reputation and insofar as the evidence showed, he actually did not resist the officer.

The case of Domenick Sutera, of New London, charged with reckless driving following a collision in Howard street, was nolled upon the payment of $50, when Mr. Whittlesey made such recommendation.

The case of Granville Rust, charged with violation of the moter vehicle law was continued. The case drew a fine of but $5 in the lower court and as there is a civil suit pending, the case was continued.

On the payment of costs, $15.75, the case of C. H. Lathrop of this city was nolled. He was charged with the failure to grant right of way. According to Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey, the charge was technically correct but the margin he was alleged not to have granted was only about two feet, his car taking up 11 feet of a 28-foot highway.

The case of John F. Foley of East Lyme was nolled on the payment of $25. He was charged with an infraction of the motor vehicle law.

William B. Flemming, of this city, a garage mechanic, was charged with driving under the influence of liquor. He pleaded guilty but it was brought out in court that he only drove the car about 200 yards and then parked it and sat down by the curb. He was found thus by the police after a complaint had been made. The sentence was deferred until later on because Flemming will not receive any pay until Nov. 21 and asked that arrangements be made so that he could pay what fine might be imposed at that time.

Bonds were called in the case of Charlotte Datro, charged with violation of the liquor law, when she failed to appear.

John C. Bromley, of Lisbon, was fined $50 and costs, charged with reckless driving. He pleaded guilty. In the lower court he was charged with driving under the influence of liquor and Prosecuting Attorney Whittlesey changed the charge when the facts were brought to his attention.

Bromley has been first selectman of the town of Lisbon and also a representative to the general assembly from that town. Some time ago Mrs. Bromley died. According to Mr. Whittlesey, the ex-legislator has always been a man of good reputation and has never been a drinking man. He said that on the day in question Aug. 2, he had put in a hard day on his farm, engaged in the arduous labor of haying. He said that Bromley, late in the afternoon, being very tired, went into his home and drank a glass or two of cider and apparently because of his exhaustion and lack of food, it made him "groggy." When he drove his car, a slight accident resulted.

The case of James Angelopos, charged with collecting jitney fares without proper markers on his car, was nolled. Mr. Whittlesey said that the accused had his automobile at the Hartford station and several persons agreed to pay him $10 if he would take them to Colchester. Near Colchester, they asked what he would charge to deliver them to various farms, and he added $3. When he dropped one man off at the latter's destination, he received $5 and another person paid him $8 when he arrived at his destination. Therefore, according to the prosecuting attorney, no individual fares were collected.

The case of Frank Niquet, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, was nolled on the payment of $34.35. He is of Old Lyme.

Albert Pellettieri, formerly a barber of this city, had his case nolled upon the payment of $100. He was charged with violation of the liquor law and the prosecuting attorney said that he had moved permanently out of the state.

The case of William S. Young, charged with violation of the motor vehicle law, was nolled on the payment of $25.

Rosario Perrone, of this city, was fined $100 and given 10 days in jail on a charge of having liquor in his possession. He pleaded guilty.

John Arson pleaded not guilty to a charge of breaking pound in which he was alleged to have taken 12 cows from a farmer which had been legally seized by the latter. He elected to be tried by the court. The alleged offense took place in September.

Louise Sawicki, of this city pleaded not guilty to selling liquor on Aug. 9, and elected to be tried by the court.

Leslie Young, of New London, pleaded not guilty to breach of the peace on April 12. He is represented by Attorney John C. Geary and he elected to be tried by the jury.

Stanley Aynzeski, of North Stonington, found himself in quite a situation, when presented in court. It was all because he, being an alien, had a shotgun in his attic. He had paid for the gun and was not using it. The trouble was that he had purchased it some years ago—before 1923 when a new law was made prohibiting an alien from possessing firearms. Prosecuting Attorney Charles E. Whittlesey informed Judge Charles B. Waller that he did not wish to conflict with the laws of the land but under the circumstances asked that the minimum fine be imposed and the accused had his case nolled on the payment of $5.

The same procedure and fine occurred in a similar case, that of William Suchocki, also of North Stonington, who purchased and owned a shotgun before the law went into effect. He, however, was using the gun at 5 o'clock one morning—to bring down some destructive hawks that were menacing his crops.

Charged with theft of a sum of money and a diamond ring valued at $150 to $200, the property of Mrs. C. Montgomery Budlong, wife of Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong, rector of Christ Episcopal church, George Angell, 20, who has been janitor at the church, was presented in the city court before Judge Arthur F. Libby, Wednesday morning. After considerable evidence was laid in Judge Libby continued the case until Saturday morning under bonds of $500.

The alleged theft was committed about a month ago and for the greater part of the period between the date of the alleged theft and the present time Angell has been detained at the Norwich state hospital for observation as to his sanity. No insanity being found Angell was brought back to police headquarters Tuesday night and held for trial. Attorney E. W. Higgins is counsel for the accused.

Mrs. Budlong testified as to the theft of the ring which occurred on a Sunday morning while services were being held in the church.

Capt. Thomas P. Murphy testified that Angell admitted to him that he took the ring, and that he agreed to inform the police as to where the ring was. On information given him by Angell he sent a police officer to Angell's apartment in the basement of the church rectory but the ring was not found. Angell afterwards claimed that he sold the ring to a Boston truck driver for $40.

Captain Murphy testified that he tried to persuade Angell to return the stolen property and was joined in the appeal by Rev. and Mrs. Budlong, Rev. A. H. Abbott and the accused's father.

Angell testified that he was employed as sexton at Christ church and also as chauffeur for Rev. Mr. Budlong. He denied taking the ring or ever seeing the ring. Asked by his counsel what made him tell the police that he had taken the ring, Angell said that after being questioned closely at police headquarters regarding the theft of the ring his nerves seemed to break and he said he had taken the ring.

Asked by the city attorney why he had left the employ of Lee and Osgood Angell said he had been accused of taking things from that place.

43 DRIVERS IN LIST OF SUSPENDED OPERATORS

The weekly list of operators whose licenses to drive automobiles in Connecticut have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out Wednesday at the state motor vehicle department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. There are forty-three names on the list. Four cases were appealed. Five were Connecticut operators convicted in other states. The department at statement advised people to notify the department or the police in case they should see any of the suspended drivers operating motor vehicles.

The list this week contains six names from this part of the state: Thomas C. Connell, Stonington; Nick D'Aulisa, Timothy C. Fenton, John Migo, New London; Richard J. Driscoll, Norwich; and Edward T. Pickett, Willimantic.

D. A. R. FLOAT WILL SHOW MADAME TRUMBULL'S GIFT

Faith Trumbull chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, will have a float in the Armistice day parade picturing Faith Trumbull laying her beautiful red cloak on the altar, a gift to the soldiers in the Revolutionary war.

Madame Faith Trumbull was the wife of Jonathan Trumbull, governor of Connecticut during the Revolutionary war. She was most earnest in every work during this period, a woman beloved by all.

A Frenchman, Count Rochambeau, who became a friend of the Trumbull family, presented Madame Trumbull a beautiful red cloak. This famous cloak was greatly admired and all Connecticut was proud to have its first lady so honored. She wore her beautiful cloak to the meeting house each Sunday morning in the old town church of Lebanon. One Sunday morning the minister from his high pulpit called for offerings for the suffering soldiers. At first no one responded. Then Madame Trumbull arose, went to the pulpit, removed the lovely cloak and laid it as her gift on the altar, her husband standing by her side. Immediately, men, women and children followed her example and brought their gifts. This cloak was cut into stripes and used to ornament the soldiers' uniforms.

This picture or tableaux was used at Continental Congress in Washington chosen for Connecticut's picture, the year when each state was asked to prepare a tableaux representing some outstanding event in its state.

At that time Mrs. John Laidlaw Buel took the part of Faith Trumbull. The regent of the chapter, Mrs. William Dawley, will represent Faith Trumbull on the float in the Norwich parade.

MERCIER ASSEMBLY GIFTS TO RETIRING OFFICERS

An unusually large meeting was held in the rooms of Mercier Assembly, No. 12, Catholic Ladies of Columbus Tuesday evening.

It was decided that all who are to be in line assemble Thursday at the rooms at one o'clock sharp to participate in Armistice day parade.

After the meeting a social was held which proved to be a very felicitous one. Mrs. Louis Combes received much praise for her work.

PLAUT-CADDEN CO. WARNS OF BOGUS COLLECTOR

The company representatives stated that the man is a fake and they hope his activities can be stopped before he manages to swindle anyone.

COOLIDGE IN HIS ARMISTICE DAY ADDRESS DECLARED U. S. IS STRIVING FOR WORLD UNDERSTANDING AND AMITY

At Dedication of Liberty Memorial at Kansas City the President Avowed That the U. S. Would Adhere to the World Court Only on Conditions Laid Down by the Senate—Asserted That U. S. is Dealing With Foreign Debtors in a Manner Designed For the Welfare of the World and the Advancement of Civilization—It we Are to Have Peace We Must Avoid National Spirit of Suspicion, Distrust and Hatred Toward Other Nations.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 11—(AP)—From the base of the great monument erected in this city to the memory of the men and women of the World war and in the presence of a huge throng from the entire southwest, President Coolidge served formal notice in an Armistice day address today that the United States would adhere to the world court only on the conditions laid down by the senate.

The significance of the utterance from the president who at all times had urged membership in the court and in the face of reports that the nations represented in the court would never accept the senate reservations to the protocol of adherence was not lost upon the crowd.

Applause greeted the announcement and swung into a general ovation as the president a minute later concluded his speech.

The address was the climax of a seven-hours visit Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge made to Kansas City, Mo., and its neighbor, Kansas City, Ks., today and was delivered before one of the greatest crowds the president ever has confronted.

Made in dedicating the $2,000,000 Liberty memorial with its tall shaft emblematic of the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night, which in earlier days guided a nation in critical times, it was heard by a vast audience stretched for over a quarter of a mile in all directions and it was estimated by officials to number at least one hundred and fifty thousand. Loud speakers carried the words and music to all, while the radio carried them to unseen thousands more.

The exercises, which included also addresses by Secretary Dwight W. Davis of the war department and Howard R. Savage, national commander of the American Legion, were followed by a public invitation luncheon at the Hotel President, attended by President and Mrs. Coolidge, and then by an automobile ride to Kansas City, Kan., marking the first time the president has been on the soil of Kansas. He left for Washington by special train at 3:30 this afternoon.

Clear, crisp weather greeted the president, while a cutting wind swept the mall which the memorial faces, but unmindful of all, Mr. Coolidge stood bare headed and without an overcoat during the more than 40 minutes he spoke.

The world court pronouncement of the president was brief and made at the conclusion of a discussion of problems arising out of the war. This included a reference to national antagonisms against this country and a denial of charges that the United States had merely profited out of the war.

No mention was made of domestic politics, for, although the first formal address Mr. Coolidge has made since the elections, the event was arranged on a non-political and non-partisan basis.

"A permanent court of international justice has been established," the president said in setting forth his position on the world court, "to which nations may voluntarily resort for an adjudication of their differences. It has been subject to much misrepresentations, which has resulted in much misconception of its principles and objects among our people. I have advocated adherence to such a court by this nation on condition that the statute or treaty creating it be amended to meet our views. The senate has adopted a resolution for that purpose.

"While the nations involved cannot yet be said to have made a final determination, and from most of them no answer has been received, many of them have indicated that they are unwilling to concur in the conditions adopted by the resolution of the senate. While no final decision can be made by our government until final answers are received, the situation has been sufficiently developed so that I feel warranted in saying that I do not intend to ask the senate to modify its position. I do not believe the senate would take favorable action on any such proposal, and unless the requirements of the senate resolution are met by the other interested nations I can see no prospect of this country adhering to the court."

In speaking of conscription, Mr. Coolidge said that it is more and more becoming the conviction of students of adequate defense that in time of national peril the government should be clothed with authority to call into service all of its man power and all of its property under such terms and conditions that it may completely avoid making a sacrifice of one and a profiteer of another.

"To expose some men to the perils of the battle field while others are left to reap large gains from the duress of their country is not in harmony with our ideal of equality," he said. "Any future policy of conscription should be all inclusive, applicable in its terms to the entire personnel and the entire wealth of the whole nation."

After asserting that the Armistice of 1918 "did not mark the end of the war, for the end is not yet," Mr. Coolidge declared for adequate military, naval and aviation preparedness while he emphasized that the United States does not seek to be a military power and "cherishes no imperialistic designs." At the same time, he reiterated the desire of the Washington government for a lessening of competitive armaments.

"We have at last entered into treaty with the great powers," he said, "limiting in a large degree competitive naval armaments. We are engaged in negotiations to broaden and extend this humane and enlightened policy and are willing to make reasonable sacrifices to secure its further adoption."

In mentioning the war debts owed the United States by foreign countries and their adjustment, Mr. Coolidge again emphasized that "moderation is a mutual international obligation.

"Our government," he said in this connection, "has steadily maintained the policy of the recognition and the sanctity of international obligations and the performance of international covenants. It has not believed that the world, economically, financially, or morally, could rest upon any other secure foundation. But such a policy does not include extortion or oppression. * * * We have therefore undertaken to deal with other countries in accordance with these principles, believing that their application is for the welfare of the world and the advancement of civilization."

Reports that Europe dislikes America were met by the president with the statement that he wanted "to be sure that the attitude and acts of the American government are right," and that he was "willing to intrust to others the full responsibility for the results of their own behavior."

"If we are to have peace," he asserted, "we are to live in accordance with the dictates of a higher life. We shall avoid any national spirit of suspicion, distrust, and hatred toward other nations. The Old World has for generations indulged itself in this form of luxury. The results have been ruinous. It is not for us who are more fortunately circumstanced to pass judgment upon those who are less favored, in their place we might have done worse. But it is our duty to be warned by their example and to take full advantage of our own position. We want understanding, good will, and friendly relations between ourselves and all other people. The first requisite for this purpose is a friendly attitude on our own part. They tell us that we are not liked in Europe. Such reports are undoubtedly exaggerated and can be given altogether too much importance. We are a creditor nation. We are more prosperous than some others. This means that our interests have come within the European circle where distrust and suspicion, if nothing more, have been altogether too common. To turn much attention to us indicates at least that we are not ignored.

"While we do assume no responsibility for the opinions of others we are responsible for our own sentiments. We ought to be wise enough to know that in the sober and informed thought of other countries we probably hold the place of a favored nation. We ought not to fail to appreciate the trials and difficulties, the suffering and the sacrifices of the people of our sister nations, and to extend to them at all times our patience, our sympathy, and such help as we believe will enable them to be restored to a sound and prosperous condition."

There was little need to inquire how the World (war began, Mr. Coolidge said in discussing the conflict.

"Nothing is to be gained from criminations and recriminations," he declared. "We are attempting to restore the world to a state of better understanding and amity. We can even leave to others the discussion of who won the war. It is enough for us to know that the side on which we fought was victorious."

ARMISTICE DAY ADDRESS BY GENERAL PERSHING

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Recapture of the spirit of eager and united effort which came to the top of American life during the World war would equip the nation with its most effective weapon in solution of the problems of peace, two military leaders told Armistice day audiences today.

General John J. Pershing asserted that the evils of lawlessness, of political corruption and of careless citizenship could be overcome and put to rout if the American citizen would vote with the same energy and ingenuity he manifested in war time.

Major General John F. O'Ryan of New York told a peace congress that the unity and discipline of war time would solve in this generation, the problem of ending war.

General Pershing spoke before the Kiwanis clubs of the city and lamented that the "on our toes" spirit of eight years ago had been lost with the signing of the armistice, giving way to the old negligence about governmental affairs.

O'Ryan, addressing a gathering sponsored by 30 civic organizations interested in world peace, upbraided peace workers for their lack of unity and their failure to temper visionary views with business-like methods.

"War," said the former commander of the 27th division, "is a highly organized business, supported by governments. It does its thinking without prejudice. It is disciplined.

"Peace! We have 63 organizations in the United States working separately and independently to attain it. Their leadership varies in efficiency and objectives. One group would have all the feet pledge themselves never to bear arms. Another would prevent children from playing with tin soldiers. Another would cut all the military pictures out of school text books, one wants the league of nations without the world court, and another wants the court without the league.

"Only as a last resort, they get together to pray.

"We must have organization. Every good isn't coming in a year or a decade. But it can come in our lifetime, if we will organize in time of peace, to develop a dependable substitute for war.

"Pending development of an organization to insure world peace, we must maintain our defense against war. Some of you won't like to hear me say that, but only when we prove the worth of a substitute for war can we disband our armies.

"Man, not armaments, is the trouble maker. We must work for peace by developing the mechanism of peace in a business like fashion."

HOW ARMISTICE DAY WAS CELEBRATED IN THE STATE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11—(AP)—Again today Connecticut harked back in memory to those days eight years and more ago, when the 103nd infantry, on the Chemindes Dames and at Toul, at St. Mihiel and at Marcheville, and around Verdun, was winning decorations for its regimental colors and for its members in that greatest of armed classics, the World war.

Country villages today, as in 1917 and 1918, joined with the cities in patriotic devotions. The two minutes of silent prayer at 11 o'clock was supplemented with public gatherings, dedications and American Legion observances.

Norwich had the most elaborate observance, with Governor Trumbull and staff among those participating in the dedication of a cannon, a trophy of the war, in Plainfield, the latter's home town, a captured German howitzer was presented by the Legion post to the town with appropriate ceremonies.

Seymour reproduced, as nearly as possible, the conditions eight years ago today when an armistice put an end to actual hostilities.

New Haven closed a full day with dedication of the "Hill" World war memorial building and a public gathering in Woolsey hall. At Waterbury the day's observance ended with a brilliant display of fireworks.

President R. B. Ogilby, of Trinity, told Manchester people, in an Armistice day address, that "we are still involved in hatreds almost as bitter as the hatreds of war. * * * The peace cost us too dear. * * * God grant us eyes to see that the conflict against wrong is not over."

At Rockville and Bristol and Meriden memorial services were held. In all the observances of the day the American Legion took a leading part.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS TOO TEMPERATE FOR BORAH

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—"Mighty good as far as it goes," was the comment today of Chairman Borah, of the senate foreign relations committee, on President Coolidge's Kansas City address, in which the chief executive said that unless the other nations accepted the senate reservations to the protocol of adherence to the world court, there would be little prospect of this country becoming a member.

Senator Borah was a leader in the group of 13 senators who vigorously opposed senate adoption of the resolution of adherence even with the reservations suggested by Presidents Harding and Coolidge and later strengthened by those leading the fight for adherence.

ASPHYXIATED BY GAS ESCAPING FROM STOVE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—Elizabeth Ann Mitchell, widow of H. Ryley, 73, was found dead at her home, 12 Ocean avenue tonight, death having resulted from gas asphyxiation. She is survived by several children. Mrs. Ryley endeavored to light the burners of a gas cooking oven early this evening and it is believed that the gas failed to ignite, allowing fumes to escape into the room and causing gradual asphyxiation, for her lifeless body was found on the floor and close to the stove about an hour after the aged woman had entered the kitchen to do some cooking. Medical Examiner Charles Kaufman was notified of the death of Mrs. Ryley and rendered an opinion that death was accidental.

OWL WAS SHOT AFTER BREAKING THREE WINDOWS

ATHOL, Mass., Nov. 11.—(AP)—After breaking three windows in a hen coop on the Neals farm in Royalston, a large brown owl was shot today as he attempted to drag an eight pound goose through a window. A white owl also was shot on the farm this week. Greatly enjoyed by those who awaward after attempting to steal a chicken. Both had a wing spread of more than four feet. Farmers say the appearance of the birds indicate a hard winter.

HEARING ON FISHING AT PINE POINT POND

HARTFORD, Nov. 11.—(AP)—A hearing relative to the closing of Pine Point pond for fishing until May 1, 1927, will be held by the state board of fisheries and game in the Enfield town court room, Thompsonville, Monday evening at 8 o'clock. The Enfield Fish and Game association has recommended to the state board that winter fishing be prohibited in the pond.

Armistice Day Was Celebrated in France

PARIS, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Armistice day was celebrated in Paris and throughout France and the main centres of her far flung colonies and protectorates with all the military pomp the French know how to display in honor of the nation's dead and commemorate the great events of her history.

The ceremony at the Arc De Triomphe at 11 o'clock this morning began with a one-minute silence. President Doumergue, Premier Poincare, the members of his cabinet, the marshal of France, the American ambassador and representatives of the allied and associated powers reviewed the great military parade after floral tributes had been laid on the tomb of the unknown soldier. The troops marched under a sunny sky, with just enough breeze to stir the shot-torn battle flags massed around the tomb.

A striking feature of the day was the way in which Marshal Foch, generalissimo of the allied forces and the man who laid down the armistice terms, passed among the crowds searching for his lost automobile, practically unrecognized and unacclaimed. At some points, however, there were cheers for the marshal, but the lack of demonstration was in marked contrast to the ovation given him in the great Victory parade, July 14, 1919.

The patriotism of the crowds was not in question, for they cheered the marching troops lustily and bellowed stinging reminders to careless foreigners who had neglected to uncover when the battleflags passed.

American flags were noticeably absent from many building decorations for the first time since the anniversary was celebrated. But the color guard of the Paris post of the American Legion was given a place of honor beside the unknown's tomb.

Rear Admiral Guy H. Burrage, commander of the United States fleet in European waters, placed a wreath on the tomb early in the day. Myron T. Herrick, the American ambassador, delivered the annual Armistice address at the service in the American procathedral.

PROFITS FOR STOCKHOLDERS OF GENERAL MOTORS CORP.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—General Motors corporation made a generous holiday distribution to its stockholders today, aggregating $34,800,000 for the quarter, part of which was an extra cash dividend of $4 a share on the common, payable in the first week of the new year.

This action by the directors, said Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., president, was the best possible evidence not only of the general position of the corporation from the standpoint of its current business and its financial position, but it also expressed the confidence of the directors as to the future.

At the last quarterly meeting in September, the directors declared a stock dividend of 50 per cent, bringing the total number of outstanding common stock to 5,700,000 shares, and authorized the payment of the regular quarterly dividend of $1.75 on the additional stock issued at that time. In May, an extra cash dividend of $4 a share was paid. In March, the directors raised the regular dividend from a $6 to a $7 annual basis. A year ago, an extra cash dividend of $5 was authorized, being paid on Jan. 7 on this year.

In the first nine months this year the corporation earned nearly $150,000,000 or more than had been earned in any previous full year of its history. This was equivalent of $17.77 a share on the common stock compared with $9.71 in the first nine months of 1925, making allowande for the increase in common stock.

TWO GIRLS MYSTERIOUSLY SHOT DOWN IN CHICAGO

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Two mysterious girl shootings confronted police of Chicago Heights and Blue Island, suburbs tonight, when Esther Hass, 13 years old school girl, was probably fatally wounded while working in the field near the family home.

A twin sister working with her escaped injury. The first shooting happened in a Chicago Heights street last night, where Victoria Dorothy Delemata, 15, was slain by an unknown assailant as she was returning from taking her violin lesson. The motive for the attacks remains unknown.

The two suburbs are about 18 miles apart.

Chicago Heights police veered from a theory of moron attack to one of mistaken identity in the slaying of the Delemata girl.

One man whose identity was closely guarded was in custody. Evelen men were arrested but ten were released after they were questioned.

The mistaken identity theory was given weight by reports to the police, that the slayer ran away and then returned to peer at the face of his victim, and that a man forced his way into the undertaking establishment in which the girl's body rested, looked closely at it and dashed away in confusion.

BILLS TO REDUCE THE STRENGTH OF FRENCH ARMY

PARIS, Nov. 11—(AP)—Reduction of the total number of men under arms in France from 650,000 to 400,000 is called for in three bills which will be introduced in the chamber of deputies on the reopening of parliament tomorrow. The measures also call for a reduction in the period of compulsory military service from eighteen to twelve months.

The bills, which will be introduced by Minister of War Painleve, provide for the calling of conscripts at 21 instead of at 20 and for the recruiting of volunteers numbering more than 100,000. Under this system the young soldiers will devote their entire years training to purely military instruction.

SHAFLIN OF LEDYARD DOES NOT WANT OFFICE

HARTFORD, Nov. 11.—(AP)—An aversion not only to politics but to exercising the right of suffrage is shown in a statement of expenses, required of all candidates for public office, filed by Alonzo C. Shaflin, of Ledyard, candidate for judge of probate in the recent election. Mr. Shaflin expended nothing and adds that "I did not attend caucus or go to vote and if I had been elected I should not have qualified. I am no politician and I do not want any office

Break in the Textile Strike in Passaic

PASSAIC, N. J., Nov. 11.—(AP)—A measure of peace settled today on the textile strike area, driven for nine months by conflict almost unprecedented in industrial history of the United States. That measure, however, affected only 600 of the 10,000 workers who have been jobless or quit the industry since outbreak of the strike, and only one of the nine affected mills.

The agreement was reached by William E. Gaunt, president of the Passaic Worsted Spinning company, and James Starr, international vice president of the United Textile Workers of America.

The affected mills had at one time organized and agreed among themselves not to settle the strike individually. Today's action, therefore, was considered by many observers as an "ice-breaker," to eventual settlement by all.

The settlement was brought about by a citizens' committee appointed two weeks ago at the suggestion of Mr. Starr. Officials of the Forstmann and Huffman company, operating mills in Passaic and Gerfield, announced that as far as they were concerned, they would not recede from their previous attitude which refused to concede the existence of a strike.

Officials of others mills have as yet made no move toward reconciliation.

Today's settlement provided for: Right to organize; the right of collective bargaining; an open shop; arbitration in the event of grievances; strikers to be re-employed without discrimination; and no employment of outside help until strikers have been taken care of.

SURRENDERED AFTER SLAYING OF THREE NEGROES

HOUSTON, Texas, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Fearing he might become a victim of mob violence, H. S. Crowder, Jr., farmer boy, tonight surrendered while authorities were seeking the seven raiders who slew three Negroes at a cabin 25 miles from here late last night.

Although making no statement concerning the killings, Crowder was placed in jail and an information charging him with murder was filed.

Crowder is a brother of Wallace Crowder, whose murder a week ago by a Negro was believed by authorities to have inspired a revenge that was climaxed by the raiders' attack here last night.

Scores of Negroes within hearing of the ranch where the killings took place fled to the woods for a night of safety while hundreds of shots were fired into the besieged cabin. Two of the Negroes, one a woman, burned to death when the cabin was fired, and the third was riddled with bullets and buckshot when he stepped outside.

The life of a fourth occupant, Frazier Holmes, was spared because of his 90 years.

The aged Negro related tonight that he and his three friends were sitting around a stove in the front room of the house last night when the attackers, attired as cowboys and wearing somberons, drove up in an automobile, and commenced their siege of the cabin after slaying the Negro who went to the door.

Word of the killings was learned by authorities today when one of the frightened Negroes stole away from the cabin in the woods and notified a country storekeeper a few miles away.

HARTFORD, Nov. 11.—(AP)—John M. Wadhams spent $201.34 in his unsuccessful effort to win the republican nomination for lieutenant-governor at the state convention in September, according to a statement of expenses filed by him today with the secretary of the state. L. Cleveland Fuessenich, democratic nominee for sheriff of Litchfield county, spent $545.07 in his unsuccessful campaign for election, his statement shows. Fred M. Mansour of Bloomfield, socialist candidate for congressman from the first district, listed his expenditures to a $5 contribution to the Hartford branch of the socialist party.

Candidates for state senator who filed statements today were as follows:

NOBEL PRIZE AWARDED GEORGE BERNARD SHAW

LONDON, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Although George Bernard Shaw for many years enjoyed a reputation as a mephistophelian firebrand, socialist, pacifist and detractor of his own country and has lived long enough to witness his own apotheosis, mild surprise was caused today when it was announced at Stockholm that he had been chosen to receive the Nobel prize for literature for 1925.

The despatches from Stockholm did not indicate the specific grounds for awarding him this honor, but it is generally assumed to be on account of his fame as a dramatist.

Bernard Shaw, himself, when questioned, appeared to share the public surprise and professed ignorance.

"It is a great mystery to me," he said, and added laughingly: "I suppose it was awarded to me because I wrote nothing at all that year."

PROPOSALS FOR SETTLEMENT OF BRITISH COAL STRIKE

LONDON, Nov. 12—(AP)—After lengthy conferences between the cabinet coal committee, and the coal-mine owners and miners' executive, which were concluded shortly after three o'clock this morning, the government handed to the miners' executives memorandum or proposals for settlement of the coal strike.

This memorandum, it is understood, will be submitted to a conference of miners' delegates today, but it is not known whether the executive will recommend that the proposals be ac-

SENATOR BORAH CALLS FOR REINSTATEMENT OF FRAZIER

Old Guard Leaders Were Surprised by the Action—Borah's Move Was Made After Conference With Frazier and Others of the Republican Insurgent Group—Frazier of North Dakota, Banished After the Coolidge Landslide in 1924, Wants the Committee Places to Which His Three Years of Service Entitle Him.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—With the political control of the next senate hanging in the balance, Senator Borah, of Idaho, today called on the republican leaders to reinstate in the party councils Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota, who was banished after the Coolidge landslide in 1924.

The action of the Idaho senator apparently took by surprise the old guard leaders, who have been disinclined to discuss even the possibilities of senate organization a year in advance of the necessity for meeting what now appears a perplexing problem.

Senator Borah's move, taken after full conferences ith Frazier and others of the republican insurgent group, is expected to bring about early action in the case of North Dakota senator, who wants now the committee places to which his three years of service entitle him.

While many things may happen within a year to alter the senate situation, as the political divisions now stand Frazier appears to hold the key to the organization problem since his vote could be used to cause a long deadlock like that of four years ago, when the republican insurgents finally forced the selection of a democrat as chairman of the important interstate commerce committee.

That the republicans will make every effort to organize the new senate is indicated by the appeal made yesterday by Senator Curtis of Kansas, their senate leader, to the republicans of Maine to elect one of their party at the special election on November 29 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Bert M. Fernald.

Even if the republicans are successful in that contest, they will have only 47 seats in the new senate to an equal number for the democrats. Shipstead farmer-labor, Minnesota, and Frazier holding the other two places, with Frazier reinstated, the republicans would need only one more vote to have a clear majority for organization, provided all the insurgents remained within the fold until the contests for senate offices had been filled.

Senator Curtis' appeal to Maine republicans started a swirl of excitement at Capitol Hill and this was given impetus by Senator Borah's letter to Senator Watson. This communication was not made public since it will be a day or two before it reaches the committee chairman, who is recuperating in Indiana from injuries received in an automobile accident.

Action on the suggestion of the Idaho senator will be deferred until just before or immediately after congress convenes on December 6. The republicans, then will hold a party conference and the committee on committees will fill vacancies on the various committees caused by the deaths of Senators Cummins, of Iowa, and Fernald.

Both republican conference and senate action would be necessary to confirm the reinstatement of Frazier to the party councils and there would have to be further readjustments in committees with some republicans who have taken their seats since March 4, 1923, shoved down in the list and thus removed that much from committee chairmanships.

CONSPIRACY TO STEAL FROM ESTATE OF PRIEST

BOSTON, Nov. 11—(AP)—A conspiracy to steal $75,000 from the estate of a Cambridge priest who died last year was charged in indictments under which Miss Catherine Doody of Cambridge, Francis Mulcahy of Worcester and the latter's wife, Rachel, were arraigned today before Judge Pondick in superior here. All were admitted to bail. Hearing was fixed for December 7.

Police inspectors said Miss Doody had made a full confession of a plan to rob the estate of her uncle, Rev. Michael J. Doody, pastor of St. Mary's church, Cambridge, who died a year ago. The officers said the woman had made restitution to the amount of $60,000 and had told them that $10,000 went to the Mulcahy family as their share, while $5,000 had been spent.

"The $75,000, the police said, was taken from a trust fund of which Father Doody had been one of two trustees the other being Rev. William H. McDonough of East Boston. The indictments charged that Miss Doody forged checks aggregating $75,000 on the Boston bank in which this trust fund was deposited, and that Mulcahy had the checks cashed in Worcester.

DISTURBANCES IN DUBLIN MARRED ARMISTICE DAY

DUBLIN, Nov. 11—(AP)—Excitable soldiers returning this afternoon from Phoenix park where Armistice day celebrations were held, got out of hand in the streets of the city, and the police resorted to baton charges to stop the disorders. Several persons are injured, and required hospital treatment.

One body of youthful republicans marched along Grafton street shouting: "Down with King George." The police clubbed them severely, causing a wild stampede. Large bodies of police later patrolled the streets in cars.

Phoenix park was the scene of the assassination of Lord Frederick Cavendish, chief secretary for Ireland, and Thomas H. Burke, under-secretary, in 1882.

Armistice day ended with a series of riotous demonstrations and the police again were called on to disperse the fighting crowds with their patons.

Nine persons were sent to the hospital and many others were hurt in the various melees throughout the day.

ARMISTICE DAY STRIKE OF PUPILS IN SIOUX CITY

SIOUX CITY, Iowa, Nov. 11—(AP)—Because the school authorities would not declare Armistice day a holiday more than 1,500 high school students declared a "strike" this afternoon which resulted in the release from classes of 13,500 pupils in other schools throughout the city. The students declared the strike a "huge" success when Superintendent of Schools M. G. Clark said they would not be punished.

The walkout originated at Central high school during the lunch period, when "agitators" circulated the word that a "strike" was to take place after the period and that no student was to return to class.

A parade was formed and a noisy procession was led to the business district for a demonstration.

Central high authorities, with only a handful of pupils remaining, decided to dismiss school for the day. Superintendent M. G. Clark then ordered all schools in the city dismissed.

HOW LEOPOLD AND ASTRID ARE SPENDING HONEYMOON

BRUSSELS, Nov. 11—(AP)—Crown Prince Leopold and his bride, the Princess Astrid, spent the first day of their honeymoon amid the picturesque beauty and quiet of the Royal Castle Ciergnon, sheltered from the world by forests on all sides.

It is understood that the couple will spend a few days at Ciergnon and will then return to Brussels next week.

The windows of Ciergnon look out upon a great Panorama toward the French Ardennes across the valley of the River Lesse.

Plans are being formulated for a tour of the prince and princess through the larger cities of Belgium in order to give as many of the future subjects of the royal couple an opportunity to

STRIVING TO REFINANCE THE SACO-LOWELL SHOPS

BIDDEFORD, Nov. 11.—(AP)—A plan for refinancing the Saco-Lowell shops, a Massachusetts corporation engaged in the manufacture of cotton textile machinery at Lowell, Biddeford, Me., and other New England cities, was announced tonight by the directors and will be presented to a special meeting of stockholders here on Nov. 22.

Declaring that there is no possibility of the company's meeting $4,000,000 in notes held by banks in the course, the directors advocate a plan to raise not less than $800,000 additional capital by a new issue of convertible notes. The plan also contemplates the organization of a new subsidiary corporation to be known as the Kitson Machine shop, to which would be transferred the title and rights in the so-called Kitson plant and Walker Street foundry in Lowell together with other assets which would enable the new corporation to operate as a separate manufacturing unit.

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—A $200,000,000 financial operation for the country's largest oil corporation, the Standard Oil company of New Jersey, probably will be undertaken within a few days. Plans which have been under consideration for many months involve the retirement of the company's 7 per cent preferred stock and the issuance of new debentures and common shares, aggregating $200,000,000 or more.

Directors of the company are scheduled to meet tomorrow to consider redemption of the preferred stock, which is callable at a price of $115 a share.

If this step is authorized, it is expected that a nationwide banking syndicate will be formed under the leadership of J. P. Morgan & Co., to underwrite the new securities.

ARMISTICE DAY OBSERVED AT WINDHAM HIGH SCHOOL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 12—The Rev. James G. Graham, pastor of the Windham Center Congregational church, delivered a stirring patriotic address in connection with the Armistice day observance at the Windham high school auditorium Thursday morning. During the course of his remarks he reasserted his belief that the pacifist is the deliberate murderer of thousands of the American boys who were killed in action during the late war. An overflow audience of students and townspeople were in attendance at the exercises. The Rev. Mr. Graham chided the attitude of the pacifist, the idealist and the internationalist in regard to preparedness, saying that he believed in giving our boys sufficient arms if some time again they are obliged to fight. He advocated to the young men of the country, service in national guard units and attendance at military training camps. The Rev. Mr. Graham favored in the course of his talk, America's entrance into a league of nations but he questioned the advisability of entering it just at this time.

The program opened with a march played by the Windham high school orchestra under the direction of Miss Elisabeth F. Hunt of the faculty. There were selections by the school chorus composed of both boys and girls under the direction of Miss Catherine H. Wheeler, also of the faculty and there were several others by the orchestra, all being of a patriotic nature.

The first speaker was Dr. (Captain) W. P. S. Keating, commander of the local post of the American Legion. Dr. Keating was introduced by Principal Robert A. Case and described the soldiers' reaction to the declaration of the armistice.

In the course of his talk, Rev. Mr. Graham said that he believed that the war ended too soon and that Germany was not sufficiently punished. He expressed himself as being strongly opposed to any disarmament plan which would leave the country defenseless and incapable of properly repulsing a foreign assault.

WILLIMANTIC TO ASK FOR STATE TRADE SCHOOL

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 11—According to the decision of the town school committee at its regular monthly meeting held Wednesday evening in the office of the secretary, Principal Egbert A. Case of Windham high school, this city is to make a bid to the state board of education for the establishment of a trade school here. At the October session of the board, Secretary Case was delegated to correspond with Dr. A. B. Meredith, commissioner of education, on this matter. Correspondence in regard to the question was read and after some discussion, it was voted to make formal application for the establishment of a trade school in Willimantic.

The amount of business coming up at the meeting was small and the session was of short duration. Chairman John Reilly presided and all members of the board except one were present. Secretary Case read the reports of the inspection of boilers in the various grammar schools of the city by the Hartford Steam Boiler company, showing them to be in good condition. The matter of free transportation for children from North Windham to the high school in this city was again taken up, having been brought to the attention of the committee at the previous meeting. At that time the committee felt that it did not have the power to make any such arrangement and that it was entirely up to the board of selectmen or to be acted upon at a special meeting of the town called for that purpose and the parents of the children had been so notified. The members of the board at the meeting Wednesday evening were of the same opinion as previously.

Frank D. Fenton, 80 died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Anson J. Olds of No 170 High street, Thursday morning, following an extended illness. The deceased was one of Willimantic's best known residents. He is survived by two sons, Town Clerk Frank P. Fenton of this city and Frederick A. Fenton of Florence, S. C.; one daughter, Mrs. Olds, with whom he resided, and one sister, Mrs. Helen E. Bliss of Storrs, who is 91 years of age. Mr. Fenton was born in Mansfield, January 10, 1846, a son of Isaac P. and Sarah (Campbell) Fenton. During his residence in Mansfield he was active in the civic life of the town. He was representative from Mansfield to the state legislature during the session of 1887 and for the following two years, first selectman of the town. Coming to this city in his fiftieth year, he opened a confectionery store at No. 62 Church street, and his success was immediate. Later he transferred his business to the building at the corner of Chestnut and Summit streets, enlarging it to a general grocery store and then moved to No. 234 Summit street. This business he sold to Frank P. Bradway in 1913. He then conducted a business of selling confectionery, ice cream and soft drinks at No. 237 Summit street which he disposed of a short time ago and retired. While in business in this city, he was noted as an ice cream manufacturer. The deceased was also engaged in the retail business in Mansfield before removing to this city. His acquaintances were many, both in this city and Mansfield. Possessed of an amiable disposition, he quickly made friends with all those with whom he came in contact. He was extremely interested in the political and civic affairs of his adopted city and town.

Lilly, Paul Frazier and William Hall. Killoprey Brothers were in charge of the arrangements.

NOANK

About 32 members of Washington council, No. 7, Jr. O. U. A. M., went to Wakefield, R. I., and attended the 31st anniversary of Perry council, No. 14. A special bus took the merchants on the trip. Chairman Norton of Wakefield gave an address on Americanism and an entertainment was put on by a company from Providence. Refreshments were served and dancing followed the meeting, music by a six-piece orchestra from East Greenwich.

A large birthday cake with 31 candles on it was given by the Daughters of America lodge of that town to Commodore Perry council. Everybody had a good time and the visitors returned to the village at an early hour in the morning. The men were in charge of Lloyd Brown, president of the Noank merchants.

The Durham club met in Tavern hall Wednesday evening and many old members turned out. The club gave the ex-service men of the village a time, when a fine supper of roast beef was served by Steward Edward Morgan. Later cigars were passed and speeches were made. Neil Morrison spoke when the war ended in France, eight years ago, and how men kissed each other and the women kissed the men and it was the happiest day of any soldier. Others made short speeches. A wrestling match was put on by William Mitzgrath, the pride of Mystic; it was a heavyweight match against Noank strong man, Big Mike Passi. Fitzgrath threw him in two straight falls, the first in six minutes with a half-Nelson and in the last one the pride of Mystic had to work hard to put the strong man to the mat. It took him one hour and ten minutes. A lightweight boxing match was next, Battling Labonty against Left-hook Deveau. This was a four-round draw in which the footwork of Labonty was good. The members of the club saw some of the best boxing and wrestling in a long while. The World war men thanked them for the good time given them.

A pumpkin raised by Herman Wilham, a farmer from Greeneville is the largest pumpkin seen in these parts; it weighs 85 pounds and is two feet high. He gave it to his brother, Fris Wilham, manager of Munger's market on Pearl street, where the prize pumpkin has been on exhibition. Now the prize is being cut up by Fris, who will give his friends a piece to make a pie for Thanksgiving. There is enough to make 60 pies. Some of the seeds are going to Maine, where farmers are trying to beat this record in the fishing village of Noank. This pumpkin was not raised on milk, as some farmers claimed. It could be struck with anything and yet was as solid as a rock. Wilham claims nothing at any fair can beat his prize-winner.

Fresh from the oven twice a day!

WHEN Mr. Walter Dietz purchased the Dolly Madison bakery, he at once set about reorganizing it and equipping it to supply the fine bread which, for forty years, has been associated with the Dietz name.

This new Dietz Bread Mr. Dietz honestly believes is the best he has ever baked.

He used to consider his old loaf perfect—with the perfection only years of experience, the finest ingredients and a wonderful recipe could give. But new experience has brought him even further skill—taught him the secret of new improvement which he has used in making the new Dietz Bread.

He has installed in the Dolly Madison bakery a wonderful new type of oven. It insures a new uniformity and dependability in baking which give added tenderness to the firm loaves, greater crispness to the evenly browned crust. With this new oven two bakings a day are possible, so that the delicious loaves reach your grocer twice a day—fresher than ever before!

Your own choice of ingredients

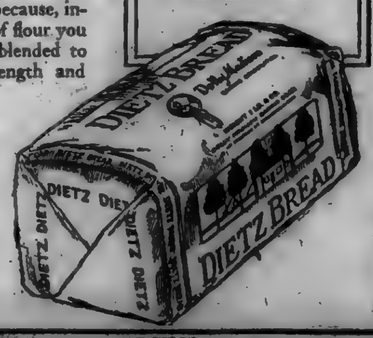
Dietz Bread is made of the same quality of ingredients you would use at home. But the flavor and texture of the loaf are even better because, instead of just the one kind of flour you use, several fine flours are blended to insure uniform gluten strength and rich wheat nourishment.

Get Dietz Bread in its homey red and green wrapper from your grocer today. It has the wholesomeness and honest goodness you require for your family. Dolly Madison Baking Corporation, Springfield, Mass.

FORTY years ago some of the best bread makers in New England began buying Dietz Bread.

Because they recognized in the loaf made by Dietz the same choice of ingredients, the same honest care, which they gave to their own baking. Dietz Bread was at home with the other well-cooked foods on their tables.

Father and son, the Dietz family, has carried on the tradition of making fine bread. Always they have had before them an ideal—a loaf perfect in appearance, in nutriment, in texture and in flavor.



DANIELSON

HOW ARMISTICE DAY WAS CELEBRATED IN DANIELSON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 11—A chorus of bells, whistles and fire alarms, with a sort of obligato by the siren on a big locomotive that happened to be in the railroad yards here at the time, marked the anniversary of the hour of the Armistice day on Thursday at 11 a. m. This and a generous display of flags constituted all of Danielson's observance of the great day. It was so vastly different from the tumultuous celebration of the armistice on November 11, 1918, that many felt it their duty to relate to the boys who were 'over there" at the time that we did much better here eight years ago. Strangely enough the overseas men are always anxious to hear all about just what Danielson was doing that day, having a lively interest in this.

About 50 legionnaires and a troop of Boy Scouts to the number of 30 left here shortly before the noon hour for Norwich to participate in the parade in that city. Three army trucks from the state armory here and private cars were used for the trip down the river.

At the Nazarene church Thursday afternoon Dr. Milton Rees, D. D., who is conducting three weeks of evangelistic meetings in Danielson for a group of churches, addressed a meeting exclusively for women. This afternoon at the same church Dr. Rees will address a meeting for children. Sunday morning Dr. Rees is to preach at a union service in Moosup. On Sunday afternoon he will conduct a meeting for men only at the Baptist church in Danielson. The Sunday evening service here also will be held in the Baptist church. Dr. Rees has created a very deep impression on the congregation that have heard his messages since the series of meetings here last Sunday evening.

Through the bureau of appointments at Yale university, Harry E. Back, Jr., son of Attorney and Mrs. Harry E. Back of this place, has been chosen as a private tutor for Rigan McKinney, youthful member of a wealthy Cleveland family, and is to leave for the Ohio city at once, remaining there until July 1. It is understood that the appointment is a lucrative one. Mr. Back is a junior at Yale. Of interest here is the fact that Mr. Back and Franklin Crosby of Danielson, both graduates of Killingly high school, were classmates and roommates during their freshman year at Wesleyan, this state. Then Mr. Crosby was out of college a year. This year up to this time they have been roommates at Yale. As Mr. Back will return to Yale next fall they will again be roommates and are scheduled to be graduated in the same class, as matters have now shaped themselves.

Now that Killingly's evening school is holding sessions, it may be pointed out that many who would be benefited by attendance will be welcomed and that this is the most opportune time to enroll for the courses to be given, as the classes are only starting and newcomers can go along with them without being under any special handicap.

Particularly is there advantage in attendance at this evening school for those who have come here from other lands and who have not had all the opportunity they desire to familiarize themselves with the language, theory and practices of government and ideals of this nation For all of these the night school opens a golden opportunity. There is no charge of attendance. Instruction is free and is by a competent corps of teachers.

In making ready for the Americanization institute that is to be held in the town hall next week Mrs. Cora Logee, charged with arrangements for the pageant that is to be a feature of the affair, has searched out representatives of 33 nationalities resident in the town of Killingly or across the bride in the town of Brooklyn. Up to Thursday morning Mrs. Logee had not found any Jugo-Slavs, Albanians or Czecho-Slavs and is anxious to have representatives of these nationalities in the pageant.

Outlining features of the pageant, Mrs. Logee said that a spokesman for each nationality will give greeting in his or her native tongue, expressing gratification of being in the United States. This pageant is certain to be of very great interest to all the people of Killingly, a cosmopolitan town, as the more than a score and a half of nationalities may indicate.

Walter P. White is seriously ill at his home on Carter street.

Candidates from Central Village and from Putnam will be included in a class that is to receive the second degree at a meeting of Quinebaug lodge of Odd Fellows here on Tuesday evening of next week.

The football game on Quinebaug field Thursday afternoon between teams of Killingly high and East Greenwich Academy was about the only holiday diversion in Danielson.

Organization work was the chief feature of the opening of Killingly's evening school at the high school on Thursday.

Raccoons are reported plentiful this fall, and the estimate is that more than 100 have been taken to date in territory within 15 miles of Danielson.

Harry Young, in charge of Young Brothers office at Dayville, is ill and was taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam for observation.

Mrs. George Alvord is ill at her home in Dayville.

Remodeling of the corner store in the Exchange block has progressed to such a point that it is expected to be ready for occupancy soon after December 1.

Henry C. Little of Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Thursday.

Observances of Armistice day were carried out in the schools of Killingly on Thursday by direction of Supt. W. E. Parker and as arranged by the teachers in the various schools.

These motorists who would retain the present registration numbers of their cars must have their applications in Hartford by Monday. Some of the new plates already have been received here by car owners.

Numbers of Danielson members of the club were at the grounds of the Putnam Country club Thursday afternoon for rounds of golf.

Gradual progress is being made toward the completion of the interior work on the south addition to the high school, this part of the building containing the auditorium and gymnasium. It is likely will be ready for occupancy about the first of the year.

Mrs. Walter Musgrave will have the members of the Fortnightly club at her home for a meeting next Tuesday.

The Civic federation has expressed its thanks for all the assistance received from the press, from the Connecticut mills, the Assawage mills and the Goodyear mills groups of canvassers and to the D. of P. Gas and Electric company, for window space, in making such a success of last Saturday's annual Tag day.

One group of youngsters added a new touch to recent Armistice day observance in this town by setting off some firecrackers and old bombs probably left over from the last observance of the Fourth.

Of interest to all of Windham county is the contract placed by the state highway department for the construction of 8 miles of 8-in water-bound macadam highway on the Scotland-Canterbury route, this promising the eventual completion of another east and west trunk line across the county, and a route for which there has been a demand for years.

At a birthday party in his honor at his home on the West Side this week, George Beesey was presented with an arm chair by friends and another gift from the family was a gold watch. A chicken supper was served.

Mrs. Ida White of Broad street was in Norwich with relatives and friends on Thursday.

Victor Anderson is in New York on a business trip.

Next week the flow of personal tax payments will begin and likely will continue through the month allowed for meeting this obligation.

Thanksgiving will be a year-long event, if you give her a New Hoover. For it will give her time for things far more worthwhile than housecleaning. Only $6.25 down, now, complete with Dusting Tools!

PUTNAM

CONN. LIBRARIANS TO MEET IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Nov. 11.—The annual meeting of the Connecticut Library association will be held at Odd Fellows' hall in this city next Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 16 and 17. The meeting will bring a number of well known people to the city and an interesting program has been arranged.

The public is cordially invited and the assurance is given that it will be well worth while. The program is as follows: 2:15, address of welcome, Eric H. Johnson, member of the board of the Putnam public library; 2:30, The Measure Stick for Rural Libraries, Miss E. Louise Jones, field secretary of division of public libraries, Massachusetts department of education; to be followed by general discussion; questions and comments are invited; 4, brief reports on the anniversary meeting of the American Library association, Miss Adele Martin, librarian at the public library at Westerly, and Miss Ruth B. McLean of the Connecticut State library; five minutes, from others present will be welcomed; 6:30, convention dinner at the Putnam inn; 8, Intellectual Freedom and Human Progress, Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, professor of historical sociology, Smith college; the evening social will be held in the Congregational church.

Nov. 17.—9:30, business reports, resolutions; Relations Between the Connecticut Library Association and the Connecticut Public Library Committee, Mrs. Belle Holcomb Johnson; Policy and Work of the Connecticut Library Association, Miss Corinne Bacon; discussion of these addresses, taking up the following points and any others that may be raised: (a) Shall we hold one or two meetings a year?, (b) Shall we hold a two day meeting?, (c) How far shall the association be responsible for group meetings?, (d) Shall the first vice president be a member of the executive board?, (e) Shall we publish an up-to-date list of members?, (f) Shall we publish a bulletin?, (g) Shall the education committee be continued? If so, what shall it do?; 12:30 luncheon; 2:15, Foreign Picture Books, Miss Leonore S. Power, New York public library.

Officers: President, Corinne Bacon, New Britain; vice presidents, Lindsey Brown, Waterbury; Wilbur F. Gordy, Hartford; Rev. Roscoe Nelson, Windsor; Mrs. Margaret R. DeLacour, Stratford; Mrs. H. E. Havens, Niantic; secretary, Grata E. Brown, New Britain; treasurer, Ruth E. McLean, Hartford.

Newell P. Banks of Detroit, match champion checker player of America, played 20 opponents simultaneously at the Putnam Masonic club rooms last evening. He won 17 of the games and three were "draws". Those who achieved "draws" were Judge M. H. Geissler, Henry J. Dubois and Harry K. Burton.

Then, while playing a game of pool with Eben S. Holden, Mr. Banks played six games of checkers with as many opponents, seeing none of the boards in this contest he won four games Judge Geissler and Frank E. Stanton both getting a draw". Mr. Banks also won the pool game, 100 to 70, and Mr Holden is a good pool player.

It was almost a marvelous exhibition of the proficiency to which a man may attain when one stops to realize that he had to visualize the position of the "men" on both sides of six boards, their position changing with every move that was made, and while doing this he was keeping his eye on the balls and not the boards.

There was a gallery of 35 or 40 that enjoyed the performance. John C. Kingsbury of Webster played in each contest. Judge Geissler was the only one who got two draws.

Mr. Banks came here on the invitation of the Putnam Checker club and he and the local checker clubs were the guests of the Masonic club, which also provided a lunch after the games.

The social committee of the Putnam Boy Scouts last night provided the parents and friends of the Scouts with an enjoyable entertainment in its first attempt at Parents' night at the state armory on Livery street. The program consisted of a number of selections played by the Israel Putnam school orchestra; Mrs. Walter Wheaton sang several contralto solos with Mrs. Nelson Lown at the piano and the scouts in advanced scouting gave a demonstration of scout work which included signalling and first aid. Refreshments were served. Music for dancing was provided by a new orthophonic Victrola through the courtesy of W. W. Averill.

The committee in charge of the affair was composed of the following Scouts: Manuel Anas, chairman; Harry Thayer, Clinton Sharpe and George Cornell.

Walter N. King and family are moving from their home at Grove and King streets to Woonsocket for the winter to be near Mr. King's work in that city. Mr. King was office manager of the Guerin company at Mechanicsville and now holds a position in the main office at Woonsocket.

John F. Craig of Brighton, Mass., has been engaged as junior instructor in carpentry for the State Trade school in this city. He was formerly employed as foreman of construction and is a licensed building inspector in Massachusetts. He will move his family to Putnam as soon as he finds a suitable place in which to live.

Every seat was filled at St. Mary's church to hear the recital given by Prof. R. H. Thompson of Three Rivers, P. Q., at the formal dedication of the new organ there. Prof. Thompson is master of the organ and his program was well selected and perfectly executed. Everyone present was delighted with the instrument and its full and perfect tones filled the church.

Miss Rhea Massicotte of Hartford added to the enjoyment of the evening by singing several numbers. She has a soprano voice of rare beauty and quality. Many people from out of town were present.

The first issue of "The Boy Scout Bugle," a monthly paper which is issued by the Boy Scouts of Putnam has been printed and contains some very interesting reading of the doings of the scouts. The merchants of Putnam have been very generous with their advertisements to help them along.

Dr. J. B. Kent, the veteran physician, who underwent an operation at the Day Kimball hospital several weeks ago has sufficiently recovered as to be able to be moved to the home of his son at Larchmont, N. Y., where he and Mrs. Kent are now making their home.

Miss Kathleen Gallagher of Toronto, Canada, who has been the guest of Miss Constance Russell for the past three weeks, returned to her home Thursday. Miss Gallagher was one of the party with whom Miss Russell was abroad last summer.

James E. Murray, paying teller at the Citizens' National bank, and exalted ruler of the Putnam lodge of Elks for the past year, underwent an operation at the Day Kimball hospital. He rallied nicely from the effects of it and it is expected that he will make a complete recovery but will have to remain at the hospital for several weeks.

Mrs. Alice Smith who has an apartment over Bartlett's store on Main street, while crossing in front of a Putnam-Norwich bus was knocked down but the wheels of the car did not run over her. She was later taken to the Day Kimball hospital where x-ray pictures were taken to see if any bones were broken. Aside from bruises and lacerations she is apparently uninjured.

Something has happened in the neighboring town of Webster to spoil radio reception there. For the past several weeks owners of radio sets there have threatened either to throw them out of the window or trade them for a Ford, and so far have not been able to locate the trouble. Webster for the past two years has had its own broadcasting station and on every Monday evening have given a program with Lawrence J. Daley as the announcer and who is as well known in this section because of his voice and its excellent carrying qualities as well as for the good judgment for what he says as Graham McNamee is to the radio public of the country.

THE TAX REFUND

The support which Secretary Mellon gives to the Coolidge plan of making an income tax refund is constructive. He sees where it is possible to give a reduction of 12 1-2 per cent. and suggests that it should be given in the form of credits for taxes due. It is consistent and sound and involves no danger of putting the treasury into a hole later on.

That there is to be a substantial surplus at the end of the present fiscal year is established. It promises to amount to $250,000,000. It is feasible to make a refund of a certain percentage to the income taxpayers, and in doing so there would be involved only such funds as are known to exist. There would be no rushing out and grabbing something in the unknown future only to find when time has elapsed that it wasn't there.

The idea of a refund or a credit comes at a time when there has been talk about a reduction in taxation. It is to be realized that the estimated surplus is being piled up during a period of prosperity. The tax laws are getting the full benefit of such conditions. It is expected and to be hoped that prosperity will continue. If it does all will be well and a tax reduction would be justified, but it is folly to gamble with the future in such a way as to indulge in tax cutting only to face the possibility of being obliged to restore the taxes. The only reason for rushing into such tax cutting would be political, and it is preferable to make sure you're right and then go ahead.

Returning a certain percentage of taxes collected and now existing in the form of a surplus does not endanger the future. It deals only with one year and does not mean the shutting off a future revenue in such a manner that the decrease cannot be met. It means a return to which the taxpayers are entitled and does nothing to restrict tax cutting after part of the future has revealed itself and it can be determined by conditions whether it is going to be justified. It is a sound and sensible move that is proposed, with full recognition given to the individual and to the nation. It is not a political flourish, the president asking for non partisan action.

GOVERNOR GENERAL CONTROLS

Conditions in the Philippines have not been what they should. Corrections of a drastic nature became necessary and they have been made or attempted by Governor General Wood, but because the Philippine legislature thought it should have more power it undertook to hamstring the governor general, or at least that serious handicap is made possible by the board of control in the islands which was created by the island legislature to include the governor general, the president of the insular senate and the speaker of the house. The business of the board was to name the directors of the government owned corporations, like the national bank, the development company, the railroad and the coal company, vital positions in connection with the economic life of the islands.

Submitted to the judge advocate of the army and the attorney general of the United States, opinions have been rendered by them to the effect that the legislature had no authority to create such a board, the duties of which are executive and rest with the governor general.

As the result of these decisions the board of control has been abolished and henceforth the governor general will exercise the authority which he is supposed to have but which the board of control was named for the purpose of taking away.

It will be recognized that the governor general has taken his time in overcoming this situation. He has not exercised his own interpretation of his duties alone, but he recognizes that he is vested with large responsibilities and if he is going to discharge them properly and be holden for his acts he must not be hampered by legislative acts which are unjustified.

It is an unfortunate thing that there has been so much opposition manifested on the part of the Filipinos. Through their political activities they have not aroused the sympathy they expected, but they have demonstrated that there is the best of reasons why the governor general should fill his office by having control, and that is what the latest move means he is going to do.

JOINING THE COURT

It is only a short time now before congress will be in session again. It is a session at which, under ordinary circumstances, something further might be expected in regard to the the part which this country is going to play relative to the world court, but as yet there have been no developments since the conference of the nations at Geneva. At that time it was agreed that the United States should modify its reservation if it were to adhere to the court protocol, the conference really deciding to introduce some reservations of its own, but as yet none of the individual nations have communicated with this government on their position, it being necessary for them to approve our reservations if we are to enter the court.

Thus it doesn't appear that there is anything further that congress is liable to do at the coming session unless something develops in the meanwhile. It could modify its position or it could refuse to adhere, and there is always the opportunity for doing a lot of talking that ends in no action.

What the nations did at Geneva gave no encouragement to this country to do anything further. Apparently the president from statements attributed to him is unwilling to even ask congress to consider modification along the lines suggested by the conference. The attitude of the other nations has served to strengthen the opposition to the court and should it come to a vote at this time the necessary votes, which were obtained by a narrow margin before, would probably be missing.

As much as the other nations may have wanted the United States to join the world court, the claim that we might enter on our own terms has failed of support. Intimations that were made to other nations that our adherence depended upon the acceptance of our reservations, but they failed to carry the necessary weight and the discussion that was created by the Geneva gathering has developed opposition rather than support for the adherence to the court. While the chances of our joining on our own terms seem to have disappeared, it is quite certain that there is increased opposition to getting into the court at all.

PRINCETON AND HARVARD

In the opinion of some it has been believed that the break in athletic relations between Princeton and Harvard could be patched up. The conditions are such that hardly warrant such a view. Rather is it to be regarded as a definite break, forecast to a certain degree but irreparable at the present time.

The real unfortunate circumstance in connection with it is that it should have been the apparent outcome of the Lampoon's efforts to be funny. It doesn't appear that Princeton is thin skinned or not ready to take a joke, but when such efforts are piled on top of Harvard's desire, indicated some time ago, to replace Princeton with some western university in its schedule, there was nothing else to do. It was evident, as pointed out in the communication setting forth the vote of the Princeton board, that the athletic contests between the colleges were not producing a feeling of friendly rivalry and mutual respect, and that being the case there was nothing else to do but to end them.

Under different circumstances the Lampoon's efforts would have been laughed at and forgotten. As it was they simply added fuel to the flame of discord and now that the rupture has come there will be a readjustment for such a time as is necessary to show that the athletic relations of the two institutions should be resumed.

It means the ending of long standing relations, will give Princeton an opportunity to rearrange its schedule and permit Harvard to match its skill with some of the western universities as it has desired. It is regrettable that it could not have been brought about, however, without the evidences of ill feeling, which cannot be covered up.

CROSSING RECKLESSNESS

Long Island is bothered by a large number of grade crossings. Some of them are very bad ones and they are much used. Their existence, however, isn't a secret and those obliged to negotiate them understand fully what it means and what the danger is. Nevertheless there have been 26 killed at such points thus far this year and 14 injured. In the latest accident it was found that the flagman was permitting a 15 year old boy to do his work.

At railroad crossings, especially the bad ones, there is a burden of responsibility resting upon the railroad and upon the highway users. Those who are given warning and refuse to respect it have no ground for complaint if they are involved in a collision, and yet they most certainly are justified in raising a howl, provided they are alive, in case they are given no warning at protected crossings and something happens.

The Brooklyn Eagle in commenting upon the Long Island crossing fatalities says: "Not all of these accidents can be attributed to carelessness on the part of railroad employes or to faulty protective system at the crossings. Reckless handling of automobiles is largely responsible. Drivers do not always approach crossings with efficient caution. They do not always slow down or scan the tracks for approaching trains, as they should. The fact that a crossing is unprotected by gates or signals does not absolve the drivers from the obligation to guard themselves."

This pointed comment may well apply to each and every grade crossing. Fatalities at such points can be greatly reduced and they would be if there was the proper amount of care used by the highway users.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Such celebrations, more often, are good for any community.

The man on the corner says: Two weeks from today and the turkey will be headed for the soup.

There's no mistaking the season of the year when they begin to cut the Christmas trees in Vermont.

Some remembered what to do when the flag went by, but there were too many who displayed no interest.

Still New England remains intact as other sections experience the effects of hurricanes, big and little.

With five hunters killed on the opening day of the rabbit season in Pennsylvania game must be pretty scarce.

Time and again it is demonstrated that there are those who will give neither their assistance nor three cheers to a worthy cause.

That may not be the object of it, but the elimination of many curves on the west side of the Thames is bringing Norwich and New London nearer together.

The Armistice day celebration was a pronounced success due to the efficient management, the fine cooperation displayed and the enthusiastic spirit of endorsement.

HOPE SPRINGS ETERNAL

"Sliced chicken sandwich, cup o' coffee and butterscotch sundae with lot of whipped cream," nonchalantly ordered the slim little girl in the smart tweed coat and tailored felt hat, settling back for a few minutes chat in the loop tearoom with her girl chum from the law office.

"Same, please," remarked her friend of the drooping chapeau and furtrimmed ensemble. "Now tell me, Dorothy, what you've been doing all week. How about this new sheik your brother just introduced you to—is he still crazy about you?"

"Well, no," admitted Dorothy, slowly.

"But," insisted her companion, "I thought you said he was just nuts about you and never looked at any other girls in the neighborhood and you thought he was the berries, too."

"That was last week," reminded the tailored one. "And since then I've learned a few things and I'm through with him—and every other man, too."

"Didn't he fall for your home-girl stuff?" quizzed her friend. "I remember you said he liked the way you could talk to him all evening in your parlor and fix up some little salad or somethin' at the end, just like home."

"Oh he liked it, all right. But I had an awful time talking to him about novels and movies and their highbrow stuff. That's all right for a while, but he couldn't Charleston and I was just aching to go out to dance somewhere. He liked the way I could fix up his favorite dishes, though—onion sandwich and divinity fudge and cocoa. I'm glad I can do dainty cooking, at least, and it was sort of peaceful at home. But when it came to the final fadeout in front of the dying ember of the gas log—well, he didn't know his stuff, I couldn't figure out why, either, for several evenings."

"Maybe he was one of those guys who like to wait a while before making up their minds whether they like a girl," interposed Helen. "That's really a good idea, you know—if they don't take too long."

"He waited a while," carefully said Dorothy, "but then I discovered that I wasn't so slow when it came to other dames. He told me just last night that the reason he enjoyed my company so much was because I was a lot like his 8-an-one back home. Can you feature that? After all the sandwiches wasted and boring evenings spent trying to think up entertaining conversation for him I told him that he was perfectly welcome to use our house to park in when he got lonesome, but that it cramped my style to be seen at home too many evenings, so I thought I had better go around with some of my other boy chums for change—the kind who take you out to dance and somewhere to eat afterward. He said, he was sorry I felt that way about it, I being the sister of his pal here. We didn't talk much longer, but said good-by, and now I won't have him hanging around any more."

"So you don't really care at all about the staying-at-home business?" queried Helen.

"Not a-tall. I want to speed up a little when I have a date—go to a show, at least. But I don't expect to bother with any man again, especially one from out of town."

Helen hesitated.

"Oh, I'm sorry, Dorothy," she said, finally, "because what I wanted to ask you was this: Wouldn't you come over tomorrow evening? Bill has a boy friend who has just come to the city from his home town and doesn't know any one and he told this fellow—Forrest is his name—all about you and Forest wanted to meet you. But since you don't like home dates any more and won't bother with men from out of town—"

"Oh, Helen, I didn't mean that at all," hastily spoke the plain-tweed girl, swallowing her last bite of whipped cream, "it's just that I was tired temporarily of being at home. Besides, I think out-of-town men are rather interesting. Sort of mysterious and with a different air about them. I would just love to come."

"Well, I never!" said Helen when she could collect her thoughts.—Chicago News.

Make the Most of Books

By James Hosmer Penniman, Litt. D

DeQuincey's Division of Books

DeQuincey has made a very famous division of books, which I quote at length because though often referred to, it is seldom seen in its entirety. He says: "There is the literature of knowledge and there is the literature of power. The function of the first is to teach; the function of the second is to move. The first is a rudder; the second, an oar or a sail. The first speaks to the mere discursive understanding; the second speaks, ultimately it may happen, to the higher understanding or reason, but always through affections of pleasure and sympathy.

"Remotely, it may travel towards an object seated in what Lord Bacon calls dry light; but proximately, it does and must operate, else it ceases to be a literature of power on and through that humid light which clothes itself in the mists and glittering iris of human passion, desire and genial emotions.

"Men have so little reflected on the higher functions of literature, as to find it a paradox of one should describe it as a mean of subordinate purpose of books to give information. But this is a paradox only in the sense which makes it honorable to be paradoxical. Whenever we talk in ordinary language of seeking information, or gaining knowledge, we understand the words as connected with something of obsolete novelty. But it is the grandeur of all truth, which can occupy a very high place in human interest, that it is never absolutely novel to the meanest minds; it exists eternally by way of germ or latent principle in the lowest as in the highest, needing to be developed but never planted. To be capable of transplantation is the immediate criterion of a truth that ranges on a lower scale. Besides which, there is a rarer thing than truth, namely, power, or deep sympathy with truth. What is the effect, for instance, upon society, of children? By the pity, By the tenderness, and by the peculiar modes of admiration, which connect themselves with the helplessness, with the innocence, and with the simplicity of children, not only are the primal affections strengthened and continually renewed, but the qualities which are dearest in the sight of heaven—the frailty, for instance, which appeals to forbearance, the innocence which symbolizes the heavenly, and the simplicity which is most alien from the worldly, are kept up in perpetual remembrance, and their ideals are continually refreshed. A purpose of the same nature is answered by the higher literature, viz: —the literature of power."

TRAFFIC

By the Albert Russel Erskine Bureau for Street Traffic Research, University of California, Los Angeles

Traffic signs and markers are of basic importance for the regulation of traffic in any city. The driving public is forgetful. Signs must be erected to set forth the more important provision of the local regulations at those places on the streets where specific obedience is required. It is just as important for the safe use of the streets to have traffic signs as it is for the railways to erect signs and signals for the operation of trains along their rights of way.

The general inadequacy of signs in most cities is an explanation of much of the present traffic law disobedience. The average driver wants to do the right thing and will do it when it is definitely presented to his attention by a sign. Good signs relieve the police of two-thirds of their work in traffic enforcement.

So important are traffic signs that it is recommended that they should be specifically required by the local ordinance for such provision as parking, left turns, through stop, and one way streets. In order that the public may be protected from an arbitrary enforcement of the law and to insure a proper exercise of their duty by public officials the local ordinance should contain the following provision: "No provision of this ordinance for which signs are required shall be enforceable against the alleged violator if at the time and place of the alleged violation, the sign herein required is not in proper position and sufficiently legible to be seen by an ordinarily observant person."

It will be necessary in the near future to set up national standards for traffic signs and signals in order that there may be uniformity throughout the country. In the meantime desirable uniformity can be obtained through regional understandings. Cities anticipating the adoption of standard designs should call a conference of the officials of the surrounding cities or better yet attempt to get a state-wide adoption.

In each city some definite department of government should be charged with the erection and maintenance of signs. There should be no harm in using signs supplied free of charge by an automobile club or some similar organization, but they should be erected only under the authority of a suitable public official. This official may be the chief of police, the commissioner of public works, the electrical department or some similar branch.

Paint markings upon the pavements and curbs are growing in popularity and in many instances perform a service that cannot be rendered by stanchion signs. Prohibited parking zones, cross-walks, safety-zones, angle parking regulations are examples of where pavement marking is applicable.

Cities should be liberal in appropriations for the development of a good sign system. It has a very close relation to street safety and congestion.

Fine grass and carbon dioxide are being used to prevent dust explosions in industry.

YOUR HEALTH

CARE OF THE NEW MOTHER

By W. T. Pride, M. D., Memphis, Tenn. Member Gorgas Memorial Institute

In the early ages of the human race, there was little necessity for special care of the new mother, for that was before our present type of struggles for existence and the spread of disease. But now the very manner of living and the customs of our people are constantly changing, the natural growth and functions of the body become complex, and child bearing ceases to be a normal function as intended by our Maker.

Hence, we must insist upon our young mothers using care and precaution not only before but at the time of birth and afterward.

Remember the mother had been nine months maturing this child and at the end passed through several hours of rather severe pain, all of which has its effect upon her physical condition. Now, since the baby is here she must conserve her strength in order to nourish it.

This means that she must have complete rest of mind and body for several weeks. Any undue excitement or mental stress will change the quantity and quality of the milk and the baby will not thrive. Over exercise will do the same thing and at the same time cause the mother to be a nervous wreck.

After the child is born the mother should remain in bed about two weeks, beginning to sit up on the 12th day and to walk on the 14th, so at the end of the third week she will be walking around the house.

She should not lie upon her back continuously as mothers used to do; but turn upon both sides and after ten days assume the knee chest posture for ten minutes night and morning.

After three weeks, in normal cases a tub bath may be safely indulged in. Up to this time a sponge or shower bath only is allowed.

Short automobile rides may be taken after three weeks; and not until the end of the fourth week should she be allowed to go up and down stairs. At the end of six weeks is the final examination.

Any lacerations or displacement are found and treatment instituted at this time. The necessary care will not only prevent future operations but cancer, for 95 per cent of cancers of the womb begin where it is lacerated at childbirth.

The first six weeks, of course, are the most important, but a certain amount of care is necessary for a year. Always get the best doctor available and do as he advises.

Stories That Recall Others

The Honors Are Even

John is the son of an enthusiastic college man. He naturally hears a great deal about the virtues of college and is especially interested in the athletics at the institution.

The other day he asked his father whether his college won all of its football games this year. On receiving an affirmative reply, he studied a moment and said: "And America has won all her wars."

Distance Lends Enchantment

This fellow was particularly interested in bringing in a California station through his radio set. The night was perfect for reception—cold, clear, calm. He waited until considerably after midnight and then started flashing for KFI, the Los Angeles station. After a while, faintly, there came to him the "breathing" of the loud speaker indicating that a station was in the offing. A little closer tuning and he caught the magic word "California." Still closer tuning and he caught it again.

In a case of that kind there is only one thing to do. That is to awaken the other members of the family and permit them to share in the jollification and provide proof. The family gathered around and waited patiently for the announcer to identify himself. Finally the announcement came so clearly there could be no mistake.

"And anybody who is interested in this excursion we are going to run to California can drop into the Henry Field Seed company here in Shenandoah," said the announcer, "and get more particulars about it. This is station KFNF, Shenandoah, Ia., signing off."

Moral: Don't think because you hear the announcer say good night in French, that he is broadcasting from Paris.

Predicting Epidemics

"Health observatories" from which forecast of approaching epidemics will be sent out, have been established in the 44 largest cities of Illinois. Dr. Isaac D. Rawlings, state health director, who adapted the idea from the government weather bureaus, says Popular Science Monthly.

Each station is supplied with a weekly statement showing the number and location of all reported cases of contagious disease in its territory. With this information the local health officer can determine the danger and take steps to overcome it.

Epidemics are no longer mysterious outbursts that spring out of nowhere and disappear just as suddenly, Dr. Rawlings declares in announcing the opening of these observations; they are recurrent disturbances like weather changes that can be predicted with reasonable accuracy. By the interpretation of carefully gathered statistics and by following the path of the disease, he asserts, it is possible to make an almost perfect forecast, which is of the greatest service in aiding preventive medical work.

On this principle, Dr. Herman Bundesen, Chicago health official, has compiled a unique chart by which with the aid of statistics he makes a graphic record of the course and frequency of a disease and by which he claims he is able to predict with certainty the nearness and intensity of any epidemic.

For hunting in Ireland has been unaffected by the change in Irish government. The transfer of the land to the ownership of the farmers has not interfered with the sport, and the relations between the people and the members of the hunt, which use their lands is more cordial than while landlordism existed. Each county has its hunt club, and the office of master of foxhounds is much coveted.

POLICE FORCE KEPT TRAFFIC MOVING RIGHT

An unprecedented rush of traffic filled the Norwich streets Thursday before and after the parade, but it was all handled with the greatest smoothness by the Norwich police force assigned for that purpose. The streets where the parade was to pass were kept clear and there was the minimum of congestion when the automobiles began to move after the parade had passed.

An ambulance from the Backus hospital was held at police headquarters during the afternoon for emergency cases but it was not called on.

The two reviewing stands were erected by Street Commissioner John C. Donovan.

Automobiles for the transportation of the guests of honor and officials were furnished by T. N. M. Lathrop, A. C. Swan Co. and Norwich Motor Sales Co.

Every boy in Norwich was inspired to be a bandman, after watching the fine appearing musicians in Thursday's parade.

GOVERNOR HONORS NORWICH BY ATTENDING CITY'S CELEBRATION

Norwich gave itself wholeheartedly Thursday to the celebration of Armistice Day and the 150th anniversary of the Declaration of Independence, and was joined in the observance by the whole of eastern Connecticut which sent thousands of visitors here to see the celebration as well as contributing several hundred who joined different Norwich organizations in the parade around which the celebration centered. Approximately 5,000 were in the line of march.

GOVERNOR JOHN H. TRUMBULL

Governor John H. Trumbull and staff as guests of the day, with the participation of military and naval forces, fraternal and civic societies in the parade made the observance a record breaker among similar events that have taken place in the city.

Governor Trumbull and staff reached here from Hartford just before coming to the Wauregan hotel, where noon, coming to the Wauregan hotel, where they were greeted by Charles Colt, general chairman, Gen. William A. Aiken and Commander E. C. Dunbar of the American Legion. Luncheon was served for the governor's party and other distinguished guests who included the commanding officers of the different U. S. army and navy units with the reception committee.

Moves Through Crowded Streets

Streets along the line of march in the business section were crowded to the curbs with spectators and in the residence section were lined solidly with parked automobiles when Major Charles A. Hagberg, grand marshal, gave the word for the parade to start from the Shetucket street and Main street corner shortly after 2 o'clock. Under the crisp November air and bright sunshine, the marchers stepped out smartly while their flags and banners snapped in the breeze, as if in answer to the salute from the bunting and flags fluttering from every building along the line.

The line moved along Main street as far as Burnham square, there countermarching to pass through Franklin square in front of the stand from which Governor Trumbull reviewed the parade, which proceeded to Washington square and up Washington street to reach Chelsea parade where the German cannon was to be dedicated.

At Chelsea Parade

As soon as the last of the line had passed the reviewing stand, Governor Trumbull was hurried to Chelsea parade, where a stand had been erected to the exercises which were brief. The programme opened with the Star Spangled Banner played by the massed bands, directed by the leader of the U. S. Coast Guard band of New London.

Rev. Edward C. Dunbar, pastor of the First Baptist church, who is commander of the American Legion in this city, introduced Governor Trumbull, with the following words:

One hundred and fifty years ago the people of this land declared themselves a nation. Many communities have celebrated this event in one way or another. The program today is our recognition of this event in our history.

Eight years ago today marked the close of the World war. Armistice day may have various meanings to different people but to the ex-service men and women it has at least two meanings. One thought is "of what human beings gave, risked, endured, of the treadmill of drill, marches, dugouts; of wild grinding on will in puncturing, slashing, mashing, tearing and rending of human flesh" which in so many cases ended in death. November 11, 1918, marked an end of all this. Another meaning is the hope that the youth will never be called upon to go through such a treadmill again.

In view of the fact that a Norwich citizen, the Honorable Samuel Huntington was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence and because of the lives represented by the names on yonder memorial tablet it is fitting for us to pause for this tribute.

It is with honor that I present His Excellency, the Honorable John H. Trumbull, governor of the state of Connecticut.

Governor Trumbull Speaks

Governor Trumbull spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and My Fellow Countrymen:

It is a privilege and a pleasure for me to be here today and to take part in these exercises commemorating the ending of the greatest war in all times. I congratulate the committee in charge and the citizens of Norwich for the completeness of the program and I commend you for the magnificent spirit displayed.

Eight years ago today peoples of many nations lifted up their voices in joyous thanksgiving. Millions of hearts thrilled anew to a word which seemed to have almost its meaning on the lips of even the most hopeful—that magical word "peace."

Today we are gathered together and our hearts are again filled with thanksgiving and we come here to manifest it, to once more ponder and think of those who obtained it—and rededicate ourselves to the noble ideals which have ever been the beacon lights of a nation's safety—the ideals of liberty and freedom, and a continuance of service in the nation's cause through times of peace.

We should on this day commemorate our World war dead. We should rejoice at our victory, we should give thanks for our blessings assured through our sacrifices in blood. It is a day that we should rededicate and reconsecrate ourselves to higher and finer and nobler ideals, and a day that should inspire us to a finer determination to solve the problems before our country, and combat the enemies within. There is no better time than on Armistice day to take stock of what we are doing to keep faith with those who served us well and who paid the last fathom of devotion.

Our services are not strictly memorial in the same sense as Memorial day, but rather a day of reckoning and reverence. It is an occasion to reconsider and enliven that spirit of "Americans all" of the war days. We must impress upon the oncoming generations that if our country is worth living in, it is worth dying for.

We must be ever watchful against the elements within what would have us repudiate our going to war in 1917, and we must urge incessant government. It is for us to highly resolve to strike, and strike hard, against those paid agitators, disciples of anarchy and despair, who would overthrow our country by force. We must have a unity of thought, a knowledge of our constitution, our nation's founding, and the significance of our flag, that will make bigotry, hatefulness and selfishness unknown among Americans.

We must be ever inspired to the glories of our country by thinking of how, in all our wars, we have fought for freedom.

These things then, my friends, express the spirit of Armistice day. Once more I say it is a day of reverence and reckoning, but let us be mindful that it is of no profit to us that we eulogize the illustrious man who served his nation well, unless we take to heart the lessons which they have taught us. They have gone, and they have done their utmost to show their devotion to the great cause, and they have left us to see to it that that cause shall not be betrayed, whether in war or in peace. It is our proud heritage to keep fresh and green the memory of their achievements and the achievement of all those who have made the great sacrifice.

Then let us feel that we have, by these exercises and the observance of the day, and by the grateful tributes which we pay them, done what we could to perpetuate the memory of what they have suffered and what they have achieved.

War Trophy Dedicated.

As the governor concluded his remarks the war trophy was fittingly dedicated. It is located on the small plot where the World War memorial stands and it had been covered with tarpaulin which was drawn aside by four men, a soldier, a sailor, a marine, and an American Legion member, the last named being Leslie Fletcher, brother of Robert O. Fletcher, after whom the Norwich post is named.

Wreaths were placed by the American Legion upon the Soldiers' monument, the World War memorial, the grave of Samuel Huntington, signer of the Declaration of Independence and the grave of Dr. John S. Blackman, former Legion commander, and a wreath was placed upon the Memorial tablet by the American Legion auxiliary.

At the conclusion of the exercises, the parade was reformed again to march down Broadway to Union square where it was dismissed with visiting troops going to the state armory for supper. Putnam Phalanx was entertained at the Arcanum club, the visiting Knights Templar at Masonic temple and other fraternal organizations kept open house for visiting members of their bodies.

Parade Had Many Features.

First Division.

The first division, commanded by Lieut. Commander F. B. Craven, included the military, practically every military organization in this section of the state being well represented in the khaki boys in blue and khaki. This division made an impressive appearance with national and regimental colors flying, marching to the rhythmic martial music of the bands of the U. S. C. G. Academy, New London, and the 11th Coast Artillery, of Fort Wright. The Connecticut National Guard of Eastern Connecticut was represented by H. Q. Battery and 192nd F. A. of New London, Bt. H. and Combat Train 182 F. A. of Norwich, Battery A, 192nd F. A. of New London, Battery B, 192nd F. A. of Northwich, H. Q. Company, 43rd Div. Sanitary of Putnam, H. Q. Company, 164th Inf. Band of New London and Company C, 164th Inf. of Willimantic.

The national guard units were preceded by the regular army, and navy and marine detachments from the Island forts, the coast guard, base and the U. S. submarine base at New London.

Second Division.

With Col. H. S. Dorsey of New London commanding, the second division was made up of veterans of the World war and Spanish American war and the Civil war and the veteran organizations and auxiliaries of the bodies. Without doubt this was the best turnout of veterans ever seen in Norwich, there being about 900 in line. The Spanish War Veterans in uniform numbering about 60.

The auxiliaries of the veteran organizations marched in the rear of the respective posts, dressed in white and red, marching in fellow guard formation. The American Red Cross and Backus Hospital Alumnae made a very attractive appearance in their nurses' uniforms with capes, about 100 representing these two organizations.

The Salvation Army citadel of Norwich was represented by the officers of the local organization and about 25 members of the Salvation Army Sunday school, who carried an American flag. Following the Salvation Army came the automobiles in which rode the veterans of the Civil War and the disabled veterans of the World War. These veterans were greeted by bursts of applause all along the line of march.

Bringing up the rear of this division were the ex-service boys of the Norwich fire department riding on one of the pieces of fire apparatus. Those on the pumper were Thomas Tracy, who drove, and Peter O'Neil, J. B. Gale, Patrick Coleman and Everett Houston. These boys also came in for their share of applause.

Third Division.

The third division was one of the most colorful divisions of the parade, the Masonic bodies in their regalia presenting a very attractive appearance. With Swahn's band leading and Nelson J. Ayling commanding, Columbian commandery, K. T., had about 150 in line making a splendid appearance in their Knights Templar uniform. Following was the 192nd F. A. C. N. G. band of New London with 32 pieces. Following this came Palestine Commandery of New London, with 50 men and St. John's Commandery of Willimantic numbering about 60.

Following the commanderies there came the brightly garbed members of Sphinx Temple including the divan, Shrine Patrol Drum corps. Following the shrine came the patrol of Nemrod Grotton followed by the Grotton members, each one wearing a fez. The patrols attracted no little attention with their figure marching and were warmly applauded.

Another attractive feature of this division was the Putnam Phalanx of Hartford in their colonial military uniforms. This famous organization was provocative of no little favorable comment and was one of the most attractive features of the parade.

Colt's band of Hartford followed the Phalanx, furnishing music for the Norwich Rotary club which brought up the rear of the third division. The Rotarians wore yellow chrysanthemums and carried white canes. There were about 50 in this body representing clubs from New London, Bridgeport and Willimantic.

HOURIGAN POST GAVE DINNER AT POST ROOMS

Due to the fact that R. E. Hourigan post, No. 504, V. F. W., had several overseas veterans as guests who could not very well be accommodated at the armory a dinner was served at the post rooms after the parade, under the able direction of Mrs. Raymond Kavanaugh, chairman of the Hourigan auxiliary, assisted by Mrs. C. Hoelck, Mrs. J. Peloquin, Mrs. A. J. Turner, Mrs. E. Maynard, Miss V. Plaute and Miss Fitzgerald, also of the auxiliary.

Dinner was served to 200 persons, the hall being elaborately decorated. The menu was clam chowder, crackers, beets, several kinds of cakes, and coffee.

The guests included State Dept. Commander Capt. Charles T. Blanchard of Bristol, Miss Elisabeth Morrison (an overseas nurse) who marched in the parade; the commander of Murphy Rathbun post, No. 188, with several comrades from New London; also Troop No. 4, Boy Scouts of America, from Taftville.

A detail of Scouts from Troop No. 4 carried banners for the post, the purpose being to tell the public what it represented as a distinctive organization of men who have stepped upon foreign soil in fighting America's wars.

COMDR. DUNBAR EXPRESSES LEGION'S APPRECIATION

Commander E. C. Dunbar of the American Legion issued the following Thursday night:

As commander of the Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, I want to express the appreciation of the post to all those who had any part in making the Armistice day parade the success it was. Great credit goes to Comrade Charles Colt as general chairman and the general committee for its willingness to cooperate together with the sub-committees.

Thanks go to the merchants and the management of the factories in closing and to every organization which participated in the parade.

VISITING SERVICE MEN ENTERTAINED WITH SUPPER AND BOXING BOUTS

Service men who visited Norwich on Armistice day were royally entertained at the State armory after the parade with a supper and eleven three round boxing bouts staged by the Duwell Athletic club with James V Pedace as matchmaker. Approximately 400 service men were present and thoroughly enjoyed the evening and were very appreciative of the courtesy extended them.

After the supper the men gathered around the ring and Jack Delaney was introduced as the present light-heavy weight champion and the next heavy weight champion of the world. This announcement was greeted with cheers and Delaney was cheered to the echo. Delaney refereed three bouts while his manager Dan Reily refereed two and the remainder were in the hands of Mike Kelly.

The first bout of the evening was between "Snooks" Lacy and Young Donovan opening the show with a fast midget engagement that kept the crowd on edge. Lacy with his aggressiveness was the favorite.

Al Conly, state lightweight champion and Sailor Schatraw of the Sub Base put on a three round sparring exhibition with the big gloves. As both these boys are fighting on the card at New London next week there was little of the real stuff in their punches.

Frankie Ferra and Cyclone Murphy two local youngsters fought three abbreviated rounds in the third bout of the evening.

A real battle took place in the fourth when Sailor Terry of Coast Guards met up with Mush Moriarty in a three round bout filled with action with Terry outpointing the local boy by a slight margin.

Johnny "Snelk" Leonard, state welterweight champion, boxed three rounds with Young Leonard, one of his pupils. Young Leonard giving promise of being a good boxer.

Young Wagner of Taftville and Sailor Marsh of the Coast Guard mixed it for three rounds in a fast give and take exhibition with Wagner getting the best of the argument.

Willie Tenant and Young Pickering fought three hard and fast rounds to a draw in a bout marked with hard punching.

The real fight of the evening was between Sailor Hartley and Sailor Dixie of the Destroyer fleet, both boys slugging away with everything they had. Riley refereed the bout and announced that the bout would go to a finish. After three rounds of pummeling each other the bout was all even and the boys went at it again. In the fifth round things were even but neither boy could raise a glove, both having fought themselves out and the referee called it a draw.

Sailor Issy of the Coast Guard boxed a snappy exhibition with Young Francis, also of the Coast Guard and Young McCarthy of Norwich and Gene Pickering put up a real fight in the three rounds they were on. So good were the boys that they have been promised a bout in New London at a later date.

The final bout of the evening was between Young Falcone of Norwich and Battling Reta of Westerly. Both boys let loose with heavy punches and the bout could hardly be called an exhibition.

It was a good show and the Duwell A. C. deserves no little credit for it. Another to whom a great deal of credit goes is Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, who assisted materially in securing some of the bouts and also in getting Jack Delaney to visit Norwich.

The officers at the bouts were Walter Carrigan, timer, Jim Tracy of New London, announcer, Swahn's band gave a concert between the bouts.

RECORDS SMASHED AS DURAY WINS 100-MILE AUTO RACE

SPEEDWAY, Charlotte, N. C., Nov. 11.—(AP)—Leon Duray of Beverly Hills Cal., won the 100-mile feature at the Charlotte Speedway today after Harry Hartz had broken the world's record for 50 miles for motors of 91.5 piston displacement and Frank Lockhart had established a new mark for 25 miles.

Hartz set a new record for the 50-mile event by roaring around the mile and a quarter speedway at an average rate of 139.35 miles an hour, which eclipsed the 128.24 mark made by Peter De Paolo at Salem, N. H., last July.

Frank Lockhart won the first 25-mile race at a speed of 132.3 miles an hour, which shattered the record of 130.39 held by Leon Duray.

Lockhart had the 100-mile race sewed up until the connecting rod on his car was broken and he was compelled to withdraw on the 44th lap. At that time he was approximately a mile and a quarter ahead of Duray.

Lockhart won his new speed crown in the first race of the day when a spectacular finish gave him the victory in the 25-mile event over Hill. Elliott was third and Shattuck fourth.

Before the first sprint, a contest was held to determine who could change the tire of a racing automobile the quickest. Dick Doyle, chief mechanic for Duray, won by making the change in 3.3 seconds.

PRINCETONIAN SENDS CIGARS TO BOSTON PATROLMEN

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—(AP)—The smoke of the now historic Harvard-Princeton football encounter promises to hang longest over the Brighton police station at Boston.

The daily Princetonian, publication of the victorious university, today sent cigars—very special cigars—to six uniformed members of the station forces, together with congratulations for their "gentlemanly, and good-humored" control over post-game events last Saturday. After the game Princeton rooters broke through police lines to demolish the Crimson goal posts.

COLLEGE OFFICIALS TO HANDLE BULKELEY-ACADEMY GAME

To eliminate all possibility of a recurrence of the unsatisfactory officiating at the Academy-Bulkeley game last year in New London, Coach Earle M. Brigham of the Academy has secured the services of expert college officials to handle the Academy-Bulkeley gridiron game at the local campus Saturday.

The names of officials for Saturday's game and colleges from which they come are: Referee, E. L. Manning of Lafayette; umpire, MaLotte of Springfield college; head linesman, T. B. Howe of Yale. Both teams can be assured of satisfactory officiating in this year's battle for the above men are known far and wide for their ability.

The Academy will finish the week's practice with a light drill at the campus this (Friday) afternoon and indications are that Norwich will present its full strength in the important contest of the season.

Bulkeley is rapidly rounding into shape for the battle according to reports coming from New London and they likewise will finish their week's practice sessions with a short drill this afternoon at Morgan park.

The records of the two teams so this season give neither side much of a pre-game advantage. Out of seven games played Bulkeley has won 4, lost 2 and tied 1. The Academy out of six games, has won 3, lost 2 and tied 1. The natural conclusion to draw would be that the 1926 game will find the two elevens more evenly matched than has been the case in some time. Bulkeley's best work this season was done in winning from Carmel Hall and tying Central High of Bridgeport while the Academy gained fame by defeating Wilby High of Waterbury last week by a 33 to 0 score and defeating both East Greenwich, R. I., Academy and Chapman Tech earlier in the season.

A monster rally will be held today at the school to stir up enthusiasm to the highest pitch for the game. Speeches by Capt. Ed Brewer, Mgr. Mitchell, Coach Brigham and several members of the faculty are on the schedule.

An added feature of the day on Saturday will be the annual interscholastic cross-country run over the Academy track. This will be the first meet over the course and much interest is expected to be shown in this recent sport added to the Academy curriculum. Th meet is scheduled to finish between the halves of the football game on the field and five schools namely, Westerly High, Stonington High, Chapman Tech, Wheeler High and the Academy.

Motion pictures are to be taken of the game by Joseph Reed and will be shown at a local theatre. An elevated platform has been erected at the campus for the camera.

YALE STUDENTS SEE TEAM IN FINAL PRACTICE

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 11.—(AP)—For the first time this season Yale undergraduates today had the opportunity of watching a varsity practice in the bowl. A thousand strong, they came to cheer for the eleven which Saturday faces the Tiger in his jungle lair in Yale's first game against an opponent of the late "big three."

While the cheer-leaders led their raccoon-coated cohorts in songs and cheers for the coach, the team and the individual members, the varsity lined up against the scrubs in signal drill and dummy scrimmage.

The team will leave tomorrow morning for Princeton, and in the afternoon will practice in the Palmer stadium, spending the night at Trenton. After the game the team will leave immediately for New York for the night.

KROHN RESIGNS AS CAPTAIN OF CROSS COUNTRY TEAM

Captain A. Krohn of the Academy cross-country team has been forced to quit the team owing to an injury he received in running at the Suffield meet and has also resigned as captain of the team. No successor to Krohn has been elected but it is expected an election will be held before the interscholastic run on Saturday.

Coach Sheriden is putting his men through their paces every day and is confident that his men will make a good showing on Saturday against Chapman Tech and Stonington which are sending up large squads. Penn of Chapman is expected to furnish the keenest competition among the visitors. The run will be held between the halves of the Academy-Bulkeley football game. The start and finish of the race will be photographed by Joseph Reed for a motion picture of the athletics of the day.

NO REGRETS AT PRINCETON OVER BREAK WITH HARVARD

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 11.—(AP)—No expression of regret for the action of Princeton in severing all athletic relations with Harvard were heard on the campus tonight, as students gathered for a mass meeting at which they discussed the Yale football game to be played here Saturday—probably the last of the "big three" games Princeton will see.

The senior council, undergraduate governing body, by formal resolution approved of yesterday's action by the board of athletic control, and in addition demanded the adoption of a rotating football schedule, with a change of dates of games, from year to year.

While most of the students regretted the passing Harvard relationship, none would say that it was not warranted.

PRINCETON-HARVARD BREAK MAY CAUSE SHAKE-UP IN EASTERN FOOTBALL

NEW YORK, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The break-up of the historic "big three," brought about by Princeton's decision to snap all athletic ties with Harvard because of ill-feeling surrounding their gridiron relations, may lead to a shake-up all along the eastern football front and the formation of an eastern conference of major colleges.

The groundwork for such a radical re-alignment of college athletic interests already has been laid to such an extent that many close observers expect Princeton to be invited without delay to join a group that would embrace Columbia, Cornell, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania, with Brown, Army, Navy and possibly Yale also sought as members.

The possibility of such an association, already known to be under discussion, was an outstanding development today as eastern eyes focused on the results of the swift Tiger stroke that put an end over-night to the oldest of all football rivalries.

Any prospect that the sudden breach between Princeton and Harvard might be closed, as suggested today by such prominent Crimson supporters as Howard Elliott, president of the Harvard board of overseers, apparently was eliminated by a statement from athletic authorities at Cambridge, accepting Princeton's decision "with regret." At the same time this statement emphasized a policy henceforth that will commit the Crimson to only one fixed football game a year, that to be the climax battle with Yale.

Princeton's attitude now apparently is that the case with Harvard is "closed" and that the Tiger will pursue its own course without further dealings with the Crimson.

The step taken by the Princeton board of athletic control last night, although undoubtedly hastened by developments in connection with the Tiger 12-0 victory over Harvard and the jibes of the Lampoon, Harvard undergraduate publication, actually was the result of a long series of events, it was made clear today. One of the most important factors, from the Tiger viewpoint, was the attempt of Harvard not long ago to substitute Michigan on its 1927 schedule for Princeton, a move later forestalled by Yale's peace-making efforts.

The way now is opened for Michigan to have the first November date on Harvard's calendar while Princeton also faces the task of revamping its schedule.

The re-alignment of playing dates bring to the fore the possibilities of an eastern conference, a grouping which has been under discussion frequently in the past but whose fulfillment always has been blocked by the refusal of the "big three" to take part. Now that the ancient triumvirate is broken up, with its traditional ties limited only to Yale and Harvard, observers see a ripe opportunity for bringing together congenial interests and systematising schedules that eastern elevens may be ranked as they are through conferences in other parts of the country.

Authorities at neither Princeton nor Yale have had time as yet to consider any new moves toward formation of a conference. Inquiry at both institutions today developed negative responsive but Princeton, at least, is expected to be in a receptive mood.

The nucleus for an early grouping already is provided by Cornell, Columbia, Dartmouth and Pennsylvania. These four now playing inter-locking schedules would welcome Princeton in the formation of a "big five." Cornell renews gridiron relations with the Tigers next season, a move that now takes on added significance. While there has been considerable agitation to restore the old rivalry between Princeton and Pennsylvania, the presence of Brown, Army, Navy and Yale would round out a representative list and approach another "big ten" organization.

Dartmouth, however, it is suggested in some quarters, may more readily be persuaded to form a new and all-New England "big three" with Harvard and Yale. The Green played both the Crimson and Blue this year and is on their schedule again next season.

Football is the only major sport which is not now definitely organized in the east. The track and field organization—I. C. A. A. A. A.—is the broadest, embracing nearly all the institutions along the Atlantic seaboard as well as several Pacific coast colleges. The rowing group is composed of Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania and Syracuse but its annual Poughkeepsie championship is an open affair, although here again the "big three" have held aloof. Baseball has lately acquired the nucleus for a larger body in the association of Cornell, Dartmouth, Columbia and Pennsylvania as members of the quadrangular league. The intercollegiate basketball league groups the same quartet with Princeton and Yale. Tennis, golf, hockey, soccer, gymnastics, boxing, wrestling and fencing all are organized.

WESTERLY WINS FROM STONINGTON HIGH 20 TO 7

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Nov. 11—Westerly staged a last quarter offensive here this afternoon and scoring three touchdowns beat Stonington high 20 to 7. Westerly fought an uphill battle for three periods and then let loose in the final period with a forward passing attack that netted them the first touchdown and then two intercepted Stonington passes paved the way for the other two touchdowns.

Stonington with a heavy attack in the first period marched across the Westerly goal only after a few minutes of play and then Westerly held and the fight was practically even. Opening the fourth period Westerly with line plays and end runs intermingled with several successful passes put them within striking distance and a pass from Spellman to R. Meikle evened the score.

With the score tied Stonington resorted to the open game but Westerly intercepted a pass and R. Miekle scored the second touchdown. Spellman intercepting another pass went for the third and final touchdown of the day.

AGGIE FRESHMEN CLASH WITH R. I. STATE TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 11.—The Connecticut Aggie freshman eleven will journey to Kingston, R. I., tomorrow, where they will play their annual game with the Rhode Island State freshmen. It is the last game away from home for the Aggie yearlings, for the one remaining game on the schedule is with the sophomores and will be played at Storrs.

Although hard hit by injuries and scholastic ineligibility, Coach Alexander expects to put a strong team on the field and one that will make a strong bid to maintain its undefeated record. A short signal drill, and work for the kickers, completed preparations for the contest here this afternoon.

WINDHAM CLASHES WITH BRISTOL ON SATURDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 11.—Coach Thomas A. Callaghan put his squad through a stiff practice session at Recreation park this afternoon in preparation for the game Saturday afternoon with Bristol High echo l. Windham will enter the game in Bristol in strongest array with all of the members of the varsity eleven in good condition, including Garrigus, who will return to the center position. The practice session yesterday included a snappy scrimmage drill.

"Eddie" Nichols, this year's basketball captain, is the newest addition to the local squad. Playing end on the second team yesterday, he hurled back with a good deal of efficiency, every play that was directed by the varsity at his position. Fast, rangy and quick to diagnose plays of the opposition, he should be very valuable to the Crimson and Blue for next year. On the strength of his showing so far this week, it would not be surprising if Coach Callaghan found use for him during the approaching game with Bristol.

The local mentor this week has stressed the importance of a defense against an aerial attack, as a result, the varsity eleven is showing a constant improvement in their ability to repel such assaults. A large body of rooters will accompany the squad to Bristol tomorrow, it is anticipated.

HARVARD PLANNED FOR BREAK IN OCTOBER

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 11.—(AP)—A decision by Harvard to discontinue the annual "Big Three" football games, as such, immediately preceded Princeton's decision to break off all athletic relations, it was disclosed here today. While expressing regret over the decision of the Princeton board of athletic control, the Harvard committee revealed that it had adopted a policy under which only the game with Yale would be retained on football schedule as an annual feature. Games with other colleges would be played "only at suitable intervals."

The resolutions putting into effect the new policy were adopted on October 18, but, according to Chairman Charles W. Kennedy of the Princeton board, were not received by Princeton until yesterday morning.

COACH DOLE TAKING NO CHANCES ON R. I. STATERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

STORRS, Nov. 11.—The nineteenth annual football game between the Connecticut Aggies and Rhode Island state, scheduled for the annual alumni homecoming day this Saturday, promises to be the best home game on the Aggie slate this year.

Connecticut has every reason to figure on a stiff battle from the Rhode Islanders, and that is just what Connecticut expects. The Aggies know from past experience that "Old Man Dope" means absolutely nothing when the rival elevens of that is just what Connecticut expects. Too often in the past has Connecticut underestimated Rhode Islanders, and that is ajust what Connecticut expects. The Aggies know from past experience that "Old Man Dope" means absolutely nothing when he rival elevens of the two institutions meet. Too often in the past has Connecticut underestimated Rhode Island on the basis of a poor early-season record, only to have the Engineers upset the dope and win or tie.

Connecticut followers are hoping for good weather and a dry field Saturday. These conditions, they believe, will allow Eddy and Williams, Connecticut's backfield aces, to perform at their best. There is no question but what Rhode Island will find these two men hard to stop, not to mention Schofield and Knaut who will also work in the backfield. Rhode Island's attempts to stop the Aggies' running attack will be made more difficult because of the excellent aerial game displayed by Coach Dole's men this season. Schofield, Eddy and Williams are three men who are equally adept at throwing and receiving, which when coupled with their running ability is going to put a heavy strain on Rhody's defense play.

TAFTVILLE TO HAVE FAST BASKETBALL TEAM THIS SEASON

Taftville has organized a basketball team to be known as the Celtics and appointed Emile Raymond as manager and Enos Eccleston as captain. This team is composed of some of the fastest basketball tossers in this vicinity and every effort will be made to bring some first class teams as opposition. Thus far the schedule includes teams representing South Manchester, Hartford, Danielson and Meriden, all teams that are well known in the basketball world. Arrangements are also being made to have teams in Massachusetts come to town to show their wares. The probable lineup of the local team will include, Yerrington, Gaucher, Normandin, Pingree, Cady and Eccleston, all of whom have shown considerable skill and knowledge of the game on the local floors and out of town. The season will probably open on Thanksgiving Day.

RAY SCHALK TO REPLACE COLLINS AS MANAGER OF CHICAGO WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, Nov. 11.—(AP)—Ray Schalk, veteran catcher of the American league, tonight was appointed manager of the Chicago White Sox by President Charles A. Comiskey. Schalk succeeds Eddie Collins, who piloted the club for two seasons.

Collins, who came to the White Sox from the Philadelphia Athletics eleven years ago where he was a member of the famous $100,000 infield, probably will be given his unconditional release. Waivers already have been asked on the former keystone king.

"Schalk always gave the game his best efforts and has been one of the hardest workers on the club, and I feel that he is entitled to the chance of leading the club which he has served so well," President Comiskey said in making the appointment.

Talk on the baseball rialto tonight was current that Collins probably would return to the Athletics where he started his major league career and serve as pilot, while it was also said he might become leader of the Boston Red Sox.

Fourteen years ago, Schalk caught his first game in the major league for the club he was tonight designated to lead through the 1927 season. In his career behind the plate Schalk has performed in more than 1,000 games, surpassing the mark set by "Chief" Meyers of the Giants. He established a mark of having caught in 100 or more games for 12 years, eleven of which were consecutive. He also holds the record of having caught 151 games which he did in 1920.

Born in Litchfield, Ill., 33 years ago, he played his first professional baseball as a member of the Taylorville, Ills., club. In 1911 he joined the Milwaukee American Association club, in the fall of 1912, he was purchased by President Comiskey for $12,000, a large price at that time. He was so small when he joined the club that there was no uniform to fit him.

He broke in behind "Big Ed" Walsh the spitball king, and established himself in the hearts of President Comiskey, the players and fans, when he went through the game without giving signals to his battery mate.

No catcher ever handled Walsh's spitter in better style, and Schalk became the first string catcher of the club in 1912.

Only five other players have records on service in the league as long, or longer than Schalk. These are Ty Cobb, of the Tigers, Eddie Collins, former manager of the White Sox, Tris Speaker, pilot of the Indians, Walter Johnson, speed-ball pitcher of the Senators, and Roger Peckinpaugh of the Yankees.

Schalk declared he was much pleased with his appointment and would do all in his power to bring the club, which finished fifth the last two seasons, to the top of the list.

APPOINTMENT OF SCHALK A SURPRISE TO COLLINS

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 11.—(AP)—The appointment of Ray Schalk as manager of the Chicago White Sox to succeed Eddie Collins was a complete surprise to Collins, who declined to discuss it until he had received official notification from President Comiskey.

Collins, who lives in Lansdowne, a suburb of this city, had just returned from a hunting trip when the announcement was read to him.

"I have not received any word from Comiskey and have not talked to him since the close of the baseball season," said Collins. "I have nothing to say and will not talk until I am officially notified by the club."

PASSING OF COLLINS IS SIXTH CHANGE IN MANAGERS

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—The passing of Eddie Collins as manager of the Chicago White Sox marks the sixth change in major league baseball management since the close of the 1926 campaign.

Four of the replacements have come in the American league, which is experiencing one of the biggest shakeups in its history in addition to Collins, Ty Cobb of the Detroit Tigers, Lee Fohl of the Boston Red Sox, and George Sisler of the Browns, now have relinquished the reins. Sisler was succeeded by Dan Howley, manager of the Toronto Leafs last season, and Cobb by George Moriarity, former umpire. The Red Sox have not yet named Fohl's successor.

In the National league, Arthur Fletcher has turned over management of the Phillies to Stuffy McInnis and Bill McKechnie has been supplanted as pilot of the Pirates by Donie Bush.

Gee! Wasn't it cold yesterday! It's colder today. It will probably be colder tomorrow. Now is the time to get your

Canvassing for members wil be done by women's teams in charge of Mrs. C. Byron Cottrell and Miss Elizabeth Haswell. Stoneleigh Manor, Rye Beach, N.H.—"The House Beautiful"

Madam—Did You Ever Breakfast Here?

THIS famous resort hotel at Rye Beach, N.H., is called the House Beautiful. In its luxuries of food and furnishings it appeals to educated tastes. Nearby is the Farragut, under same management, where countless well-known people go to play in summer.

If you arrive at Stoneleigh Manor in the morning—hungry—you will find delights on every hand to create an enduring impression. The outlook, the comfort, the breakfast. You will realize the extreme effort made to give you joy. Every factor here is studied

Among the features of this charming spot is La Touraine Coffee, brewed in the perfect way. Like everything else one finds here, this exquisite coffee has been selected to give a surprise and delight.

Those who have visited at Stoneleigh Manor remember that matchless coffee. Thousands, on going back home, have adopted it. And so will you when you know it. The coffee selected for places like this is a coffee you should try. It is folly to serve a lesser coffee when La Touraine (Extra) is sold by your grocer without fancy price. You might as well have the best.

Interesting facts about La Touraine (Extra) Coffee

It is the largest-selling coffee in New England, the birthplace of fine coffees in America. In this home of exacting coffee critics, it is considered the supreme result of 237 years of coffee development.

It is the coffee served in many dining places famous for their coffees. In all Statler Hotels, for instance. In the magnificent Shoreland of Chicago. In countless country homes which study fine hospitality.

The blend combines the four finest coffees that grow. Each comes from a different country, each is the pride of a nation. Each derives its excellent flavor from one of the rarest soils of the earth.

Three of the coffees combined in this blend cost 50% more than ordinary coffee, and 25% more than Sao Paulo, the prize coffee of Brazil. One is so rare that only 30,000 bags are grown yearly.

The formula for this blend is a secret, carefully preserved. Coffee experts spent twenty years in perfecting it. No other blend has been made to resemble it. Those who find here their ideal flavor can find it nowhere else.

Mr. E. J. Butler, the noted coffee expert, personally tests, tastes and selects all coffees used in this blend. His duty is to maintain, without regard to cost, this premier coffee flavor. He pays any price necessary to combine in La Touraine (Extra) the maximum delights.

La Touraine (Extra) is sold direct to retail grocers. This to save middlemen's profits. It is sold in double sealed cartons, not in cans. These and other economies—about 11 cents per pound—pay for the extra quality. Thus users get this matchless coffee without a fancy price.

The Kick-Off is an all-college story from beginning to end. All the fun and devilry that make these modern undergraduates try the patience and the souls of their professors, all the high purpose and the skill and thrilldom that make football seem the biggest thing in college life, all the sweetness of a college romance which today is exactly as it was since the beginning o ftime—all this is to be seen in The Kick-Off. Wesley Ruggles wrote the story from which the picture is made; he also produced and directed it. The Kick-Off is the feature picture today and Saturday.

Palace Theater

When a little puppy squirmed in the friendly arms of a soldier in war-torn France in 1918, neither the man nor the dog dreamed of the brilliant future that lay before them. The man was a lieutenant who adopted the little dog for the sake of having a playmate, with no idea of when peace might come or whether he would live to see the puppy grow up to be the popular motion picture star of today.

The dog was Rin-Tin-Tin, today's dog wonder of the screen; the man was Lieutenant Lee Duncan, today Rinty's proud owner and trainer. Rinty, as he is known about the studios, is a German shepherd dog. He responded rapidly to the careful and painstaking of Duncan, obeyed commands immediately, he understood every word his master spoke, he possessed uncannily human traits, and has even displayed a remarkable sense of humor on the screen. While treated with kindness and consideration, Rinty early learned discipline and his magnificent physique and unusual intelligence suggested a screen career, where many might marvel at this animal actor.

Dorothy Devore, of the popular screen team of Matt Moore and Dorothy Devore, now starring in Three Weeks in Paris, at the Palace theater, made her film debut in 1919 for Universal and has since been consistently associated with the making of comedies. Prior to her screen career she appeared in vaudeville and musical comedy, paving the way for her success in film comedies.

Miss Devore is petite, dark-eyed and demure, and takes her work with intense seriousness. Her ambition is to become a great star and most reviewers think she will.

Capitol Theater, Willimantic

The Capitol theater will have as its attraction for two nights and a matinee beginning Wednesday evening, Nov. 17th the much heralded and widely discussed laughing comedy success, Abbie's Irish Rose, that delightful comedy of love and tolerance by Anne Nichols, which is now nearing the end of its fifth year at the Republic theater in New York city, while five other companies have added more pages to the theatrical history of almost every large city of the United States and Canada, by playing long runs and establishing precedents never before heard of, and breaking all known world's records.

It is a matter of record that Able has revolutionized the booking of theatrical attractions, for there is not one of the most astute producers, not even the booking offices, believed any play capable of accomplishing the achievements which this world famous riot of laughter has attained.

Miss Nichols is sending her Montreal company and production to this city intact, it having but recently played a return engagement in that city, where some two years ago it broke all records, by playing ten consecutive weeks.

Mail orders accompanied by remittance are now being filled in the order of receipt, the regular box office sale opening on Friday morning.

Breed Theater

Renaud Hoffman has created an enduring monument to American patriotism in his production, The Unknown Soldier, which was heartily received at the Breed theater yesterday. It is a picture of a symbolic patriotism.

The reaction of the audience, their mingled smiles and tears, was evidence that the director had achieved a happy effect with a mighty subject.

Nothing like The Unknown Soldier has ever been viewed at the Breed theater. It is unlike any war picture that was ever made. It is a beautiful, awe inspiring, tear-wringing, and laugh-provoking story of simple, idealistic American patriotism.

Charles Emmett Mack's portrayal of the typical American soldier lad with a spiritual sense developed in the war, is one of the most human bits of acting the screen has produced. The wistful war bride, played by Marguerite De La Motte, is an intense, realistic and dramatic characterization, and Ethel Wales in the role of the mother of the hero was deeply sympathetic. Henry B. Wathall was excellent as the munitions manufacturer. Hilarity was furnished by Sy Crossley, Jess Devorska and George Cooper.

The Secret Storehouse

The secret that with one you share,
You might as well put on the air.
—Mother West Wind.

Happy Jack Squirrel knows the truth of this. He knows that the only way to keep a secret is to keep it. That is why he is very careful never to tell where his storehouses are. Happy Jack wouldn't tell his best friend. People are queer. They mean to keep a secret, but they can't. A secret is the slipperiest thing in the world. It is forever slipping out when you think you have it all bottled up tight. The only way to keep a secret is to keep it and not share it with any one.

This is why Happy Jack wouldn't tell Peter where he was storing away those big, juicy nuts. He knew that if he should tell Peter, Peter would tell some one else. He wouldn't mean to tell any one else, but sooner or later he would let it slip. So Happy Jack wouldn't tell Peter where he was storing those hickory nuts.

The thing that provoked Peter was that he could see Happy Jack enter one end of a hollow tree trunk that lay on the ground. He would enter one and with a nut in his mouth and pretty soon he would come out without the nut. Yet, though Peter went inside several times, he couldn't find a single nut. It was a most tantalizing mystery. If Happy Jack suspected that Peter was sytping on him, he didn't say a word. He just went on about his business of finding fat hickory nuts and stashing them away.

Now it all aggravated Peter very much indeed, but what could he do about it? It seemed to him that those hickory nuts must be in that hollow tree somewhere. But though he looked and looked and looked, he couldn't find a single nut. Finally Peter gave up. It was getting late in the afternoon and he knew that Happy Jack wouldn't work much longer. So Peter bade him good by and went off to see what the other Squirrel cousins were doing.

It wasn't until afternoon of the next afternoon that Peter returned to see how Happy Jack was getting along. As he approached that lone hickory tree it occurred to Peter to steal up quietly, not letting Happy Jack know that he was coming. What he really did was to sneak up, which is never a nice thing to do.

Now Peter came from a different direction from the one in which he had come before. He presently came to a stump. It was an old, partly rotted, hollow stump. Peter sat down behind this stump to rest. Then, too, it was a good place from which to peek out and watch for Happy Jack. He hadn't yet seen Happy Jack, but he felt sure Happy Jack was somewhere about. Peter had been sitting there only a few moments when he heard a rustling. Peter peeked around the stump and discovered that right on the other side there were some ferns growing. One of these ferns moved ever so little. Peter caught a glimpse of a gray coat. He knew, instantly. It was the coat of Happy Jack the Gray Squirrel. Then Peter made a discovery. These ferns grew up around the end of a long, hollow, fallen tree. Peter held his breath and watched. Presently out of the further end of that tree he saw Happy Jack Squirrel pop. Happy Jack sat up, looked all about, then scampered away.

Peter remained where he was. Happy Jack appeared presently with a nut in his mouth. He looked about in all directions, then disappeared in the end of that hollow, fallen tree. In great excitement Peter waited. Presently Peter saw those fern leaves right close to him move. Happy Jack had come out at the other end of that tree. He was under the ferns. Peter waited until Happy Jack had returned the way he had come. Then, when Happy Jack was out of sight, Peter carefully peeped under those ferns. Between the roots of that old stump behind which he had been hiding was a hole. It was quite a good-sized hole. Peter peped down in it. It was more than half full of fat hickory nuts. Peter had found the secret of Happy Jack's storehouse. Happy Jack was running through that hollow tree and hiding the nuts in this snug little storehouse between the roots of the old stump.

AVOID SOWING THE SEEDS OF REGRET

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

When Prof. Esten took over that barren, thin-soiled, stone-sown and brush covered five acres behind his house at Storrs, he named it Independent Fertility Field. This, because it was to be devoted to proving that,—with the exception of phosphoric acid in which most soils are deficient,—even the most seemingly hopeless abandoned land in eastern Connecticut was yet, when rightly entreated, self-sustaining, self-renewing and independent of outside supplies of fertilization.

It seems hardly possibly that this start in a new agricultural idea was made 11 years ago. Yet such is the fact. It was in 1916 that Prof. Esten began his demonstrations. This season of 1926, therefore, is the 11th on which he has cropped the field and recorded results. They are not yet fully tabulated. But I am enabled to report some of them. When the tabulation is complete and its publication made, it would seem as if every forward-looking farmer of eastern Connecticut, at least, would want it to study and learn from. It is devoutly to be hoped that the college authorities will see to it that the widest possible circulation is made possible among interested farmers.

Many of you have doubtless seen the field and looked over its crops. For the benefit of those who haven't, let me repeat, what I have before this said, that, the land in 1916 was as hopeless looking a tract of worthlessness as can be found in eight counties. It wasn't even worth fencing. To begin with, it was near the summit of a hill. In many places the underlying rock appeared at the surface. Where the soil actually covered the rocks it was thin and unpromising in color and texture. Yet analysis showed that it was superabundantly rich in potash,—if only some way could be found to liberate this plethora to the use of growing plants. And the air which blew over it was four-fifths pure nitrogen, — if only this could be made similarly available. All that it lacked of the important elements of fertility were phosphoric acid and humus.

Humus could be supplied by the wastes from growing crops, once such had been secured. Raw phosphate was about the cheapest form of fertilizer on the market. A small quantity of stable manure was applied, to furnish the humus needed for a start. A liberal dressing of raw phosphate was added. The soy beans were planted, with a sufficient addition of raw ground limestone to sweeten the soil and nurse along the bacteria which develop by the millions on soy bean roots.

It was upon these bacteria that Esten primarily founded his scheme. Already, repeated demonstrations had shown that they were capable of capturing the free nitrogen of the air and in the little nodules or knots with which they scabbed the soy beanroots, transforming it into the nitrates or nitrites which compose the most important and most costly elements of plant-food. Esten showed that these same bacteria, given a fair chance and reasonable encouragement, would also change the insoluble potash which is present in the soil by thousands of tons in every acre, into forms similarly available to plants.

Independent Fertility Field was devoted from the outset to proving, by actual crop-growing, the truth of Esten's contention that, given an adequate supply of phosphoric acid and humus, the teeming hordes of bacteria would supply all the nitrates and potash any crop could use.

At first, hard-headed old farmers couldn't be blamed for viewing the whole idea with some suspicion. At any rate, they were mostly of that so-called Missouri habit of mind which wanted to be shown.

Well, the first few years, of which I remember having told you some few details in former Talks, showed that Esten was on the right track. Certainly now, after 11 full seasons of triumphant demonstration, it would seem as if even a Doubting Thomas might be willing to accept the proof.

Here are just two demonstrated facts which should set every practical farmer to scratching his head and wondering why he, too, can't share in like results:

"The increase in yield from raw rock phosphate has seven times paid for the initial application of four tons. This in 11 years. And there is now left in the soil three and a half tons of this original four tons," remaining to continue its supply for many years to come. "In almost every instance the raw rock phosphate has outdistanced acid phosphate in crop production."

Prof. Esten says, in summarizing results: "It seems to me that, when a crop can be increased nearly fivefold with the cheapest materials at hand, it certainly points to a favorable outlook for that kind of farming."

I am sorry that a newspaper column doesn't lend itself easily to the reproduction of tabulated diagrams. But I think I can make one of Esten's luminous tables clear to you, if you will only read carefully. This particular table shows the total crop production of an acre for the whole 11 years, 1916-1926, both inclusive.

Where nothing in the way of manure or fertilizer was used, the acre production was 17.96 tons.

Where manure and legumes were used, the acre production was 46.83 tons.

Where lime and raw rock phosphate were used, the acre production was 65.48 tons.

Where lime, manure and legumes were used, the acre production was 73.15 tons.

Where lime, manure, and rock phosphate were used, the acre production was 82.77 tons.

Raw ground lime and raw phosphate are the cheapest forms of fertilizer which the farmer can be asked to buy.

Yet, with the aid of the volunteer hordes of bacteria which supply almost unlimited quantities of nitrates and potash, they seem to have done the job pretty satisfactorily.

The basic trouble with present-day farming is that costs of production are greater than income from products.

There is small inducement to raise a $100 crop if it costs $110 to produce it.

If the farmer has to pay the $110 for wages and fertilizers and overhead expenses and gets only $100 for the resultant crop, he'd be better off to let his land grow up to bean-poles and scrub.

But if he could cut those costs to $90 and still collect $100 for the crop, why, that would be a different story.

It is just along that line that Esten's work for the past 11 years is most valuable.

The increase in acre production is startling, it is true; startling and provocative of emulation. But with this huge increase in productiveness has gone a marked decrease in producing cost.

It costs little more, in labor, to raise 53 bushels than to raise 15 on an acre.

If cheap lime, phosphate and yard manure are used as fertilizers, it costs only a trifle more for them than to use nothing. They are, as has been said, about the cheapest plant foods that can be found.

Why pay big prices for costly nitrates and potash when the unpaid labor of one's volunteer bacterial helpers will supply all of them that is needed for nothing?

Until some wide-spread and effective system of co-operation is adopted by which farmers can dictate the prices of their goods, as other business men fix the prices of their commodities, the only hope for securing profit from agricultural operations is in keeping down the cost of making crops.

So long as we continue to let other people set the prices we shall receive as well as the prices we must pay our only hope is to produce more economically. We cannot, for the immediate future, anyway, expect to have that thimbleriggery known as "the market" consider either the abstruse rights of the matter or our personal needs. It will continue, as in the past, to buy as cheap and sell as dear as it can, whether such procedure sends us to the county-house or not.

Since it won't pay what our crops cost us to raise and since we can't make it, we must raise things at less cost,—or not at all.

And the only way to do this at present visible is to raise more to the acre at less cost per unit of production.

It is as if he had set up a lighthouse on that Storrs hill to illuminate the way in which we can do both,—produce better crops at less cost.

If you're the kind of farmers I'm willing to believe you are, you don't really hanker after abnormally high prices, either in buying or in selling. We had rather sell our stuff at rates which other people can afford to pay with a smile, IF only we could buy our supplies at similarly pleasing rates.

The trouble is that we don't seem to have much influence over either the prices we can get or those we must pay.

Therefore, if we must pay high prices and take low ones, the only present chance for us is to cut the cost of producing our goods so that we can somehow get wages for our work.

If we can't get more than $1.75 for our potatoes,—that's the price they're selling for in my bishopric,—we must find some way to grow them for less. That means we must pay out less for labor and fertilizer, etc.

You know any better way than Esten's? Eh?

THE FARMER.

NORWICH BROTHER PHOTOGRAPHERS GET INTO COURT AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—John L. White and his brother Peter were in the police court this morning, the former charged with a breach of the peace in attacking Policeman Augustus Ray and with vending in the streets of New London without possessing a license so to do. The men have been engaged in taking pictures of school children on the back of a pony which the brothers owned for the purpose. The schools were found to be profitable places for the photographers to operate as they made the most of their opportunities. Officer Ray found them at the Harbor school with so many children huddled about them that there appeared to be danger to the little folks. The Whites had no permit to engage in the work they were doing, so the officer ordered them to cease operations. John White objected to that and the officer claimed John struck him from behind when the latter seized the tripod the men were using. John denied this and held that he was only protecting his photo apparatus. He did admit that he might have struck the officer in the scuffle, but held that such a thing was accidental. He made the claim that he went to the police station and there was told that he could not operate in the highway, but that if he secured the permission of private land owners he might take pictures there. This the men alleged they had secured, the permission being oral. Principal Howe of the Harbor school was a witness, as was Abraham Levinson, a neighbor. They testified to witnessing the scuffle. John White represented that he was an employe of his brother. He was fined $25 for the breach of the peace, but the vending charge brought a suspended judgment, and Peter was sued for that offense. The latter testified that he came here from Norwich, where he had followed his calling, and said he had been engaged in the same line of work in Rhode Island and Massachusetts. He denied that he had any intention of violating any city ordinance, explaining that he took the pictures and then went from house to house where the parents of the children resided and sold the photos. He said his home was in Norwich, so he was advised to return there and abandon his calling in New London.

Herbert Hutchins and his wife were presented for failing to send their 14 year old son to school. The couple seem to be determined to resist the school authorities. When an officer went to the Hutchins home the mother is alleged to have told them the boy was absent from home, but a minute later he was seen coming from the cellar. Then the parents were ordered to be in court yesterday when Agent Buchanan and a teacher from the Jennings school were present to appear against them, but they failed to show up in court. Today the evidence of the absence of the boy from school was not at hand so the case was postponed till tomorrow. Mr. and Mrs. Hutchins were released on a bond of $50 each.

William Johnson was fined $10 for intoxication. Parking cases were presented and disposed of.

William Reed was to have answered a complaint for parking but was absent from the city and the case went over till the 1st of December.

Michael Feeney of Mahan street, employed as section worker by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, was painfully injured this morning when several bones of his right foot were fractured while he was in the performance of his duties. Feeney with other laborers, was engaged in moving an iron frog at Fort Neck when the frog slipped from the grasp of the workmen and in falling, landed upon Feeney's foot. He was taken to the office of a physician where the fractures were reduced, after which he went to his home. The injury will incapacitate Feeney indefinitely.

The funeral of Franklin Pierce Goff was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at St. James' Episcopal church and was attended by many mourners. The service was read by Rev. Philip M. Kerridge, rector of the church. The bearers were Luther G. Stebbins, Peter Woods, Jay Clarke, Peter Harris, Charles F. Chittenden and Philip K. Dewire. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Carol Dunbar, six, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dunbar, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of her parents, 43 Evergreen avenue. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the right to drive of Mrs. Emma Gaultieri, 50 Goshen street, suspended. Mrs. Gaultieri has resided in New London about six months and has made it a practice to drive her automobile almost daily, although she did not deem it necessary to secure a license. She was arrested and convicted and as a result her right to drive was taken from her.

The Ford coupe owned by Hatton Underhill, 307 Huntington street, which was stolen from its place of parking on Meridian street yesterday afternoon, was recovered this morning. Patrolman William Graham discovered the auto parked on Harrison street, near the corner of Winthrop street and at the approach to the Thames river highway bridge. The owner on recovering the auto stated that a flashlight that was in the auto was missing. The police believe that many of the thefts of automobiles from Meridian street of late has been perpetrated by members of the United States coast guard.

COLLEGE SPECIAL CONSTABLE APPOINTED AT COLLEGE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—Archie P. Hunt, an employe of the Connecticut College for Women, today was appointed a special constable by City Manager William A. Hyde, but with limited authority. Hunt was given authority to make arrests on the college grounds or in the buildings. His appointment was made at the request of officials of the college, who deem it advisable that some one employed at the college be given the power of arrest, because of the possibility of intruders making themselves objectionable there.

QUAKER HILL BOY OF SEVEN MAY BE FATALLY INJURED

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—William Nisson, seven, of Quaker Hill, was probably fatally injured in this city this afternoon when he was struck by an automobile driven by Mrs. Emma G. Keeney, 25 Keeney place. Besides sustaining a fractured skull, the Nisson boy received a deep laceration of the right side of the body. He is now a patient at Lawrence hospital, where he is in an unconscious condition and with but little hope of his recovery.

The boy, accompanied by his mother, was walking along Washington street about 1:30 o'clock and when near the corner of Brewer street, suddenly darted into the highway. Running from behind a motor truck, the boy ran directly in front of the pleasure automobile and before Mrs. Keeney could apply the brakes in an endeavor to bring the auto to a stop, the child was struck, hurled to the macadam highway, and rendered unconscious. Employes of the Wales Lines company, engaged in the construction of the new home for the Southern New England Telephone company, saw the boy and went to his assistance. The first of the workmen to reach him, picked up the bleeding and unconscious form and hastened to the office of Dr. F. C. Wellington on State street, where the seriousness of the injuries was revealed. A hurry call for the ambulance was given and the child was rushed to the hospital.

Joseph Hyde, 46 Division street, made complaint to the police this morning that last night several windows of his residence were smashed by mischievous boys. The police are investigating.

Lester Bailey, 4 High street, Lynn, Mass., came to New London at 2 o'clock this morning and took charge of his son, Russell Bailey, 16, and his companion, Kendrick Nicholas, 69 Ingalls street, Lynn, who ran away from home Tuesday and were arrested in New London Wednesday afternoon by Sergeant Nelson Smith.

A leak in the water main on Bank street between State and Golden streets, was discovered at 3 o'clock this morning by Patrolman Braxton Hill when a large quantity of water made its way to the street surface. A repair gang of the water and sewer department perfected repairs during today.

The extent of the injuries sustained by Joseph Dodo, Tenth street youth who was run over by an automobile truck upon which he was riding and driven by Serenato Orsai, 324 Shaw street, yesterday afternoon at the New London approach of the Thames river highway bridge, has been determined at Lawrence Memorial hospital, but it is believed that bones of the right foot have been fractured.

There was scant evidence today that the anniversary of Armistice day was here. The school children had a half-holiday, but there was no evidence otherwise that a celebration was in progress.

PUPILS GET HALF HOLIDAY TO SEE NORWICH PARADE

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Nov. 11.—The children of the public schools were given a half holiday today that they might go to Norwich and view the mammoth Armistice day parade there. It was not intended to close the schools, but yesterday afternoon Dr. J. M. Ganey, a member of the board of school visitors and a World War veteran, secured the calling of a special meeting of the board and urged that the children be granted a half holiday. With but slight discussion the meeting voted the closing of the schools.

The police experienced a day of little business today for throughout the day and up to 9:30 o'clock this evening not a single arrest had been made, which is something out of the ordinary for the night before a session of the police court there are generally anywhere from two or three to half a dozen prisoners and sometimes more awaiting presentation in the court.

Mrs. Robert Satterlee, of 50 Gorton street, complained to the police this evening that a scooter belonging to her little son, was stolen from in front of St. James' Episcopal church this afternoon.

Two marines are maintained on duty at the mail room at the Union station now and accompany all trucks of mail to and from the mail room and trains. The attendance of marines to the postal employes is a part of the movement of the federal government to put an end to mail robberies. Altogether 2,500 marines from the Quantico barracks are being used to safeguard the mails throughout the country.

A boy about 2, residing on Shaw street, bareheaded and coatless, wandered from his home and walked about two miles through the heart of the city this noon. The child finally was halted on Main street by school children realizing that the wanderer did not belong in that neighborhood. At the same time the parents of the child communicated with the police, requesting that aid be given in locating the boy. Patrolman George Cockell went to Main street and found the boy. He was taken to the police station where a relative called for the little fellow and saw to it that he was delivered to his parents.

Mary D'Amaglia has sold the four family brick house on Shaw street and the five family brick house on Pratt street to Mary D'Amico.

William Whiteford, of Middletown, and Miss Jean Robertson, 20 Williams street, were married yesterday afternoon at the parsonage of the Second Congregational church, the ceremony being performed by Rev. J. Haveridge Lee. Alexander McPhail, of Groton, was best man and Miss Katherine MacLeod of this city, attended the bride. Mr. and Mrs. Whiteford will make their future home in Middletown.

Hearings will be given eight automobile drivers at 1 o'clock next Tuesday afternoon at the county court house in this city. The drivers and the charges against them are: Guy Underwood, 33 Union street, New London, driving under the influence; Oscar Arnio, Moosup, reckless driving; Charles M. Payne, Stonington, complained, driving under the influence; Michael Comich, Saybrook, driving under influence and investigation; Plastoni Gino, Old Mystic, driving under influence; Raymond Smith, Danielson, fatal acident; Michael Pisarka, Norich, fatal accident; Mrs. Ellis Spink, Noank, conference.

Edward Reilly, of the United States Coast Guard, state pier; Edward Jacobson, 292 Pequot avenue; Ellsworth Rowland, 99 Lincoln avenue and Mrs. Ellen Fiddes, Westerly, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

Gov. Trumbull appointed Franklin H. Hubbell of Easton as a policeman on the application of the Bridgeport Hydraulic Co.

Tuesday of last week local people witnessed an unusual sight. An airplane passed over here, flying low, going south, and a flock of 200 wild geese was in the rear, going in the same direction.

A bean supper held at the parsonage Wednesday evening of last week was well attended; 126 sat down to the tables. The entertainment held at the church after the supper was greatly enjoyed. Providence, Plainfield, Sterling, South Killingly and Danielson were represented.

Miss Addie May Pierce, who died Oct. 24 at her home, 2021 Twelfth street, Lynchburg, Va., after an illness of more than eight years, was born at North Sterling, Ct., but most of her life was spent in Virginia. SMALL PERCENTAGE OF REGISTRATION SO FAR

Less than eight per cent of the motor vehicles registered in Connecticut for this year have been offered for registration, to date, for the year 1927, the state motor vehicle department reports.

Since Oct. 1, the department has been issuing registration certificates for the coming calendar year, in an effort to distribute the registration burden over a period of several weeks and avoid congestion in the final days of 1926 and the opening days of the new year. The response has been greater than it was in the corresponding period of last year, but the average distribution in the first month of the early registration period fell under 373 a day, including the business done at the branch offices in New Haven, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New London and Stamford in addition to the main office at the capitol.

It is pointed out that unless the applications for 1927 registrations come in during the remainder of the month at a more rapid rate than in the past six weeks, late applicants will have to expect delays in getting their registration business that it has had in the past several weeks.

The rule that motor vehicle owners who desire to retain the registration numbers assigned to them for 1926 must file application with the required fee before Nov. 15 is believed to have influenced the early registration of many cars for which the department has given out 1927 markers.

The 1927 number plates, which have a maroon background with white figures, are being given out as cars are registered, with instructions that they must not be displayed until the last week day of December, 1926.

A woman went into a down-town bank and walked up to the receiving teller's window. As he continued counting bills she tapped on the window and said impatiently: "Why don't you pay me a little attention?"
"I'm sorry, madam," he said politely, "but we don't pay anything here

STOCK PRICES ASCEND

NEW YORK, Nov. 11—(AP)—The upward movement of prices was resumed in today's stock market, with the demand embracing a wider assortment of issues. Final quotations disclosed a long list of net gains ranging from 1 to 7 points, with the equipments, oils, coppers, chemicals and public utilities giving the best demonstrations of group strength. Trading was rather dull until just before the close when a brisk demand developed for U. S. Steel common and General Motors, which showed net gains of 3 1-4 and 5-8 points, respectively.

After the close of the market, directors of the General Motors corporation met and declared an extra cash dividend of $4. On January 7 of this year an extra dividend of $5 was paid, in March the regular dividend was raised from a $6 to a $7 basis, in May an extra $4 was declared and in September a $6 per cent stock dividend was declared, with the regular $1.75 quarterly dividend declared on the additional stock.

Money was again in plentiful supply at and below the official renewal rate of 4 1-4 per cent. The rate on bankers' acceptances was lowered 1-8 of 1 per cent today, and time money and commercial paper rates held steady, but with offerings plentiful. The New York Federal Reserve bank announced no change in its rediscount rate of 4 per cent.

Rail shares failed to make any appreciable response to the announcement that freight traffic in the week ended October 30 had set a new high record for all time. A few issues, such as Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chicago & Northwestern and Peoria & Eastern, showed net gains of a point or so, but the majority showed only fractional changes.

The brisk demand for the oils was associated in some quarters with reports of an early retirement of the 7 per cent preferred stock of the Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey. Atlantic Refining, Maryland, Independent Oil & Gas, Simms and Skelly all closed a point or more higher. In the public utility group, new 1926 high prices were recorded by Montana Power, United Railways Investment preferred and Radio Corporation preferred.

Other stocks to break into new high ground were Corn Products, Texas Gulf Sulphur, Liquid Carbonic and Union Carbide. On the other hand, Jordan Motors, Central Leather, Underwood Typewriter, National Cloak & Suit preferred and Advance Rumely, preferred, broke to new 1926 lows.

Baldwin responded to reports of large orders by jumping over 7 points to 131 1-4, closing a point below the top. Woolworth soared over 7 points to 183 on the announcement that the company would open a chain of stores in Germany.

Cotton prices were a trifle firmer in quiet trading, raw sugar dropped 1-32 of a cent a pound and coffee prices eased 10 to 17 points. Western grain markets were closed today in observance of the Armistice day holiday.

Heavy buying of sterling in anticipation of the settlement of the coal strike featured the foreign exchange market, demand bills on London being quoted 3-8 of 1 cent higher around $4.84 1-8 French francs were firm above 3.70 cents, but Italian lire sagged over 5 points to around 4.06 cents. Other changes were nominal.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING BY NORWICH SOCIETY IN N. Y.

The fall meeting of the Norwich society of New York was held there at the Town Hall club on West 43rd St. last Monday evening. The fifty-seven members of the society, and guests sat down to a fine duck dinner at 7 o'clock.

After the meal had been completed, President J. H. Albertson spoke of the fact that the dinner was the fifteenth anniversary of the society, which is the only society of its type in New York city There are many state clubs and section clubs in New York city but the Norwich society is the only city society there President Albertson before introducing the next speaker read two interesting letters from Francis Gilman and Alonzo Lathrop, two of the absent members of the society.

James L. Case, president of the Norwich chamber of commerce, was the next speaker of the evening and gave a very interesting address on "Norwich, yesterday, today and tomorrow." He spoke of Norwich in the days of Governor Buckingham, of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the town in 1909 when President Taft was the honored guest, and of the present day Norwich, the growth of the city and the optimism of the citizens of the Rose of New England. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Case and later in the evening he was made an honorary member of the society.

J. Olin Howe in introducing Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller spoke of him as a former Connecticut boy from Southington who has won literary renown as editor of Success Magazine and as an historian.

Dr. Miller gave interesting facts about the fourteen foreign governments which he visited and studied during the past summer. He spoke of Mussolini, the "iron man" of Italy, of the French debt, of conditions in England, Russia and other foreign countries and ended his address by saying that the citizens of the United States are the luckiest people in the world and that citizenship in the United States is the best bargain in the world today. Dr. Miller said that in many foreign European countries there is an undercurrent of radicalism and that in the United States there is less of a radical element than in any foreign European country. Dr. Miller's speech was enlivened by many interesting and amusing anecdotes and jokes.

After Dr. Miller's speech President Albertson called on different members of the society, and remarks were made by Frank L. Potter, E. J. Crawford, William B. Klein, Reginald Reynolds, H. W. Keigwin, J. Olin Howe, Marco S. Parker, O. Chester Johnson, Harold H. Thresher, Warren K. Dowe, J. D. Herr and Albert S. Bard.

The meeting adjourned at 10:30.

THREE-ACT COMEDY CLEVERLY GIVEN BY AMERICAN LEGION PLAYERS

When a Feller Needs a Friend, a three act comedy, and the annual theatrical staged by Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, opened a three nights' run Thursday evening at the Strand theatre. Once again the American Legion players upheld their reputation as high class entertainers, and the audience was most appreciative of their efforts to please. The play was a riot of fun from start to finish, there were no dull moments, the roles were very cleverly carried and everything went off smoothly and in a most satisfactory manner.

The audience was not as large as had been hoped for by the committee in charge owing to nearly a score of other attractions including dances, suppers for visitors who took part in the afternoon parade and "open house" programmes held by many local lodges and clubs. However, indications Thursday night were that the attendance this (Friday) evening will be large as the advance sale of tickets for tonight's performance is reported fairly heavy.

The story of the play centered about the frantic efforts of three World war soldiers to cover up their poverty-stricken condition when one of them, Tom Denker, received word that a rich uncle and rich aunt were going to pay him an unexpected visit. It was a tough proposition for Tom, whose finances were so low that he and his room mate in a cheap lodging house had to share one suit of clothes between them. Another comrade, Jerry Smith, just back from France, appeared on the scene clad only in a sheet, covered by an army overcoat, an army hat and leather puttees and explained his picturesque attire by informing his two friends that all of his money and practically all of his clothes had been stolen from his hotel room.

Jerry cleverly "borrowed" a couple of suits from a second hand store below with the aid of a rope, Tom provided himself with a temporary wife by "borrowing" the landlady's daughter, "Liz," to pass in this role in order to deceive his aunt who believed him already married.

In fact, comedy situations developed so rapidly that everyone seemed to be involved in some kind of a misfit marriage but, as usual, things finally straightened themselves out, four of the couples were happily married and Tom came into his belated half million dollar inheritance.

The role of Tom Denker was admirably carried by W. Elmer Mackenzie, whose rich relatives were the cause of all the trouble. Miss Evon M. Broadhurst was well cast as Elaine Lynne. She carried the part with the grace and ease that has characterized her acting in previous Legion plays. Another member of the cast who has appeared to advantage in Legion plays of past years was Mrs. Edythe M. Standish. She was seen in the part of Alice King, Tom's aristocratic aunt making a very favorable impression on the audience. Billy Mitchell, another former Legion player, was exceptionally good in the part of Bob Mills, and Dorothy M. Campbell was a happy choice for the part of Angela Scott, Bob's fiance.

Miss Mae O'Brien made a hit as Lis, the landlady's stepdaughter. Her clever line of slang and attempts to break into high society kept the audience in a continual stir. The comedian of the play was Meredith Lee, who appeared in the role of Jerry Smith, an army captain, just returned from France, who through the unexpected happenings at "his friends' rooming house was forced to act as cook and butler when Uncle William and Aunt Alice appeared. His efforts to make a cake brought down the house and he was roundly applauded for his splendid acting.

Mrs. Helen Mackenzie was an exceptionally good selection for the role of the landlady and Jimmie Moore carried the part of Bing, the chauffeur to perfection.

BEAUTIFUL FLOATS IN PARADE MUCH ADMIRED FEATURE

Broadway School

The tablet was adorned by a memorial wreath and was guarded by four boys in service uniform, as sailors and soldiers. The boys were Frederic Mletching, Robert Hawkins, Lawrence Millea, Henry Vignot.

Elizabeth St. School.

The float of the Elizabeth St. school, "To the Winners of Peace," as a tribute to the soldiers and sailors by whom our present peace was insured.

The body of the float was concealed by a mass of laurel and poppies. From it rose eight pillars garlanded with evergreen and surmounted by poppies.

The central figure on the float was Columbia, Miss Mabel Enos, who was represented as dominating the peace of the nations, which were grouped about her. These were represented by eight girls of the school: America, Mildred Weisinger; France, Mabel Scholtis; Ireland, Calista Kenyon; Scotland, Janet Gifford; Italy, Marian Guflos; Poland, Jennie Seneski; Belgium, Alice Peck; Czecho-Slovakia, Nettie Kowalchuck.

Guarding the float were soldiers and sailors, Abraham Goldberg, Nathan Jacobson, Sydney Blinderman, Isador Sadinsky, Abraham Cohen, Edward Szalkowski, Saul Rutchik and Benjamin Carachik.

Greeneville School.

"What Price War?" was the idea carried out by the pupils of the Greeneville school in their float which was fully decorated with bunting, flags and other emblems of the spirit of the day.

"War" typified by Robert Geer, dressed in the manner in which the Romans pictured their God of War, occupied a position at the rear of the float, a blood stained sword in one hand and the other several ropes that fettered those from whom war takes its toll. These were several characters grouped on a raised section in the forward part of the float.

First was the school, shown by Alice Butka, who, as a pupil seated at her desk, felt the stress of war's cost. Next to her was "Industry," taken by Nicholas Proporsky as a brick layer, whose troweled hand was rendered helpless by the rope that led from it to War's grasping hand.

Then "The Home" with the mother, portrayed by Mae Adams, with the family group around her crouched in terror at the unrelenting rope joined them to the battle field. The other members of the family were Henry Fidrych, Joseph Rynkiewicz, Nathan Lasaroff, Margaret West, Julia Jurczyk and Stella Rynkiewicz.

"Liberty," personified by Doris Peterson, bravely protected her ideals as contained in the book of "1776" around which the rope of war savagely entwined while "Religion," Anna Gauthier, with her cross fettered and borne to the ground protested with uplifted hand against the crime which enslaves civilization.

"Agriculture" sought to save what could be saved from the overturned basket which contained the fruits of the field.

Lying on the dead leaves of the battle field among the shell blasted trees were the soldiers who had made the supreme sacrifice. On them War ground the heel of his spurred book, while his Satanic grin dominated the whole scene. The soldiers in the scene were Woodrow Sebastian, Edward Prysbysc, Peter Walenda, Alex Arico and Frank Attenello.

Credit is due the children who entered into the spirit of the float with an understanding well beyond their years.

Higgins, on the Little Plain, Mrs. Trumbull remained, to be the guest of Mrs. Higgins at an informal reception from 1 to 3. Wives of members of the governor's staff present were, Mrs. Morris B. Payne, wife of the quartermaster-general, Mrs. Haggerty, wife of Brigadier-General James A. Haggerty, aide-de-camp, and Mrs. Pickering, whose husband, Lieutenant-Commander Nelson W. Following Governor Trumbull's address he returned to the Higgins residence with members of his staff, and with Congressman Richard P. Freeman, State Treasurer E. E. Rogers and members of the local committee had an informal lunch, before the entire party left for the armory.

FELL FROM FLOAT ON MAIN STREET HILL

Only one accident was reported in the city during the Armistice day observance, this occurring during the parade when Mrs. Edward Scurbler of 166 Mt. Pleasant street fell from the float of the Women of Mooseheart Legion.

As the float was going up Main street hill it had to stop and Mrs. Scurbler was jostled off the rear, falling in front of the telephone company float with the chair upon which she had been seated. She was helped to her feet and taken into the Western Union telegraph office, where Dr. Louis E. Cassidy was called and took her home.

Although there is no apparent outward change in the condition of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, veteran congressman, he is daily becoming slightly weaker.

Lagging feet and longing hearts

THE third dance . . . and tired, utterly tired . . . sinking into the first chair—there perhaps to spend the rest of the evening. This was not the vivacious girl she had been a few years ago. Then thirty dances would have been her portion. What tragedy was this, that she, so young, should seem so old.

What tragedy indeed is constipation—one of the worst diseases to afflict the human race. It saps strength. It thieves beauty. It poisons. It ages its victims long before their time. But the hopeful part of it is—constipation can be safely and permanently relieved without the use of habit-forming pills and drugs. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the answer.

No matter if constipation has become chronic, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will bring permanent relief. This is why: Bran—ALL-BRAN—goes completely through the system without changing fiber. It is what doctors call a bulk food, a necessary aid to regular elimination.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Its delightful nutty flavor makes it good as a cereal. Serve with milk or cream alone or with fresh or preserved fruit; with other cereals or cook in hot cereals; use in soups, or in the recipes given on every package.

Don't take chances. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is ALL-BRAN—100% bran. That's why doctors recommend it. Sold by all grocers and served in hotels and restaurants.

ANNIVERSARY MEETING BY NORWICH SOCIETY IN N. Y.

The fall meeting of the Norwich society of New York was held there at the Town Hall club on West 43rd St. last Monday evening. The fifty-seven members of the society, and guests sat down to a fine duck dinner at 7 o'clock.

After the meal had been completed, President J. H. Albertson spoke of the fact that the dinner was the fifteenth anniversary of the society, which is the only society of its type in New York city. There are many state clubs and section clubs in New York city but the Norwich society is the only city society there. President Albertson before introducing the next speaker read two interesting letters from Francis Gilman and Alonzo Lathrop, two of the absent members of the society.

James L. Case, president of the Norwich chamber of commerce, was the next speaker of the evening and gave a very interesting address on "Norwich, yesterday, today and tomorrow." He spoke of Norwich in the days of Governor Buckingham, of the two hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the town in 1909 when President Taft was the honored guest, and of the present day Norwich, the growth of the city and the optimism of the citizens of the Rose of New England. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Case and later in the evening he was made an honorary member of the society.

J. Olin Howe in introducing Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller spoke of him as a former Connecticut boy from Southington who has won literary renown as editor of Success Magazine and as an historian.

Dr. Miller gave interesting facts about the fourteen foreign governments which he visited and studied during the past summer. He spoke of Mussolini, the "iron man" of Italy, of the French debt, of conditions in England, Russia and other foreign countries and ended his address by saying that the citizens of the United States are the luckiest people in the world and that citizenship in the United States is the best bargain in the world today. Dr. Miller said that in many foreign European countries there is an undercurrent of radicalism and that in the United States there is less of a radical element than in any foreign European country. Dr. Miller's speech was enlivened by many interesting and amusing anecdotes and jokes.

After Dr. Miller's speech President Albertson called on different members of the society, and remarks were made by Frank L. Potter, E. J. Crawford, William B. Klein, Reginald Reynolds, H. W. Keigwin, J. Olin Howe, Marco S. Parker, O. Chester Johnson, Harold H. Thresher, Warren K. Dowe, J. D. Herr and Albert S. Bard.

The meeting adjourned at 10:30.

Those attending the meeting were Charles A. Beach, William B. Klein, Howard C. Russ, F. L. Potter, C. H. Tirrell, H. W. Keigwin, James L. Case, W. F. McNamara, J. H. THREE-ACT COMEDY CLEVERLY GIVEN BY AMERICAN LEGION PLAYERS

When a Feller Needs a Friend, a three act comedy, and the annual theatrical staged by Robert O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion, opened a three nights' run Thursday evening at the Strand theatre. Once again the American Legion players upheld their reputation as high class entertainers, and the audience was most appreciative of their efforts to please. The play was a riot of fun from start to finish, there were no dull moments, the roles were very cleverly carried and everything went off smoothly and in a most satisfactory manner.

The audience was not as large as had been hoped for by the committee in charge owing to nearly a score of other attractions including dances, suppers for visitors who took part in the afternoon parade and "open house" programmes held by many local lodges and clubs. However, indications Thursday night were that the attendance this (Friday) evening will be large as the advance sale of tickets for tonight's performance is reported fairly heavy.

The story of the play centered about the frantic efforts of three World war soldiers to cover up their poverty-stricken condition when one of them, Tom Denker, received word that a rich uncle and rich aunt were going to pay him an unexpected visit. It was a rough proposition for Tom, whose finances were so low that he and his room mate in a cheap lodging house had to share one pair of clothes between them. Another comrade, Jerry Smith, just back from France, appeared on the scene clad only in a sheet, covered by an army overcoat, an army hat and leather puttees and explained his picturesque attire by informing his two friends that all his money and practically all of his clothes had been stolen from his hotel room.

Jerry cleverly "borrowed" a couple of suits from a second hand store below with the aid of a rope. Tom provided himself with a temporary wife by "borrowing" the landlady's daughter, "Liz," to pass in this role in order to deceive his aunt who believed him already married.

In fact, comedy situations developed so rapidly that everyone seemed to be involved in some kind of a mix-it marriage but, as usual, things finally straightened themselves out, four of the couples were happily married and Tom came into his belated half million dollar inheritance.

The role of Tom Denker was admirably carried by W. Elmer Mackenzie, whose rich relatives were the cause of all the trouble. Miss Evon M. Broadhurst was well cast as Elaine Lynne. She carried the part with the grace and ease that has characterized her acting in previous Legion plays. Another member of the cast who has appeared to advantage in Legion plays of past years was Mrs. Edythe M. Standish. She was seen in the part of Alice King, Tom's aristocratic aunt making a very favorable impression on the audience. Billy Mitchell, another former Legion player, was exceptionally good in the part of Bob Mills, and Dorothy M. Campbell was a happy choice for the part of Angela Scott, Bob's fiance.

Miss Mae O'Brien made a hit as Liz, the landlady's stepdaughter. Her clever line of slang and attempts to break into high society kept the audience in a continual stir. The comedian of the play was Meredith Lee, who appeared in the role of Jerry Smith, an army captain, just returned from France, who through the unexpected happenings at his friends' rooming house was forced to act as cook and butler when Uncle William and Aunt Alice appeared. His efforts to make a cake brought down the house and he was roundly applauded for his splendid acting.

Mrs. Helen Mackenzie was an exceptionally good selection for the role of the landlady and Jimmie Moore carried the part of Bing, the chauffeur to perfection.

The central figure on the float was Columbia, Miss Mabel Enos, who was represented as dominating the peace of the nations, which were grouped about her. These were represented by eight girls of the school: America, Mildred Welsinger; France, Mabel Schillitso; Ireland, Calista Kenyon; Scotland, Janet Gifford; Italy, Marian Guflos; Poland, Jennie Seneski; Belgium, Alice Peck; Czecho-Slovakia, Nettie Kowalchuck.

Greeneville School.

"What Price War?" was the idea carried out by the pupils of the Greeneville school in their float which was fully decorated with bunting, flags and other emblems of the spirit of the day.

"War" typified by Robert Geer, dressed in the manner in which the Romans pictured their God of War, occupied a position at the rear of the float, a blood stained sword in one hand and the other several ropes that fettered those from whom war takes its toll. These were several characters grouped on a raised section in the forward part of the float.

First was the school, shown by Alice Butka, who, as a pupil seated at her desk, felt the stress of war's cost. Next to her was "Industry," taken by Nicholas Proporsky as a brick layer, whose troweled hand was rendered helpless by the rope that led from it to War's grasping hand.

Then "The Home" with the mother, portrayed by Mae Adams, with the family group around her crouched in terror at the unrelenting rope that joined them to the battle field. The other members of the family were Henry Fidrych, Joseph Rynkiewics, Nathan Lazeroff, Margaret West, Julia Jarczyak and Stella Rynkiewics.

"Liberty," personified by Doris Peterson, bravely protected her ideals as contained in the book of "1776" around which the rope of war savagely entwined while "Religion," Anna Gauthier, with her cross fettered and borne to the ground protested with uplifted hand against the crime which enslaves civilization.

"Agriculture" sought to save what could be saved from the overturned basket which contained the fruits of the field.

Howe, Mrs. Archibald Mitchell, Jr., Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, Miss Marion L. Bishop, Norwich, Mrs. Warren VanDenseb, of Hudson, N. Y., Mrs. Benjamin T. Marshall and Miss Orrie Shearer, of Connecticut college, and Miss Rosamund Danielson, of Putnam. The Mable and house decorations were autumn flowers in scarlet and gold.

Following Governor Trumbull's address he returned to the Pilgrim residence with members of his staff, and with Congressman Richard P. Freeman, State Treasurer E. Z. Rogers and members of the local committee had an informal lunch, before the entire party left for the armory.

FELL FROM FLOAT ON MAIN STREET HILL

Only one accident was reported in the city during the Armistice day observance, this occurring during the parade when Mrs. Edward Sourbier of 168 Mt. Pleasant street fell from the float of the Women of Mooseheart Legion.

As the float was going up Main street hill it had to stop and Mrs. Sourbier was jostled off the rear, falling in front of the telephone company float with the chair upon which she had been seated. She was helped to her feet and taken into the Western Union telegraph office, where Dr. Louis T. Cassidy was called and took her home. She is suffering from a wrenched back and is under the care of the physician, her injuries confining her to bed at present.

Although there is no apparent outward change in the condition of "Uncle Joe" Cannon, veteran congressman, he is daily becoming slightly weaker.

Lagging feet and longing hearts

THE third dance . . . and tired, utterly tired . . . sinking into the first chair—there perhaps to spend the rest of the evening. This was not the vivacious girl she had been a few years ago. Then thirty dances would have been her portion. What tragedy was this, that she, so young, should seem so old.

What tragedy indeed is constipation—one of the worst diseases to afflict the human race. It saps strength. It thieves beauty. It poisons. It ages its victims long before their time. But the hopeful part of it is—constipation can be safely and permanently relieved without the use of habit-forming pills and drugs. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is the answer.

No matter if constipation has become chronic, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN will bring permanent relief. This is why: Bran—ALL-BRAN—goes completely through the system without changing fiber. It is what doctors call a bulk food, a necessary aid to regular elimination.

Eat at least two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN every day—in chronic cases, with every meal. If eaten regularly, it is guaranteed to bring permanent relief, or your grocer returns the purchase price. Its delightful nutty flavor makes it good as a cereal. Serve with milk or cream alone or with fresh or preserved fruit; with other cereals or cook in hot cereals; use in soups, or in the recipes given on every package.

Don't take chances. Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is ALL-BRAN—100% bran. That's why doctors recommend it. Sold by all grocers and served in hotels and restaurants.

WASHINGTON MOURNS THE DEATH OF UNCLE JOE CANNON

For Half a Century "Uncle" Joe Had Been An Outstanding Figure in the House of Representatives—Leaders of All Parties Bowed Their Heads When They Heard of His Death at His Home in Danville, Ills. The Most Bitter Political Opponents of "Uncle" Joe Loved His Personality—His Czar-Like Ruling as Speaker of the House Finally Led to the End of His Political Mastery.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Intimate memories that span a full half-century made the passing the Uncle Joe Cannon an occasion of universal sorrow in Washington.

No other public man of his time was at once so strongly hated politically and so strongly loved personally. The heads of the leaders of all parties were bowed when they heard of his death.

The capital had not seen him for many months, but he was one whose image lingered clear-cut in the memories of the great and the lowly. For a generation his slight figure was a familiar part of the unfolding panorama of national politics and government. And in that period he became just as truly a landmark of the capital city itself. Recollections of his variety and his eccentricities linger in crowding legions about the lobbies of congress, in the corridors of the chief hotels, and along Pennsylvania avenue.

He is best remembered, perhaps, as the unbending speaker, ruling the house as it had been a school room and then accepting unbendingly the political thrashing that meant the end of his political mastery but left him still a patriarch and an honored friend of his associates.

The story of the struggle and his overthrow as one of the classics of reminiscent Washington. It has become a part of his lore for weeks. He guarded off the inevitable, refusing with iron will to give his enemies the opportunity of recognition of the house floor, and thus bottling up the resolution which was to overturn house rules and place the conduct of business in the hands of the members themselves.

One of the first to pay tribute at his bier was George W. Norris of Nebraska, now as insurgent senator and in those days the insurgent house member who led the fight on "Cannonism." It was Norris who carried in his pocket for many days the fateful resolution, changing the manner of committee appointments and the general method of house procedure, before he finally found an opportunity to break through the steel-clad armour of the speaker's gatekeepers. Once he got the floor, the Nebraskan precipitated a day-and-night battle that did not end until the days of "Czar Cannon" had been terminated.

"I do not believe he ever did anything that he did not believe was right," said Senator Norris today. "There never was anything personal in our fight. We represented different ideas, that was all. He had a wonderful record of public service."

Senator Borah of Idaho described him as "a picturesque figure, belonging to another era, but a great American and a patriot of the Lincoln type." Senator Wadsworth called him 'one of the greatest figures American politics has even known." Senator Glass of Virginia, declared him one of the most intelligent members who ever sat in congress, and the proctor of the federal treasury against "raids of all descriptions."

DEATH OR JOE CANNON WAS NOT EXPECTED

DANVILLE, Ill., Nov. 12.—(AP)—The fiery spirit of Joseph Gurney Cannon, dimmed to an ember by the weight of 90 years, was quenched today by death.

In the home from which he went to congress 52 years ago, and amid walls laden with the trophies of his public life, the patriarch died last night, in the midst of a deep sleep.

Weakening of the heart muscles caused him death, but the gastric depredations of old age had warned him family several months ago that the end was near. He told comrades in the national house, when he quit its halls in 1922, that he was going home to die, home to the rambling brown brick mansion which he built 65 years ago for his bride, who preceded him to the grave.

After his retirement from congress, he continued his daily walks down town beneath the elms of Vermilion street, and the most cartooned face in America was daily visible behind the brown curtains of the Second National bank which he helped found. But several months ago, he was forced to forego his walks, and he turned to a daily motor outing, which he continued until a few weeks ago.

His mind faded with his body, and he could recall but dimly, after his 90th birthday last May, the scenes with which his long congressional service was vivid. Not waning memory, however, could keep him inactive, and his last public act four months ago was to turn the sod for a new church for the St. James' Methodist Episcopal congregation. Born a Quaker, he joined the Methodist church after leaving congress and each Sunday until recent weeks found him in the pew his wife had occupied throughout her lifetime in Danville. A funeral air and one of reverence settled over the city as news of his death spread.

His 90th birthday was made a civic holiday, and he was a guest of the Kiwanis club, to which he belonged at a birthday party. He did not try to speak but he stood behind the mammoth birthday cake, tilted his picturesque hat at the accustomed angle, and smiled genially above his chin whiskers while photographers made a record of the occasion.

He even inserted a cigar between his teeth to make complete the resemblance to the Cannon of old, although he had largely abandoned smoking in his later years and had substituted mild cigars for the stogies which were recognized throughout the land as a part of the Cannon picture.

Plans for the funeral were incomplete tonight, pending the arrival from San Francisco and Washington of two granddaughters, Mrs. William Houghteling and Mrs. Dorsey Richardson, Cannon's two daughters, Mrs. Mabel Leseure and Miss Helen Cannon were with their father when he died.

Sketch of Career of "Uncle Joe."

Time scarcely had touched with silver the thin locks of Joseph Gurney Cannon years ago, ere the nation had rechristened him "Uncle Joe." And under that title, confirmed by millions who never saw him, yet knew every line of his worn face and every whimsical trait of his intense personality, "Uncle Joe" came at last to end his career as eldest statesman of the nation; the man of longest service in the congress; the object of honors among his colleagues that took no thought of party or political differences.

In the musty files of the Congressional Records there stands written a moving tale of this man's great service. It begins back in 1873 when first he came out of Illinois to take his seat in the house even then a picturesque, fire-eating political gladiator to whom the uproar of the debate and the tense moments in committee were the breath of life. The yellowed pages show day by day how the hot blood of youth drove him into every affray, his tongue lashing out at his opponents, his quick mind formulating at call the instant expedients that are the weapons of political combat. Month by month he climbed toward leadership, growing more knowing as each session brought its new conflicts; hardening with time into the forceful, relentless champion of his party, until that day when the gavel was placed in his hands and he mounted the speaker's rostrum as master of the house to rule alone for four years as few men before him had ruled that body.

"Uncle Joe" was then a veteran and in the heyday of his power. Around him had gathered a lore of tales, some true, some false, but all picturesque, and through the news columns and cartoons his personality had been stamped indelibly on the minds of men all over the land.

Great Power Led to Downfall.

Yet great as his place and power had grown, great too was his fall when the house in 1910 revolted against his czar-like rule and stripped him of his power through a combination of insurgents in his own party with the democratic minority. Even then, however, when the battle in the house reached a pitch of excitement that swept every other happening in the world into the background for all Americans, "Uncle Joe" fighting with grim courage to the last, was to know something of the feeling men would have for him later. The triumphant rebels of the house refused to take the last step and oust him from the speakership. Content with stripping the post of its power, they voted to hold him in place.

In the political deluge that fell upon his party two years later, "Uncle Joe" failed of re-election for the second time in his national career. Once before he had practiced law in Danville after his defeat for congress. When he came back again at the next election, age had begun to cool his ardor. He sat many days without sharing in debate and it was only in flashes that his old fire showed when he took the floor.

But never to the last was he in doubt as to the hearing the house would give him, never did he fail of a full audience among his colleagues and of deep interest in his remarks.

Born in a little Quaker settlement near Guilford, N. C., May 7, 1836 and named for Joseph Gurney, a famous Quaker, Mr. Cannon often remarked that he seemed to have drifted away from the faith and habits of the pious people whom Gurney led. For he was a fiery, rough and tumble fighter always. On the floor he fought with whirling arms and contortions of his body to drive home his words.

In one exciting battle the late Champ Clark, dubbed him "The Dancing Dervish of Danville" and brought down upon his head the wrath of "Uncle Joe." Once, in the heat of debate, Mr Clark said he saw Mr. Cannon do a trick—not duplicated by a speaker since the confusion of tongues at Babel—make a complete circle on his heel.

Incessant Smoker

"Uncle Joe" smoked incessantly, a cigar tilted sharply upward toward his hat brim, and cartoonists never failed to draw him that way. When he celebrated his 85th birthday on May 7, 1921, President Harding sent a box of cigars and a letter telling him that if they were not to his liking to come down to the white house and pick out something else. But notwithstanding the sharp bite, "Uncle Joe" bravely attacked them, declaring it was not right to look a gift horse in the mouth when the gift horse was in the white house.

In the same way Mr. Cannon always smiled when reporters exaggerated

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

LONDON, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Rumors are circulating in Stockholm, says an Exchange telegraph dispatch from the Swedish capital, that the engagement is soon to be announced of Crown Prince Olav of Norway and Princess Martha, sister of Princess Astrid, who recently was married to Crown Prince Leopold of Belgium.

PARIS, Nov. 12.—(AP)—The Dolly sisters today won their suit for 550,000 francs against the Moulin Rouge theatre which, the civil court decided, failed to fulfill its obligations undertaken with the American dancers. The Dolly sisters charged that instead of being billed as the big stars of the show as promised, the Moulin Rouge bore their pride by giving the French dancer Mistinguette more money and even a better place on the bill.

HOLDING CONFERENCES ON MEXICAN SITUATION

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Reappearance of Ambassador Sheffield in Washington today for conferences with President Coolidge and Secretary Kellogg, served to bring the Mexican situation sharply to the fore. Despite the silence of the state department as to matters under discussion, there can be no question that unusual importance is attached to these conversations.

Mr. Sheffield was with Secretary Kellogg for a considerable time today. Presumably he will find opportunity tomorrow for a talk with the president, since he is staying at the white house.

He is preparing to return to Mexico City and there are indications that aspects of the situation he will face there, much wider than the continuance of the prolonged correspondence over Mexican oil and land laws, will be considered, with the president.

Reports current in Europe today that the last American note, now before the Mexico City government, contains a virtual ultimatum in connection with the oil-and-land controversy appear to be highly exaggerated. At the same time, there are signs, that the note is regarded at the state department as of more significance than the other two communications in the series, one from Mexico and one to Mexico, which are still unpublished.

NOW USING AIRPLANES IN THEIR GANG WARFARE

MARION, Ills., Nov. 12—(AP)—Airplane and aerial bomb today were added to armored cars, machine guns and other anvel weapons used in the southern Illinois gang warfare between the rival Shelton and Birger liquor factions.

Flying low over "Shady Rest," a roadhouse operated by Charley Birger, gang leader ten miles east of Marion, an unidentified aviator dropped a bomb which failed to explode.

Seven or eight gangsters then ran out of the place and began firing at the plane with rifles and machine guns as it circled around again and dropped two more bombs. One was a dud. The other exploded in the woods 100 yards from the roadhouse.

The gun fire did not find its mark. The aviator flew away rapidly to the north. The attacking plane bore no marks of identification and the pilot could not be seen clearly from the ground.

No damage was done by the explosion but Birger, who was at his home at Harrisburg at the time, was wrought up over the new method of waging war against him.

"There'll be something popping off here now," he told a newspaper correspondent. "They can't try that stuff on me. I'll get an airplane, if I can, and I'll use it, too."

Birger's attitude apparently was in reply to an early morning visit by alleged Birger gangsters at West City, near Benton, 29 miles north of here where they poured a heavy machine gun and rifle fire into two houses in a neighborhood frequented by the Sheltonites.

HOBOES WOULD EDUCATE HOST OF "AUTO HIKERS"

OMAHA, Nebr., Nov. 12—(AP)—Veteran "Weary Willie," whose usual means of transportation has been the railroad, whether it be atop a freight or on the rods of a passenger coach, today took official cognisance of the rapid increase of the "auto hikers" and voted to "uplift and educate them to the ways of hobodom."

At today's session, their national convention here, the hoboes, led by James Eads How, "millionaire hobo," voted to appoint a field agent who would canvass and organize the "auto hikers," who travel about in some one's automobile, and to teach them the ways of the road.

In furtherance of their program, V. C. Anderson, convention chairman, warned the hoboes that they must always be civil to motorists.

"It's the young kids who do the murdering and robbing along the road," Anderson said. "They don't know to bum and they get desperate. I don't know of a typical hobo who ever was convicted of robbing a motorist. We must educate these young fellows."

ALLEGED COUNTERFEITING PLOT DISCOVERED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—An alleged plot to ship counterfeit money from Boston to Detroit and other midwestern cities was revealed by federal authorities today after the arrest of George Rosetti, an East Boston grocer. Rosetti, who was charged with conspiracy to possess and own counterfeit Federal Reserve $20 bills, pleaded not guilty when arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Jenney and was released on bail of $1,500.

Rosetti also was charged with delivering to an unnamed person in Boston quantities of the bills for shipment to Detroit.

ALL OF WEDDING PARTY WORE REGALIA OF KLAN

BERWICK, Pa., Nov. 12—(AP)—With the wedding party, minister and many of the guests robed and masked, Miss Ellen Heminger, of Berwick and Emory Brown, of Bloomsburg, were married here today in the First Baptist church in the first Ku Klux Klan wedding in this section.

The Rev. R. J. Reese, of Kingston, was the officiating clergyman. The klan ceremony was used and the auditorium had klan decorations.

REJECTED PROPOSAL FOR COTTON WEARING APPAREL

DALLAS, Texas, Nov. 12—(AP)—The Texas Federation of Women's clubs today rejected a proposal binding members to buy cotton wearing apparel, wherever possible, to aid the cotton price situation.

Women do not wish to discard silk for cotton, and no one would comply with the resolution if passed, it was asserted.

Seized, Seven Men Captured

Stills Had Capacity of 1,000 Gallons of Alcohol a Day —In Barn in Clintonville— Arsenal of Arms Taken.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Three stills capable of producing 1,000 gallons of illicit alcohol a day, about 10,000 gallons of denatured alcohol, a small arsenal of weapons said to be for use against rival bootleggers, and seven men were the spoils of a raid this afternoon on a lonely barn in Clintonville, conducted by five federal prohibition agents from Washington.

Stepping suddenly into the barn before the men could offer resistance, the officers found the stills and 14 tanks, each of 1,000 gallons capacity, in full operation.

Antonio Dimagio, 19; Alfred Fasulo, 20; Giovoanni Di Corrado, 30; Giuseppe Tunello, 33; William Boscia, 33, and Ignazio Diedeque, 40, of this city, and Tony Falcone, 27, of Clintonville, were the men arrested on the spot. It was believed that the stills were kept going night and day, the men working in shifts.

Half a dozen shotguns, nearly a dozen revolvers, and a supply of ammunition were seized. The work of dismantling the plant was started today and will probably require several days.

The men arrested were sullen and not talkative, but the officers believed that the plant had been in operation for some time and had been putting forth a flow of illicit alcohol to a mostly in Connecticut.

TELEPHONE FIGURES IN HALL-MILLS MURDER CASE

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Nov. 12—(AP)—One telephone conversation between the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills was described today in the trial of Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, and an effort to establish another telephone communication was related. The testimony was given by a former maid in the Hall household, and a neighbor of Mrs. Mills, at the time of the double killing.

Two New York newspapermen told of the transfer of a calling card, figuring largely in the case, from New Jersey to New York and back again, and the undertaker, who prepared the bodies of Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills for burial completed the outstanding testimony of the day.

News of a blood transfusion for Mrs. Jane Gibson, regarded as state's star witness, a patient in a Jersey City hospital was received in court during the luncheon recess, making the date of Mrs. Gibson's appearance on the witness stand even more uncertain than it has been since she was stricken, the first day of the trial.

The death of a brother of Edward Tillman, a juror, will cause no delay in the trial. Accompanied by a bailiff, the juror was permitted to visit his family tonight.

Mrs. Louise Geist Riehl, a self-possessed young woman, whose dark eyes snapped beneath a very red hat, as she testified, was in the Hall home the night a minister and choir singer were killed. The other maid, Barbara Tough, who completed her testimony as the first witness was given her "Thursday night out," and did not return home until ten o'clock.

LOS ANGELES HAD TROUBLE WITH HER WATER RECOVERY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—After experiencing difficulty with her water recovery system the airship Los Angeles turned back late this afternoon to her base at Lakehurst instead of flying on to Norfolk as planned.

The ship circled over Washington several times before notifying the navy department of the decision to retrace her course. The freezing temperature affected the recovery system in such a way that her ballast system was disarranged. In order to have descended at Norfolk she would have been compelled to expel valuable helium.

It was indicated the flight to Norfolk might be made on Nov. 17.

BLAMES OLDER GENERATION FOR TREND OF YOUNG FOLKS

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—The older generation is responsible for the new civilization built on a pleasure basis, Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of social service at Boston university, told members of the New England Association of School Superintendents, the Massachusetts School Superintendents' association, and the New England Teacher Training association in annual convention here.

"A new civilization built on a pleasure basis is an actuality," said Dr. Groves. "The young people of today feel that life ought to be pleasurable. It is not an indictment of youth to make this description. The young of today did not bring about this civilization, it is the older generation which is responsible."

RESCUED AFTER BEING ADRIFT MORE THAN 26 HOURS

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 12—(AP)—Rescued after being adrift in a dory for more than 26 hours, when he was followed by a huge shark for the best part of a night, David Conrad, a fisherman aboard the schooner Benjamin Thompson, returned today from Boothbay Harbor aboard the packet Myra J. Wooster.

Conrad's dory drifted away from the schooner while fishing off New Ledge Monday and was lost in the dense fog. Conrad put out for shore, navigating only by the direction of the sun and the wind, and after rowing a day and a night covered the distance of 40 miles and landed at Damariscove Island.

Captain William Thomas of the schooner and his men spent the night burning rockets in an attempt to locate the lost member of the crew.

To lighten the boat Conrad threw overboard some of the fish he had taken from the trawls. Around sunset the shark appeared near the boat. Fearing for his safety Conrad commenced throwing over the remainder of the fish to distract its attention. For hours the shark's fin could be plainly seen darting through the water a short distance from the dory. Conrad rowed on, bailing the boat, which was leaking badly and attempting to stuff the leak with his handkerchief. After several hours the shark disappeared.

MARRIAGE OF THE DUKE OF MARLBOROUGH ANNULLED

ROME, Nov. 12—(AP)—The marriage of the duke of Marlborough and the former Consuelo Vanderbilt of New York in 1895 has been annulled by the Roman Catholic diocesan court of Southwick, according to a semi-official statement given out today at the vatican.

The semi-official statement says that the annulment was granted first by the Southwick court and was then confirmed by the holy rota tribunal in July of this year and that the interested persons were notified at the beginning of August.

This statement came somewhat as a surprise, as according to one vatican authority yesterday, nothing had been received regarding the case.

Profit for the first nine months this year was $5,601,422 before [illegible] and federal taxes.

Vote of Confidence For French Premier

Chamber Agreed With M. Poincare to Set Everything Aside to Work on the Budget For 1927.

PARIS, Nov. 12 (AP)—Premier Poincare today won a vote of confidence for his government on the reopening of parliament and at the same time declined to be drawn into debate on France-Italian relations centering about the Ventimiglia incident and the Garibaldi affair.

The vote of confidence came after a three hour debate in the chamber in which every subject of current interest, excepting the single question of war debts, was discussed. The premier demanded that all interpellations be postponed and that the budget for 1927 be cleaned up as quickly as possible. He considered this demand of such vital importance that he made it a question of confidence and in this was supported by the chamber by a vote of 345 and 207.

When the chamber reconvened this afternoon there was a long list of would-be interpellators, ready to get into action. This morning the list numbered 71 and there were still others filing their notices. Thereupon Premier Poincare declared that he was opposed to any oratory until the budget had been disposed of.

Every interpellator had five minutes to discuss the motion for postponement of questions, but the matter was settled in three hours when half the critics of the ministry dropped out of the contest.

Those who did take the floor, one after the other to debate the question of postponement, took Premier Mussolini of Italy as their theme. The socialists and communists demanded whether the French government could not take care that the Italian premier should find "diversions from his difficulties elsewhere than in France."

But the premier refused to be drawn out on this topic, his only retort being that the financial situation was much improved, that it was quite possible to compromise it was by no means by committing imprudences and that he considered that enough already has been said on the proposed interpellations.

The chamber agreed with him by a majority of 115 and voted to set aside everything else and to get right down to work on the budget for 1927.

BANK AT LA PORTE, IND., ROBBED BY FIVE YOUNG MEN

LA PORTE, Ind., Nov. 12—(AP)—Five young men quietly robbed the People's Trust and Savings bank of La Porte of $40,000 in cash and $100,000 in negotiable securities today, raced out of town in an automobile. Tonight no trace of them had been found.

Ten employes and five customers were in the bank shortly before noon, when the five men, unmasked and well-dressed, drove to the bank and dashed in. One shot was fired into the ceiling from a sawed-off shotgun, apparently in an effort to intimidate employes and customers who were forced to lie upon the floor while the cash from the tellers' tills was scooped up.

This amount was not satisfactory and Harry Keller, the cashier, was forced to open the vault, from which the negotiable paper was obtained.

Leaving their victims still face down on the floor, the robbers hurried out, leaped into their motor car and were away before an alarm could be given.

M'ADOO NOT TO APPEAR AS WITNESS IN MORSE TRIAL

NEW YORK, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Appearance in court of former Secretary of the Treasury William C. McAdoo, as a defense witness in the Morse stock fraud trial will be dispensed with, under an agreement made by defense counsel today.

Defense counsel consented to withdraw the subpoena after it was stipulated that McAdoo was a participant in large coal shipments undertaken by Morse and knew the men involved in the contracts for shipment. It was also conceded that the former secretary had testified extensively in the Washington trial in 1923.

Monday, the opening of the fifth week of the trial, the court refused to intervene in the arguments as to whether or not McAdoo should appear. Counsel for McAdoo had asked that he be excused as he was in California and his testimony was of no material importance.

Today's court session was featured by the dismissal of charges against six of the 16 defendants in the trial.

Dismissal was granted on a previous ruling which excluded testimony of the sale of stock of the United States shipping corporation, a Morse subsidiary, as not having been covered by the indictment.

The men dropped from further prosecution are James R. Nelson, Arthur W. Kehler, Lawrence N. Bremer, Maurice M. O. Purdy, and Edwards Lucas, curb brokers, and James Gill, publicity agent for the stock of the United States Shipping corporation.

The defendants remaining are the three sons of Charles W. Morse, Harry F., Edwin A., and Benjamin W. Morse, George W. Burdett, Rupert M. Mead, Mark L. Gilbert, George S. Wells, Milton Quinn, or Quimby, Henry E. Broughton and William Dennis.

DESCRIBED HOW HE KILLED BROTHER-IN-LAW

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Nov. 12.—(AP)—Without emotion, and apparently without remorse, Edward W. Lovelace, 45, described to police today how he had killed his brother-in-law, Everett Heath, 20, Wynesburg, Ky., and then threw the body into the river.

Heath's body with the legs tied together, and with a heavy stone tied to the neck, was found partly submerged in the Ohio river near here Wednesday.

Lovelace, before his arrest, had written a confession on a pad of paper. Afterward, realizing apparently that it might aid materially in having the crime fastened on him, he destroyed the document.

However, he failed to destroy the pad itself. Detectives discovered the pad when they searched his home and noticed the imprint, left by a pencil.

Using a few words deciphered from the tablet imprint, police traced the crime to Lovelace, who had identified Heath's body and had been held for questioning.

The imprint of the confession was shown to Lovelace, who after several denials admitted the slaying. He told police he killed Heath in October during a quarrel while the two were fishing. After sinking the body in the river, he said, he went home and wrote a confession. Later fearing the consequences of his act he destroyed the paper and sought to conceal the slaying.

NO STATE TRUCKS USED IN WESTBROOK IN MAY, 1926

HEAVY FINES GIVEN OUT TO LIQUOR VIOLATORS

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 12—The September term of the criminal side of the Windham county superior court was reopened by Judge Baldwin about 10:30 o'clock Friday to dispose of four of the remaining five cases for liquor law violations. The first case was that of Stanley Kamminsky of this city, charged with one count. He pleaded guilty and received a fine of $100 and costs with a five-day suspended jail sentence.

Edgar Dupuis of Moosup pleaded guilty to four counts for sales of liquor. State's Attorney Bradford characterized Dupuis as an old offender and stated that this was his second appearance before court. On his recommendation Judge Baldwin imposed a fine of $400 on each count, making an aggregate fine of $1,600 and a jail sentence of fifteen days, a total of sixty days was imposed and suspended Dupuis was placed on probation for one year.

Hyman Brettschneider of this city pleaded guilty to five counts of sales. Another count of keeping liquor with intent to sell was nolled. State's Attorney Bradford recommended $100 on each count and a suspended jail sentence of 25 days. He gave the information that earlier in the year Brettschneider had been fined $50 and costs on his plea of guilty and given a suspended sentence of six months in jail on a charge of keeping a gaming place. The probation sentence was for one year and as the period had not yet expired the liquor case was a violation of probation and Attorney Bradford said that the sentence should go into effect. Judge Baldwin imposed a fine of $500 with a suspended 25 day jail sentence. In the matter of the previous suspended jail sentence and probation term, Judge Baldwin ordered that the sentence take effect starting January 17, 1927, ten days before the expiration of probation.

From a pecuniary standpoint the case of Gideon N. Lamaitre of Putnam charged with several counts of liquor law vilations to which he has admitted his guilt, was the record breaker of the series, a fine of $2,000 and costs being imposed. State's Attorney Bradford explained that Lamaitre who is a druggist in Putnam is a cripple in addition to other physical ailments that have weakened him to such an extent that assistance is needed in getting dressed As far as the state was concerned it was Lamaitre's first offense. The accused could not be in court due to his condition but had admitted his guilt. The case was ordered nolled on payment of $2,000 without any jail sentence.

Frank Cournoyer of Plainfield was first of the number to be put to plea. Attorney Bradford stated that the defendant already had a liquor violation case appealed to the superior court. He having been fined in the Plainfield town court in September. For the more recent offense Cournoyer was charged with three counts which plus two from the previous case made a total of five to which he pleaded guilty. He was fined $100 on each of the five counts and given a suspended jail sentence of 25 days.

Judge Baldwin then adjourned court, the civil side to resume Friday morning, November 19, at 10:15 o'clock. A grand total of $12,100 in fines, with costs, has been received this week from the sixteen liquor law violators brought before the criminal side.

The jury will be summoned Tuesday, November 23rd to hear cases on the present civil term of the Windham county superior court. It was announced at the civil side session held in this city at 10:15 o'clock Friday morning Judge Alfred C. Baldwin was on the bench. The attorneys were notified that jury cases should be disposed of next week if possible. There are eight cases on the jury list and these were reviewed but none were claimed for next week. Three cases claimed by attorneys for the week of November 23 were: George R. Edgerton doing business under the name of Harvey Seed Company vs. E. A. Buck Co.; Mary Rocsati, admn. vs. Herbert J. Lane et al. and Alfred Rooney vs. Charles Robitaille. These cases were assigned for Tuesday, November 23, in the order given and Friday of next week one or two cases not claimed will be assigned to follow these. The case of Anna T. McCathy vs. The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, which was to have been heard by Jury, was claimed by the attorney for the plaintiff for the week of November 30. The date of hearing for this case was deferred by Judge Baldwin.

Attorney Fass for the defendant was granted an assignment for Friday November 19th in the case of Amelia A. Welch vs. Florence B. Sherman. In the Chlebus, a suit for divorce, Attorney Foss announced that the plaintiff side case of Catherine Chlebus vs. Andrew was ready but Attorney Kelly for the defense explained that the defendant was in Poland and had made application to the Polish government to return to this country to contest the action. The court granted a continuance without set date. The case of Samuel J. Turcotte vs. The State Department of Health et al. was continued. A decree of divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty was granted by Judge Baldwin in the uncontested divorce action of Delia Zarestski vs. Joseph Zarestski.

The next case taken up was that of John I. Hammond of Clarks' Corner vs. George E. Lummis, a replevin action brought by Hammond to recover a "grandfather's clock," from the possession o fthe defendant who was administrator of the estate of the late Frank C. Lummis, the latter a brother of the administrator. Hammond claimed that the clock had been in his family for over two centuries. His aunt married Frank C. Lummis several years ago and took the clock into her household with an understanding that it was to come into the possession of the plaintiff in the event of her death She died previous to her husband and when the latter died several months ago the plaintiff demanded the clock but it was refused him. The replevin suit was then brought and the clock is now in possession of a third party residing in Chaplin. Testifying for the plaintiff were, Lucy C. Hawkhanner, Merritt Walsh, Eglanny Welch and Ella Welch. The defense requested a motion for non-suit but this was denied. No testimony was given by the defense and it was agreed to have the attorneys file briefs in the case to be handed to the court Friday of next week.

A one and one-half story frame house near South Chaplin Bridge, owned by David H. Clark of Orangeburg, N. Y. was destroyed by fire of unknown origin early Friday morning The house was used as a temporary office and storehouse by L. E. McLaughlin of New London, who is constructing the new concrete bridge at the Chaplin Dizzy Dell over the Natchaug river. It is understood that a fire was burning in the office stove the previous day but workmen extinguished it before leaving their labors. There was no one in the building when the fire broke out about three o'clock in the morning. Tools and equipment owned by Contractor McLaughlin were destroyed. It is said that included in the lost articles are valuable papers belonging to the contractor and a valuable instrument owned by Robert E. Kelly of this city, one of the state engineers at work on the bridge. Insurance to the amount of $700 was carried on the house.

The new fire house, a wooden building of two stories, and 30 by 32 feet, with an ornamental roof, is now under course of construction of land of L. M. Hartson, corner opposite Moore's store on the Windham Center road. A combination hose and chemical wagon and a hose wagon will be placed on the main floor and the upper is arranged as a parlor and meeting place. The executive committee composed of L. M. Hartson, Charles Tucker and Wilbur G. Stevens recently purchased a combination hose and chemical wagon body which Mr. Stevens is fitting to a Reo chassis. The hose wagon is to be secured later. The fire company now has twenty-seven members and Richard Wright is chief of the department. The fire limits are one and one-half miles from the fire house including North Windham, parts of the towns of Chaplin and Mansfield.

WASHINGTON MOURNS "UNCLE JOE" CANNON

stories about his swearing and gambling. Lampooned from one end of the country to the other, he merely shrugged his drooping shoulders and went back at night to the game. "Training the tariff in the afternoon and the ante at night" was one of his pet remarks, when asked how he killed time.

As speaker, Mr. Cannon knew how to control a turbulent body. Holding the gavel in his left hand—for he was left-handed—he gave the side of his desk a glancing blow that sounded like a rifle shot, and brought unruly members to attention. Curses frequently were flung at him as members surged out of the chamber, but invariably he smiled and smoothed the ruffled feelings of a member denied recognition by handing him a cigar. That was Cannon's way, and while they hated him in the open, they loved him in the lobby.

In his latter years, "Uncle Joe," standing at the entrance of the capital, heard the whirr of many airplanes, and saw a flock of machines overhead. It recalled his own part in aircraft development. Back in the days when Professor Langley was secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, he went before Mr. Cannon's committee with an estimate of needs. Always modest, the professor was about ready to pick up his papers and leave when the chairman asked if that would be all.

Langley looked at the chairman and a smile lighted his face.

"I would like to have $10,000 for experimenting with a flying machine," he said.

Cannon jumped half way out of his chair. He glared at Langley, imagining he had lost his mind.

Langley told him it was exactly that. The committee roared. Being willing, however, to take a gambler's chance, and impressed by Langley's sincerity, the chairman, without a word to other members approved the expenditure, fought for it in the house and got it.

And then, when the Langley ship fell into the Potomac river, the newspapers attacked "Uncle Joe" from Maine to the Pacific. He was cartooned as Mother Shipton riding through the air on a broom. But years later the Wright brothers took the old Langley ship from the National Museum and Mr. Cannon saw it flying over Washington.

In those days he was all energy and never shunned a fight. He got his first notoriety, as he expressed it, during a clash years ago with "Sunset" Cox, who was attacking the republican side. Cannon tried to break in for a word, but at first Cox refused to yield. Finally Cox agreed.

"And for how long?" asked Speaker Blaine.

"As long as the gentleman will keep his left hand in his pocket," Cox replied, and Cannon took the floor. He had not been speaking more than a half ten minute when the left hand came sweeping from the pocket to wave a gesticulating finger.

"There's up," shouted Cox. And it was.

The next year Cannon was cartooned over the country. It was a good joke and posters of him were stuck on every tree in his district, with the left hand out, sometimes with additional fingers sprouting from the top of his head. But Cannon said it elected him.

"Uncle Joe's" features were often said to be of the Lincoln type. From ears to chin he wore a fringe of close cropped beard, the upper lip clean shaved.

In all his political career he had but three defeats at the polls, the other two times being in races for congress. In 1872 "Uncle Joe" announced his retirement, after 46 years of service, and when congress adjourned late in september carried out a long cherished ambition to go west again over the route he traveled in his mother's arms 82 years before. He started from Washington by automobile but because of fatigue was forced to abandon the trip at Indianapolis.

"I've had enough," he said in discussing his retirement to private life. "It's 60 years since I first went to Washington, and with the exception of those two unsought vacations (referring to his two defeats), I've been there ever since. I decided to retire voluntarily," but, he added a bit wistfully, "I am just a bit sorry now."

When he first went to Washington, Mr. Cannon was induced to put $1,- 00 into a scheme for the transfusion of metal and he never saw the money after that. Later, Alexander Graham Bell, then experimenting with the telephone invited Cannon into the company "on the ground floor," but after being stung once, as he expressed it, he resisted the temptation only to see other friends take up this and other stocks to become millionaires many times over.

But Mr. Cannon's own bank and other business ventures were successful, and he amassed considerable wealth.

The fact probably has been forgotten by most publishers that it was Cannon, while a member of the post office committee, who fought for reform in the postal laws and put through the bill providing for a low rate on second class mail matter, which is still in effect. In his closing years, minded of this service, he often remarked that the newspapers, which had lampooned him, had gained much through a law giving them the right of sending their publications at less than the letter rate.

Aspired to Presidency.

In 1908, when in the glory of his rule as boss of the house, Mr. Cannon looked toward the republican nomination for the presidency. When leaders proposed that he take second place on the ticket, he refused emphatically.

The old warrior's love of children was greater than his love for cigars. He once told a friend that of the multitude of cartoons, friendly and vicious, the one he liked best pictured him as a baby in swaddling clothes, with the Lincoln fringe on his face, and the cigar in his mouth pointing skyward. The original of this cartoon, with many others presented to him by cartoonist friends, hung on the wall of his study at Danville.

"Time softens an old man's heart," he said recently, "and when I think of the house doing me such great honors, not forgetting how it once tried to tear me up and feed me to the wolves, I ought to go to my grave with a serene countenance, knowing that my heart was glad with the last faint beats."

"WIZARD" PONZI TO WAGE A NEW LEGAL BATTLE

BOSTON, Nov. 12—(AP)—Charles Ponzi, one time financial wizard, today served notice of a new legal battle to prevent his return from Texas to Massachusetts to serve a prison sentence as a "common, and notorious thief."

The attorney general's office here was notified that Ponzi, who is detained at Houston, Tex., had applied for a rehearing of a habeas corpus petition which previously was denied. Two weeks ago the criminal court of appeals in Texas upheld the action of a district court denying Ponzi's petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Ponzi then was given 10 days to file an application for rehearing.

The court set Wednesday, December 1 as the date for the hearing of the application. There will be no oral arguments On receipt of a telegram today announcing Ponzi's latest move, Assistant General Alfred R. Shrigley, who represented the commonwealth of Massachusetts at all the hearings in Texas, wired for a certificate copy of Ponzi's motion. Later he will file his brief with the clerk of the court.

It was said that if Ponzi's motion is dismissed his only remaining recourse will be to the United States supreme court.

HEAVY FINES GIVEN OUT TO LIQUOR VIOLATORS

WILLIMANTIC, Nov. 13—The September term of the criminal side of the Windham county superior court was reopened by Judge Baldwin about 10:30 o'clock Friday to dispose of four of the remaining five cases for liquor law violations. The first case was that of Stanley Kamminsky of this city, charged with one count. He pleaded guilty and received a fine of $100 and costs with a five-day suspended jail sentence.

Edgar Dupuis of Moosup pleaded guilty to four counts for sales of liquor. State's Attorney Bradford characterized Dupuis as an old offender and stated that this was his second appearance before court. On his recommendation Judge Baldwin imposed a fine of $400 on each count, making an aggregate fine of $1,600 and a jail sentence of fifteen days, a total of sixty days was imposed and suspended. Dupuis was placed on probation for one year.

Hyman Brettschneider of this city pleaded guilty to five counts of sales. Another count of keeping liquor with intent to sell was nolled. State's Attorney Bradford recommended $100 on each count and a suspended jail sentence of 25 days. He gave the information that earlier in the year Brettschneider had been fined $30 and costs on his plea of guilty and given a suspended sentence of six months in jail on a charge of keeping a gaming place. The probation sentence was for one year and as the period had not yet expired the liquor case was a violation of probation and Attorney Bradford said that the sentence should go into effect. Judge Baldwin imposed a fine of $500 with a suspended 25 day jail sentence. In the matter of the previous suspended jail sentence and probation term, Judge Baldwin ordered that the sentence take effect starting January 17, 1927, ten days before the expiration of probation.

From a pecuniary standpoint the case of Gideon N. Lamitre of Putnam charged with several counts of liquor law vilations to which he has admitted his guilt, was the record breaker of the series, a fine of $3,000 and costs being imposed. State's Attorney Bradford explained that Lamaitre, who is a druggist in Putnam, is a cripple in addition to other physical ailments that have weakened him to such an extent that assistance is needed in getting dressed. As far as the state was concerned it was Lamaitre's first offense. The accused could not be in court due to his condition but had admitted his guilt. The case was ordered nolled on payment of $3 000 without any jail sentence.

Frank Cournoyer of Plainfield was last of the number to be put to plea. Attorney Bradford stated that the defendant already had a liquor violation case appealed to the superior court, he having been fined in the Plainfield town court in September. For the more recent offense Cournoyer was charged with three counts which plus two from the previous case made a total of five to which he pleaded guilty. He was fined $100 on each of the five counts and given a suspended jail sentence of 15 days.

Judge Baldwin then adjourned court, the civil side to resume Friday morning, November 19, at 10:15 o'clock. A grand total of $13,100 in fines, with costs, has been received this week from the thirteen liquor law violators brought before the criminal side.

The jury will be summoned Tuesday, November 23rd to hear cases on the present civil term of the Windham county superior court, it was announced at the civil side session held in this city at 10:15 o'clock Friday morning. Judge Alfred C. Baldwin was on the bench. The attorneys were notified that jury cases should be disposed of next week if possible. There are eight cases on the jury list and these were reviewed but none were claimed for next week. Three cases claimed by attorneys for the week of November 23 were: George R. Edgerton doing business under the name of Harvey Seed Company vs. H. A. Buck Co.; Mary Rossati, Admn. vs. Herbert J. Lane et al, and Alfred Rooney vs. Charles Robitaille. These cases were assigned for Tuesday, November 23, in the order given and Friday of next week one or two cases not claimed will be assigned to follow these. The case of Anna T. McCarthy vs. The New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, which was to have been heard by jury, was claimed by the attorney for the plaintiff for the week of November 30. The date of hearing for this case was deferred by Judge Baldwin.

Attorney Voss for the defendant was granted an assignment for Friday November 19th in the case of Amelia A. Welch vs. Florence R. Sherman. In the Chlebus, a writ for divorce, Attorney Voss announced that the plaintiff side case of Catherine Chlebus vs. Andrew was ready but Attorney Kelly for the defense explained that the defendant was in Poland and had made application to the Polish government to return to this country to contest the action. The court granted a continuance without set date. The case of Samuel J. Turcotte vs. The State Department of Health et al. was continued. A decree of divorce on the grounds of intolerable cruelty was granted by Judge Baldwin in the uncontested divorce action of Delia Zaretzski vs. Joseph Zaretzski.

The next case taken up was that of John I. Hammond of Clarks' Corner vs. George E. Lummis, a replevin action brought by Hammond to recover a "grandfather's clock," from the possession o fthe defendant who was administrator of the estate of the late Frank C. Lummis, the latter a brother of the administrator. Hammond claimed that the clock had been in his family for over two centuries. His aunt married Frank C. Lummis several years ago and took the clock into her household with an understanding that it was to come into the possession of the plaintiff in the event of her death She died previous to her husband and when the latter died several months ago the plaintiff demanded the clock but it was refused him. The replevin suit was then brought and the clock is now in possession of a third party residing in Chaplin. Testifying for the plaintiff were, Lucy C. Swarkhamer, Merritt Welch, Eglenny Welch and Ella Welch. The defense requested a motion for non-suit but this was denied. No testimony was given by the defense and it was agreed to have the attorneys file briefs in the case to be handed to the court Friday of next week.

A one and one-half story frame house near South Chaplin Bridge, owned by David H. Clark of Orangeburg, N. Y., was destroyed by fire of unknown origin early Friday morning. The house was used as a temporary office and storehouse by L. H. McLaughlin of New London, who is constructing the new concrete bridge at the Chaplin Dizzy Dell over the Natchaug river. It is understood that a fire was burning in the office stove the previous day but workmen extinguished it before leaving their labors. There was no one in the building when the fire broke out about three o'clock in the morning. Tools and equipment owned by Contractor McLaughlin were destroyed. It is said that included in the lost articles are valuable papers belonging to the contractor and a valuable instrument owned by Robert E Kelly of this city, one of the state engineers at work on the bridge. Insurance to the amount of $700 was carried in the house.

Organized four months ago, the North Windham fire department is rapidly acquiring equipment and when the next year dawns the village will be pointing with swelling chest at its new and inestimably valuable fire department. Generous responses have been made to subscription papers passed around in North Windham and sections of the towns of Chaplin and Mansfield and the fund has been increased substantially through several well-patronized dances staged by the firemen. The new fire house, a wooden building of two stories, and 30 by 50 feet, with an ornamental roof, is now under course of construction of land of L. M. Hartson, company opposite Moore's store on the Windham Center road. A combination hose and chemical wagon and a hose wagon will be placed on the main floor and the upper is arranged as a parlor and meeting place. The executive committee composed of L. M. Hartson, Charles Tucker and Wilbur G. Stevens recently purchased a combination hose and chemical wagon body which Mr. Stevens is fitting to a Reo chassis. The hose wagon is to be secured later. The fire company now has twenty-seven members and Richard Wright is chief of the department. The fire limits are one and one-half miles from the fire house including North Windham, parts of the towns of Chaplin and Mansfield.

A truck load of edibles of every description and over $200 in cash was received in donation day for St. Joseph's hospital this week, the generous contributions coming from townspeople, business firms and many school children, all of whom have received the gratitude of the hospital authorities.

Funeral services for Mrs. Eva Spycka were held from the family home on South street Friday morning with a high mass of requiem in St. Joseph's church at nine o'clock. Rev. Paul J. Bartlewski officiated at the home services and also was celebrant of the requiem mass. Mrs. Henry Mathieu was soloist at the service. Burial was in the Goleb plot at St. Joseph's cemetery where Rev. Father Bartlewski read a committal prayer. The bearers were, Frank Smigaen, Walter George, William Szuyka and John Mardus.

Mrs. Mary E. LaFleur, 51, died at her home, 218 Valley street, Friday morning after a lingering illness. She was born in Montreal, P. WASHINGTON MOURNS "UNCLE JOE" CANNON stories about his swearing and gambling. Lampooned from one end of the country to the other, he merely shrugged his drooping shoulders and went back at night to the game. "Raising the tariff in the afternoon and the ante at night" was one of his pet remarks, when asked how he killed time.

As speaker, Mr. Cannon knew how to control a turbulent body. Holding the gavel in his left hand—for he was left-handed—he gave the slab of his desk a glancing blow that sounded like a rifle shot, and brought unruly members to attention. Curses frequently were flung at him as members surged out of the chamber, but invariably he smiled and smoothed the ruffled feelings of a member denied recognition by handing him a cigar. That was Cannon's way, and while they hated him in the chair, they loved him in the lobby.

In his latter years, "Uncle Joe," standing at the entrance of the capital, heard the whirr of many airplanes, and saw a flock of machines overhead. It recalled his own part in aircraft development. Back in the days when Professor Langley was secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, he went before Mr. Cannon's committee with an estimate of needs. Always modest, the professor was about ready to pick up his papers and leave when the chairman asked if that would be all.

"I would like to have $10,000 for experimenting with a flying machine," he said.

Cannon jumped half way out of his chair. He glared at Langley, imagining he had lost his mind.

"Great Heavens," he shouted. "A flying machine to ride up in the air?"

Langley told him it was exactly that. The committee roared. Being willing, however, to take a gambler's chance, and impressed by Langley's sincerity, the chairman, without a word to other members approved the expenditure, fought for it in the house and got it.

And then, when the Langley ship fell into the Potomac river, the newspapers attacked "Uncle Joe" from Maine to the Pacific. He was cartooned as Mother Shipton riding through the air on a broom. But years later the Wright brothers took the old Langley ship from the National Museum and Mr. Cannon saw it flying over Washington.

In those days he was all energy and never shunned a fight. He got his first notoriety, as he expressed it, during a clash years ago with "Sunset" Cox, who was attacking the republican side. Cannon tried to break in for a word, but at first Cox refused to yield. Finally Cox agreed.

"And for how long?" asked Speaker Blaine.

"As long as the gentleman will keep his left hand in his pocket," Cox replied, and Cannon took the floor. He had not been speaking more than a half the minute when the left hand came sweeping from the pocket to wave a gesticulating finger.

"Time's up," shouted Cox, and it was.

The next year Cannon was cartooned over the country. It was a good joke and posters of him were stuck on every tree in his district, with the left hand out, sometimes with additional fingers sprouting from the top of his head. But Cannon said it elected him.

"Uncle Joe's" features were often said to be of the Lincoln type. From ears to chin he wore a fringe of close cropped beard, the upper lip clean shaved.

In all his political career he had but three defeats at the polls, the other two times being in races for congress. In 1872 "Uncle Joe" announced his retirement, after 46 years of service, and when congress adjourned late in september carried out a long cherished ambition to go west again over the route he traveled in his mother's arms 83 years before. He started from Washington by automobile but because of fatigue was forced to abandon the trip at Indianapolis.

"I've had enough," he said in discussing his retirement to private life. "It's 59 years since I first went to Washington, and with the exception of those two unsought vacations (referring to his two defeats), I've been there ever since. I decided to retire voluntarily," but, he added a bit wistfully, "I am just a bit sorry now."

When he first went to Washington, Mr. Cannon was induced to put $1,-00 into a scheme for the transfusion of metal and he never saw the money after that. Later, Alexander Graham Bell, then experimenting with the telephone invited Cannon into the company "on the ground floor," but after being stung once, as he expressed it, he resisted the temptation, only to see other friends take up this and other stocks to become millionaires many times over.

But Mr. Cannon's own bank and other business ventures were successful, and he amassed considerable wealth.

The fact probably has been forgotten by most publishers that it was Cannon, while a member of the post office committee, who fought for reform in the postal laws and put through the bill providing for a low rate on second class mail matter, which is still in effect. In his closing years, mindful of this service, he often remarked that the newspapers, which had lampooned him, had gained much through a law giving them the right of sending their publications at less than the latter rate.

Aspired to Presidency.

In 1908, when in the glory of his rule as boss of the House, Mr. Cannon looked toward the republican nomination for the presidency. When leaders proposed that he take second place on the ticket, he refused emphatically.

The old warrior's love of children was greater than his love for cigars. He once told a friend that of the multitude of cartoons, friendly and vicious, the one he liked best pictured him as a baby in swaddling clothes, with the Lincoln-fringe on his face, and the cigar in his mouth pointing skyward. The original of this cartoon, with many others presented to him by cartoonist friends, hung on the wall of his study at Danville.

"Time softens an old man's heart," he said recently, "and when I think of the house doing me such great honors, not forgotting how it once tried to tear me up and feed me to the wolves, I ought to go to my grave with a serene countenance, knowing that my heart was glad with the last faint beats."

"WIZARD" PONZI TO WAGE A NEW LEGAL BATTLE

BOSTON, Nov. 13—(AP)—Charles Ponzi, one time financial wizard, today served notice of a new legal battle to prevent his return from Texas to Massachusetts to serve a prison sentence as a "common, and notorious thief."

The attorney general's office here was notified that Ponzi, who is detained at Houston, Tex., had applied for a rehearing of a habeas-corpus petition which previously was denied. Two weeks ago the criminal court of appeals in Texas upheld the action of a district court denying Ponzi's petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Ponzi then was given 10 days to file an application for rehearing.

The court set Wednesday, December 1 as the date for the hearing of the application. There will be no oral arguments. On receipt of a telegram today announcing Ponzi's latest move, Assistant General Alfred R. Shringley, who represented the commonwealth of Massachusetts at all the hearings in Texas, wired for a certificate copy of Ponzi's motion. Later he will file his brief with the clerk of the court.

It was said that if Ponzi's motion is dismissed his only remaining recourse will be to the United States supreme court.

DANIELSON

ACTIVE SEASON PLANNED BY LOCAL SERVICE BATTERY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Nov. 13.—With improvements that have been underway at the state armory for shy months completed, the Service battery is now engaged on plans for late fall and winter activities. The battery plans a number of social and athletic events for the cold weather season. Its entertainment committee is made up of First Sergeant Emil Meunier, Corporal Armand Bishop and includes Corporal G. Rene Caron of the Headquarters detachment which has quarters in the armory. The athletic committee is headed by Lieut. Gordon J. Gale and includes Sergeant Ralph D. Brundage of the battery and Staff Sergeant Lucien Lambert of the Headquarters detachment. The two outfits will have a basketball team under the management of Sergeant Lambert.

Those who visit the armory now and have not seen it since the repairs and interior alterations and improvements were undertaken will be surprised at the changes that have been accomplished. The big drill shed is done in white and is spotless. All of the woodwork of the interior has been painted. A series of rooms has been built along the balcony at the east end of the building, these furnishing locker rooms and supply rooms for the Headquarters detachment, which is under the command of Major E. L. Darble, and for non-commissioned officers of the Service battery. Plumbing and electrical equipment have received attention during the course of the work done in the building with funds provided through an appropriation by the legislature of 1925.

What formerly was a locker room for the men at the right of the main entrance has been transformed into a club room for the enlisted men. The lockers have been removed to a new location in the basement.

The armory is now in better condition and more conveniently appointed than at any time since it was built, about 30 years ago.

Through its committee made up of Attorney Harry E. Back, Mrs. W. F. Bidwell and Miss Marion D. A recent death of a resident of Brooklyn, Mrs. Minnie Safford Frink, wife of Marshal J. Frink, was a particularly sad event for her relatives and her many friends. She was a daughter of Albert and Clarissa Philipe Safford and was born in the town of Canterbury. In that town in 1893 she was married to Marshal J. Frink and they continued to make their home there until they purchased a home on Wolf Den drive in Brooklyn six years ago and came there to live. Mrs. Frink was prominent in the social and religious life of Brooklyn.

On Tuesday of last week Mrs. Frink was taken to the Day Kimball hospital at Putnam and on the following day underwent a major surgical operation. She appeared to be doing very well until Saturday night, when her condition became critical and she died early Sunday morning. The funeral services were held at Brooklyn Wednesday, Rev. John R. Pratt of the Brooklyn Congregational church and Rev. C. J. Armstrong of the Danielson Baptist church officiating. Burial was in the family lot in the South cemetery at Brooklyn. S., who has been in charge of the affairs of the parish for the past three years. Father Mollard comes here from St. Joseph's parish at Fitchburg. He is a capable and experienced administrator, but one of the missionaries of the Order of La Salette not familiar to the members of this parish, where the LaSalette fathers have labored with such outstanding success for the past 30 years. Father Mollard will have the same faithful co-operation from the parishioners that has marked previous pastorates here and which have made possible the development of the splendid parish property.

Mystery still lingers over the appearance of oil in a well at the home of Mrs. Lydia Bartlett at East Killingly. Some of the oil that has been recovered from the surface of the water in the well has been put to practical household uses by Mrs. Bartlett. This oil burns as does any other good oil. It accumulates on the top of the water in the well and does not prohibit the use of water pumped into the home from the bottom of the well for whatever water is wanted for in the home.
